the taxpayer and the last annuitant under the plan are jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable to pay a part of the annuitant's tax under this Part for the year of the annuitant's death equal to that proportion of the amount by which the annuitant's tax for the year is greater than it would have been if it were not for the operation of subsection 146(8.8) that the total of all amounts each of which is an amount determined under paragraph (b) in respect of the taxpayer is of the amount included in computing the annuitant's income because of that subsection, but nothing in this subsection limits the liability of the annuitant under any other provision of this Act or of the taxpayer for the interest that the taxpayer is liable to pay under this Act on an assessment in respect of the amount that the taxpayer is liable to pay because of this subsection.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 116(1), will amend the closing words of subsec. 160.2(1) to read as above, applicable to assessments made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 160.2(1) provides that a taxpayer who receives benefits out of another person's registered retirement savings plan is jointly and severally liable for the portion of that other person's tax that is attributable to those benefits. Subsection 160.2(2) provides a similar result with respect to benefits received out of another person's registered retirement income fund. The Minister may assess the taxpayer for such a liability under subsection 160.2(3).

Subsections 160.2(1), (2) and (3) are amended, in respect of assessments made after December 20, 2002, to clarify that the assessment is subject to interest, without any limit on the amount of interest for which the taxpayer may be liable. [This overrules Algoa Trust, [1998] 4 C.T.C. 2001 (TCC), and Currie, [2009] 1 C.T.C. 2139 (TCC), decided under 160(1), although Zen, [2010] 6 C.T.C. 28 (FCA) (leave to appeal denied 2011 CarswellNat 47 (SCC)) suggests the amendment may not be needed — ed.]

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-500R: RRSPs — death of an annuitant.

(2) Joint and several liability in respect of amounts received out of or under RRIF — Where

(a) an amount is received out of or under a registered retirement income fund by a taxpayer other than an annuitant (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146.3(1)) under the fund, and

(b) that amount or part thereof would, but for paragraph 146.3(5)(a), be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the year of receipt pursuant to subsection 146.3(5), the taxpayer and the annuitant are jointly and severally liable to pay a part of the annuitant's tax under this Part for the year of the annuitant's death equal to that proportion of the amount by which the annuitant's tax for the year is greater than it would have been if it were not for the operation of subsection 146.3(6) that the amount determined under paragraph (b) is of the amount included in computing the annuitant's income by virtue of that subsection, but nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to limit the liability of the annuitant under any other provision of this Act.

Proposed Amendment — 160.2(2) closing words

the taxpayer and the annuitant are jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable to pay a part of the annuitant's tax under this Part for the year of the annuitant's death equal to that proportion of the amount by which the annuitant's tax for the year is greater than it would have been if it were not for the operation of subsection 146.3(6) that the amount determined under paragraph (b) is of the amount included in computing the annuitant's income because of that subsection, but nothing in this subsection limits the liability of the annuitant under any other provision of this Act or of the taxpayer for the interest that the taxpayer is liable to pay under this Act on an assessment in respect of the amount that the taxpayer is liable to pay because of this subsection.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 116(2), will amend the closing words of subsec. 160.2(2) to read as above, applicable to assessments made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 160.2(1) closing words.

Proposed Addition — 160.2(2.1), (2.2)

(2.1) Joint and several liability in respect of a qualifying trust annuity — If a taxpayer is deemed by section 75.2 to have received at any time an amount out of or under an annuity that is a qualifying trust annuity with respect to the taxpayer, the taxpayer, the annuitant under the annuity and the policyholder are jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable to pay the part of the taxpayer's tax under this Part for the taxation year of the taxpayer that includes that time that is equal to the amount, if any, determined by the formula

A is the amount of the taxpayer's tax under this Part for that taxation year; and

B is the amount that would be the taxpayer's tax under this Part for that taxation year if no amount were deemed by section 75.2 to have been received by the taxpayer out of or under the annuity in that taxation year.

Related Provisions: 160.2(2.2) — No limitation on liability; 160.2(5) — Rules applicable when (2.1) applies.

(2.2) No limitation on liability — Subsection (2.1) limits neither

(a) the liability of the taxpayer referred to in that subsection under any other provision of this Act; nor

(b) the liability of an annuitant or policyholder referred to in that subsection for the interest that the annuitant or policyholder is liable to pay under this Act on an assessment in respect of the amount that the annuitant or policyholder is liable to pay because of that subsection.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 116(3), will add subsecs. 160.2(2.1) and (2.2), applicable to assessments made after 2005.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 160.2(2.1) applies to annuities that are "qualifying trust annuities" with respect to a taxpayer (as defined in new subsection 60.011(2)).

A distinguishing feature of a qualifying trust annuity with respect to a taxpayer is that the annuitant thereunder is a trust under which the taxpayer is a beneficiary. Such an annuity will typically be acquired and held either by the trust that is the annuitant under the annuity, or by the estate of a deceased spouse, common-law partner, parent or grandparent of the taxpayer which acquired the annuity with proceeds received from a registered retirement savings plan or registered retirement income fund of the deceased individual or from a registered pension plan in which the deceased individual participated.

Where the cost of a qualifying trust annuity with respect to a taxpayer is deductible by the taxpayer under paragraph 60(l) and the taxpayer has not died before 2006, new section 75.2 deems amounts payable out of or under the annuity after 2005 and before the taxpayer's death to have been received by the taxpayer. Section 75.2 also deems the taxpayer to have received, immediately before death, an amount out of or under the annuity equal to the fair market value of the annuity. By virtue of paragraph 56(1)(d.2), the taxpayer is required to include these amounts in computing income under Part I.

New subsection 160.2(2.1) provides that, where a taxpayer is deemed by section 75.2 to have received an amount from a qualifying trust annuity, the annuitant and the policyholder (which may be one and the same) are jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable for the portion of the taxpayer's tax that is attributable to the amounts that the taxpayer is deemed to have received from the annuity. The Minister of National Revenue may reassess the annuitant and the policyholder for such a liability under subsection 160.2(3).

New subsection 160.2(2.2) provides that the provisions of new subsection 160.2(2.1), which make the annuitant and policyholder of a "qualifying trust annuity" with respect to a taxpayer (as defined in new subsection 60.011(2)) jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable for a portion of the taxpayer's tax, do not limit the liability of the taxpayer under any provision of the Act. It also provides that there is no limitation on the liability of the annuitant or policyholder for the interest for which the annuitant or policyholder is liable under the Act on an assessment in respect of an amount that the annuitant or policyholder is liable to pay because of subsection 160.2(2.1).

(3) Minister may assess recipient — The Minister may at any time assess a taxpayer in respect of any amount payable by virtue of this section and the provisions of this Division are applicable, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of an assessment made under this section as though it had been made under section 152.

Proposed Amendment — 160.2(3)

(3) Assessment — The Minister may at any time assess a taxpayer in respect of any amount payable because of this section, and the provisions of this Division (including, for greater certainty, the provisions in respect of interest payable) apply, with any modifications that the circumstances require, in respect of an assessment made under this section as though it had been made under section 152 in respect of taxes payable under this Part.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 116(4), will amend subsec. 160.2(3) to read as above, applicable to assessments made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 160.2(1) closing words.

(4) Rules applicable — Where a taxpayer and an annuitant have, by virtue of subsection (1) or (2), become jointly and severally liable in respect of part or all of a liability of the annuitant under this Act, the following rules apply:

Proposed Amendment — 160.2(4) opening words

(4) Rules applicable — If a taxpayer and an annuitant have, by virtue of subsection (1) or (2), become jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable in respect of part or all of a liability of the annuitant under this Act, the following rules apply:

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

(a) a payment by the taxpayer on account of the taxpayer's liability shall to the extent thereof discharge the joint liability; but

Proposed Amendment — 160.2(4)(a)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), subsec. 230(2), will amend para. 160.2(4)(a) by substituting "their liability" for "the joint liability", to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

(b) a payment by the annuitant on account of the annuitant's liability only discharges the taxpayer's liability to the extent that the payment operates to reduce the annuitant's liability to an amount less than the amount in respect of which the taxpayer was, by subsection (1) or (2), as the case may be, made jointly and severally liable.

Proposed Amendment — 160.2(4)(b)

(b) a payment by the annuitant on account of the annuitant's liability discharges the taxpayer's liability only to the extent that the payment operates to reduce the annuitant's liability to an amount less than the amount in respect of which the taxpayer was, by subsection (1) or (2), as the case may be, made jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), subsec. 230(3), will amend para. 160.2(4)(b) to read as above, to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

Proposed Addition — 160.2(5)

(5) Rules applicable — qualifying trust annuity — If an annuitant or policyholder has, because of subsection (2.1), become jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable with a taxpayer in respect of part or all of a liability of the taxpayer under this Act, the following rules apply:

(a) a payment by the annuitant on account of the annuitant's liability, or by the policyholder on account of the policyholder's liability, shall to the extent of the payment discharge their liability, but

(b) a payment by the taxpayer on account of the taxpayer's liability only discharges the annuitant's and the policyholder's liability to the extent that the payment operates to reduce the taxpayer's liability to an amount less than the amount in respect of which the annuitant and the policyholder were, by subsection (2.1), made liable.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 116(5), will add subsec. 160.2(5), applicable to assessments made after 2005.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 160.2(5) provides that a payment by the annuitant or policyholder of a "qualifying trust annuity" with respect to a taxpayer (as defined in new subsection 60.011(2)), on account of the annuitant's or policyholder's joint liability for a portion of the taxpayer's tax, directly reduces the joint liability to the extent of the payment. However, a payment by the taxpayer on account of the taxpayer's tax liability reduces the joint liability of the annuitant and the policyholder only to the extent that the payment reduces the total liability of the taxpayer to an amount that is less than the amount in respect of which the annuitant and policyholder were made jointly liable under subsection 160.2(2.1).

160.21 (1) Joint and several liability — registered disability savings plan — Where, in computing income for a taxation year, a taxpayer is required to include an amount in respect of a disability assistance payment (as defined in subsection 146.4(1)) that is deemed by subsection 146.4(10) to have been made at any particular time from a registered disability savings plan, the taxpayer and each holder (as defined in subsection 146.4(1)) of the plan immediately after the particular time are jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable to pay the part of the taxpayer's tax under this Part for that taxation year that is equal to the amount, if any, determined by the formula

where

A is the amount of the taxpayer's tax under this Part for that taxation year; and

B is the amount that would be the taxpayer's tax under this Part for that taxation year if no disability assistance payment were deemed by subsection 146.4(10) to have been paid from the plan at the particular time.

Related Provisions: 160.21(2) — No limitation on liability; 160.21(3) — Discharge of holder's liability; 160.21(4) — Assessment.

(2) No limitation on liability — Subsection (1) limits neither

(a) the liability of the taxpayer referred to in that subsection under any other provision of this Act, nor

(b) the liability of any holder referred to in that subsection for the interest that the holder is liable to pay under this Act on an assessment in respect of the amount that the holder is liable to pay because of that subsection.

(3) Rules applicable — registered disability savings plans — Where a holder (as defined in subsection 146.4(1)) of a registered disability savings plan has, because of subsection (1), become jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable with a taxpayer in respect of part or all of a liability of the taxpayer under this Act, the following rules apply:

(a) a payment by the holder on account of the holder's liability shall to the extent of the payment discharge the holder's liability, but

(b) a payment by the taxpayer on account of the taxpayer's liability only discharges the holder's liability to the extent that the payment operates to reduce the taxpayer's liability to an amount less than the amount in respect of which the holder was, by subsection (1), made liable.

(4) Assessment — The Minister may at any time assess a taxpayer in respect of any amount payable because of this section, and the provisions of this Division (including, for greater certainty, the provisions in respect of interest payable) apply, with any modifications that the circumstances require, in respect of an assessment made under this section as though it had been made under section 152 in respect of taxes payable under this Part.

160.3 (1) Liability in respect of amounts received out of or under RCA trust — Where an amount required to be included in the income of a taxpayer by virtue of paragraph 56(1)(x) is received by a person with whom the taxpayer is not dealing at arm's length, that person is jointly and severally liable with the taxpayer to pay a part of the taxpayer's tax under this Part for the taxation year in which the amount is received equal to the amount by which the taxpayer's tax for the year exceeds the amount that would be the taxpayer's tax for the year if the amount had not been received, but nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to limit the liability of the taxpayer under any other provision of this Act.

(2) Minister may assess recipient — The Minister may at any time assess a person in respect of any amount payable by the person by virtue of this section and the provisions of this Division are applicable, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of an assessment made under this section as though it had been made under section 152.

160.3 (1) Liability in respect of amounts received out of or under RCA trust — If an amount required to be included in the income of a taxpayer because of paragraph 56(1)(x) is received by a person with whom the taxpayer is not dealing at arm's length, that person is jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable with the taxpayer to pay a part of the taxpayer's tax under this Part for the taxation year in which the amount is received equal to the amount by which the taxpayer's tax for the year exceeds the amount that would be the taxpayer's tax for the year if the amount had not been received, but nothing in this subsection limits the liability of the taxpayer under any other provision of this Act or of the person for the interest that the person is liable to pay under this Act on an assessment in respect of the amount that the person is liable to pay because of this subsection.

(2) Assessment — The Minister may at any time assess a person in respect of any amount payable because of this section, and the provisions of this Division (including, for greater certainty, the provisions in respect of interest payable) apply, with any modifications that the circumstances require, in respect of an assessment made under this section as though it had been made under section 152 in respect of taxes payable under this Part.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 160.3(1) provides that a person who receives benefits from a retirement compensation arrangement that relate to another taxpayer's employment is jointly and severally liable for the portion of that other taxpayer's tax that is attributable to such benefits. The Minister of National Revenue may assess the person for such a liability under subsection 160.3(2) of the Act. Subsections 160.3(1) and (2) are amended, in respect of assessments made after December 20, 2002, to clarify that such an assessment is subject to interest, without any limit on the amount of interest for which the person may be liable. 160.4 (1) Liability in respect of transfers by insolvent corporations — If property is transferred at any time by a corporation to a taxpayer with whom the corporation does not deal at arm's length at that time and the corporation is not entitled because of subsection 61.3(3) to deduct an amount under section 61.3 in computing its income for a taxation year because of the transfer or because of the transfer and one or more other transactions, the taxpayer is jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable with the corporation to pay the lesser of the corporation's tax payable under this Part for the year and the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the property at that time exceeds the fair market value at that time of the consideration given for the property, but nothing in this subsection limits the liability of the corporation under any other provision of this Act or of the taxpayer for the interest that the taxpayer is liable to pay under this Act on an assessment in respect of the amount that the taxpayer is liable to pay because of this subsection.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 118(1), will amend subsec. 160.4(1) to read as above, applicable to assessments made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 160.4(1) applies where a transfer of property has been made by a corporation and, as a consequence of the transfer (or the transfer combined with other transactions), the corporation is precluded under subsection 61.3(3) from deducting an amount under section 61.3. Where this is the case, the transferee is jointly and severally liable with the transferor under subsection 160.4(1) for the transferor's tax under Part I of the Act for the first taxation year of the transferor that ends after the time of the transfer and for preceding taxation years. The liability of the transferee applies up to the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the property at the time of the transfer exceeds the fair market value of the consideration given for the property transferred.

In addition, subsection 160.4(2) provides for joint and several liability of subsequent non-arm's length transferees for the corporation's Part I tax if the original transferee makes a further non-arm's length transfer and one of the reasons that the transfer was made was to prevent the enforcement of section 160.4.

Under subsection 160.4(3), the Minister of National Revenue may assess a transferee for a liability arising under subsections 160.4(1) or (2).

Subsections 160.4(1), (2) and (3) are amended, in respect of assessments made after December 20, 2002, to clarify that such an assessment is subject to interest, without any limit on the amount of interest for which the transferee may be liable. [This overrules Algoa Trust, [1998] 4 C.T.C. 2001 (TCC), and Currie, [2009] 1 C.T.C. 2139 (TCC), decided under 160(1), although Zen, [2010] 6 C.T.C. 28 (FCA) (leave to appeal denied 2011 CarswellNat 47 (SCC)) suggests the amendment may not be needed — ed.]

Related Provisions: 160(3.1) — Fair market value of undivided interest in property.

(2) Indirect transfers — Where

(a) property is transferred at any time from a taxpayer (in this subsection referred to as the "transferor") to another taxpayer (in this subsection referred to as the "transferee") with whom the transferor does not deal at arm's length,

(b) the transferor is liable because of subsection (1) or this subsection to pay an amount of the tax of another person (in this subsection referred to as the "debtor") under this Part, and

(c) it can reasonably be considered that one of the reasons of the transfer would, but for this subsection, be to prevent the enforcement of this section, the transferee is jointly and severally liable with the transferor and the debtor to pay an amount of the debtor's tax under this Part equal to the lesser of the amount of such tax that the transferor was liable to pay at that time and the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the property at that time exceeds the fair market value at that time of the consideration given for the property, but nothing in this subsection limits the liability of the debtor or the transferor under any provision of this Act.

Proposed Amendment — 160.4(2) closing words

the transferee is jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable with the transferor and the debtor to pay an amount of the debtor's tax under this Part equal to the lesser of the amount of that tax that the transferor was liable to pay at that time and the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the property at that time exceeds the fair market value at that time of the consideration given for the property, but nothing in this subsection limits the liability of the debtor or the transferor under any provision of this Act or of the transferee for the interest that the transferee is liable to pay under this Act on an assessment in respect of the amount that the transferee is liable to pay because of this subsection.

S. 53 of the draft legislation provides that any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that ends before the day on which the draft legislation is assented to and would, in the absence of this section, be precluded because of subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act shall be made to the extent necessary to take into account this amendment, if the taxpayer

Proposed Amendment — Extension of s. 161.1 to individuals

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, Feb. 28, 2000: Offsetting of Interest on Personal Tax Overpayments and Underpayments

(23) That, for individuals other than trusts, the taxable amount of refund interest accruing over any period after 1999 on overpayments of income tax be reduced by the amount of any arrears interest accruing over the same period on unpaid income tax.

Federal budget, supplementary information, Feb. 28, 2000: Offsetting of Interest on Personal Tax Overpayments and Underpayments

An individual who has made an overpayment of income tax may be entitled to receive refund interest from the government on the overpayment. Refund interest is included in income for tax purposes, in the same manner as interest from other sources.

If, on the other hand, an individual has failed to pay an amount of income tax when due, the individual is required to pay arrears interest to the government. Arrears interest is not deductible in computing a taxpayer's income for tax purposes.

The taxation of refund interest and non-deductibility of arrears interest can produce inappropriate results in situations where an individual who owes interest on unpaid tax from one taxation year is concurrently owed interest on a tax overpayment from a different taxation year. In this circumstance, the cost of the non-deductible interest payable by the individual exceeds the after-tax value of the taxable interest receivable by the individual. In many instances, this difference results from the non-deductibility of interest paid and the inclusion in income of interest received.

This budget proposes a relieving mechanism for these individuals. Refund interest accruing over a period will be taxable only to the extent that it exceeds any arrears interest that accrued over the same period to which the refund interest relates. As under current practice, the individual's notice of assessment will indicate the full amount of refund interest. In addition, the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency will issue an information slip indicating the amount, if any, of the refund interest that must be included in the individual's income for tax purposes.

This measure will apply to individuals other than trusts in respect of arrears and refund interest amounts that accrue concurrently after 1999, regardless of the taxation year to which the amounts relate.

Dept. of Finance news release 2000-101 Backgrounder, Dec. 21, 2000: Offset Interest

The 2000 budget proposed an interest offset mechanism in respect of overpayments and underpayments of tax by individuals. The Department of Finance and the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency are working to develop a mechanism under which this proposal can be given effect, for implementation at the earliest opportunity.

(d) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.2, 5% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of property transferred or loaned (determined as of the time of the transfer or loan) because of which there would, if no other transfer or loan were taken into account, be an obligation to file the return,

Proposed Amendment — 162(10.1)A(d)

(d) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.2 in respect of a trust, 5% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the time it was made, of a contribution of the person or partnership made to the trust before the end of the last taxation year of the trust in respect of which the return is required,

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), subsec. 16(2), will amend para. (d) of the description of A in subsec. 162(10.1) to read as above, applicable to returns in respect of taxation years that end after 2006, and to returns in respect of an earlier taxation year of a taxpayer if subsec. 94(3), as amended, applies to that earlier taxation year of the taxpayer.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 162(10.1) imposes a penalty on any person or partnership that is more than 24 months late in filing an information return that the person or partnership was required to file under any of sections 233.1

to 233.4. This penalty applies in addition to the penalties imposed under subsections 162(7) and (10).

The penalty imposed under subsection 162(10.1) with respect to a particular information return is equal to a specified amount less the amount of the penalties imposed under subsections 162(7) and (10) with respect to the return. The specified amount with respect to an information return for a trust required to be filed by a person or partnership under section 233.2 is equal to 5% of the total fair market value of any property transferred or loaned to the trust that, if no other loan or transfer were taken into account, would have imposed an obligation on the person or partnership to file the return.

Amendments are made to paragraph 162(10.1)(d) in the English version of the Act and to paragraph 162(10.1)(c) of the French version of the Act.

Subsection 162(10.1) is amended, as a consequence of amendments made to section 233.2, by changing the manner in which the specified amount is determined. The specified amount is now to be determined with reference to the fair market value of "contributions" made by the person or partnership to the trust.

(e) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.3 for a taxation year or fiscal period, 5% of the greatest of all amounts each of which is the total of the cost amounts to the person or partnership at any time in the year or period of a specified foreign property (as defined by subsection 233.3(1)) of the person or partnership, and

(f) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.4 for a taxation year or fiscal period in respect of a foreign affiliate of the person or partnership, 5% of the greatest of all amounts each of which is the total of the cost amounts to the person or partnership at any time in the year or period of a property of the person or partnership that is a share of the capital stock or indebtedness of the affiliate, and

B is the total of the penalties to which the person or partnership is liable under subsections (7) and (10) in respect of the return.

Related Provisions: 162(7) — Initial calculation of penalty; 162(10.11) — Application to trust contribution; 162(10.2) — Shares or debt owned by controlled foreign affiliate; 162(10.3) — Application to partnership; 162(10.4) — Application to non-resident trust; 163(2.4)–(2.91) — Penalty for false statement or omission in return; 233.2(4.1) — Foreign arrangements similar to trusts; 233.5 — Due diligence defence to penalty; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 162(10.1) added by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 51(3), applicable to returns required to be filed on or before a day that is after April 29, 1998.

CRA Audit Manual: 15.7.5: Foreign reporting requirements — penalties.

Proposed Addition — 162(10.11)

(10.11) Application to trust contributions — In paragraph (d) of the description of A in subsection (10.1), subsections 94(1), (2) and (9) apply.

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), subsec. 16(3), will add subsec. 162(10.11), applicable to returns in respect of taxation years that end after 2006, and to returns in respect of an earlier taxation year of a taxpayer if subsec. 94(3), as amended, applies to that earlier taxation year of the taxpayer.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsection 162(10.11) provides that, for the purpose of the calculation in subsection 162(10.1), the definitions and rules in subsections 94(1), (2) and (9) generally apply. Subsection 162(10.11) is similar to amended subsection 233.2(2), described in greater detail in the commentary [to 233.2 — ed.].

(10.2) Shares or debt owned by controlled foreign affiliate — For the purpose of paragraph (f) of the description of A in subsection (10.1),

(a) shares or indebtedness owned by a controlled foreign affiliate of a person or partnership are deemed to be owned by the person or partnership; and

(b) the cost amount at any time of such shares or indebtedness to the person or partnership is deemed to be equal to 20% of the cost amount at that time to the controlled foreign affiliate of the shares or indebtedness.

Related Provisions: 162(10.3) — Application to partnerships; 162(10.4) — Application to non-resident trusts.

History: Subsec. 162(10.2) added by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 51(3), applicable to returns required to be filed on or before a day that is after April 29, 1998.

(10.3) Application to partnerships — For the purposes of paragraph (f) of the description of A in subsection (10.1) and subsection (10.2), in determining whether a non-resident corporation or trust is a foreign affiliate or a controlled foreign affiliate of a partnership,

(a) the definitions "direct equity percentage" and "equity percentage" in subsection 95(4) shall be read as if a partnership were a person; and

(b) the definitions "controlled foreign affiliate" and "foreign affiliate" in subsection 95(1) shall be read as if a partnership were a taxpayer resident in Canada.

History: Subsec. 162(10.3) added by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 51(3), applicable to returns required to be filed on or before a day that is after April 29, 1998.

(10.4) Application to non-resident trusts — For the purposes of this subsection, paragraph (f) of the description of A in subsection (10.1) and subsection (10.2),

(a) a non-resident trust is deemed to be a controlled foreign affiliate of each beneficiary of which the trust is a controlled foreign affiliate for the purpose of section 233.4;

(b) the trust is deemed to be a non-resident corporation having a capital stock of a single class divided into 100 issued shares;

(c) each beneficiary under the trust is deemed to own at any time the number of the issued shares of the corporation that is equal to the proportion of 100 that

(i) the fair market value at that time of the beneficiary's beneficial interest in the trust is of

(ii) the fair market value at that time of all beneficial interests in the trust; and

(d) the cost amount to a beneficiary at any time of a share of the corporation is deemed to be equal to the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the fair market value at that time of the beneficiary's beneficial interest in the trust, and

B is the number of shares deemed under paragraph (c) to be owned at that time by the beneficiary in respect of the corporation.

(11) Effect of subsequent events — For the purpose of computing a penalty under subsection (1) or (2) in respect of a person's return of income for a taxation year, the person's tax payable under this Part for the year shall be determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for the year.

History: Subsec. 162(11) amended by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 51(4), applicable to 1996 et seq. Subsec. (11) formerly read:

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 163(2) imposes a penalty where a taxpayer knowingly, or in circumstances amounting to gross negligence, participates in or makes a false statement for the purposes of the Act. Paragraph 163(2)(c.1) imposes a penalty where the false statement relates to the goods and services tax credit (GSTC).

The GSTC provisions were amended (S.C. 2002, chapter 9, formerly Bill C-49) to make the credit more responsive to changes in family circumstances by providing that the eligibility to the credit and the amount paid in each quarter reflect such changes that occurred before the end of the preceding quarter rather than in the preceding taxation year.

Paragraph 163(2)(c.1) is amended to reflect the new quarterly calculation of the GSTC.

(d) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that would be deemed by subsection 127.1(1) to be paid for the year by the person if that amount were calculated by reference to the information provided in the return or form filed for the year pursuant to that subsection

(e) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that would be deemed by subsection 127.41(3) to have been paid for the year by the person if that amount were calculated by reference to the person's claim for the year under that subsection

exceeds

(ii) the maximum amount that the person is entitled to claim for the year under subsection 127.41(3),

(f) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that would be deemed by subsection 125.4(3) to have been paid for the year by the person if that amount were calculated by reference to the information provided in the return filed for the year pursuant to that subsection

(b) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.2 in respect of a trust, the greater of

(i) $24,000, and

(ii) 5% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the time it was made, of a contribution of the person or partnership made to the trust before the end of the last taxation year of the trust in respect of which the return is required;

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), subsec. 17(1), will amend para. 163(2.4)(b) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after 2006, and to returns in respect of an earlier taxation year of a taxpayer if subsec. 94(3), as amended, applies to that earlier taxation year of the taxpayer.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 163(2.4) imposes a penalty on any person or partnership that, knowingly or under circumstances amounting to gross negligence, has made or has participated in, assented to, or acquiesced in, the making of a false statement or omission in a return required to be filed under any of sections 233.1 to 233.6. The penalty under paragraph 163(2.4)(b) relates to a return required to be filed under section 233.2. The existing penalty is the greater of $24,000 and 5% of the total fair market value of the property that the person or partnership loaned or transferred to the trust that gave rise to the obligation to file.

Paragraph 163(2.4)(b) is amended as a consequence of changes made to the non-resident trust rules in section 94 and the annual reporting requirement in respect of non-resident trusts under section 233.2. Under amended section 233.2, a person is subject to the annual reporting requirement where the person makes a "contribution" to the trust.

Accordingly, amended paragraph 163(2.4)(b) provides for a penalty for a person equal to the greater of $24,000 and a specified amount in respect of the return. The specified amount for a person is essentially equal to 5% of the fair market value of "contributions" made by the person. The specified amount is calculated in the same way as the specified amount under amended subsection 162(10.1) in respect of late-filed returns. Under new subsection 163(2.41), the definitions and rules in subsections 94(1), (2) and (9) generally apply. Subsection 163(2.41) is similar to amended subsection 233.2(2), described in greater detail in the commentary [to 233.2 — ed.].

These amendments apply to returns in respect of taxation years that end after 2006. They also apply to returns in respect of an earlier taxation of a taxpayer (e.g., a trust, beneficiary under the trust or contributor to the trust) if new subsection 94(3) applies (because of a valid election by the trust under the coming-into-force provision for new section 94) to that earlier taxation year of the taxpayer.

(c) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.3 for a taxation year or fiscal period, the greater of

(i) $24,000, and

(ii) 5% of the greatest of all amounts each of which is the total of the cost amounts to the person or partnership at any time in the year or period of a specified foreign property (as defined by subsection 233.3(1)(a)) of the person or partnership in respect of which the false statement or omission is made;

(d) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.4 for a taxation year or fiscal period, the greater of

(i) $24,000, and

(ii) 5% of the greatest of all amounts each of which is the total of the cost amounts to the person or partnership at any time in the year or period of a property of the person or partnership that is a share of the capital stock or indebtedness of the foreign affiliate in respect of which the return is being filed; and

(e) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.6 for a taxation year or fiscal period, the greater of

(i) $2,500, and

(ii) 5% of the total of

(A) all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a property that is distributed to the person or partnership in the year or period by the trust and in respect of which the false statement or omission is made, and

(B) all amounts each of which is the greatest unpaid principal amount of a debt that is owing to the trust by the person or partnership in the year or period and in respect of which the false statement or omission is made.

Proposed Amendment — 163.2(10)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 11, 2000:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of February 4, 2000 concerning our meeting of November 4, 1999 regarding the 1999 budget proposal to introduce a civil penalty in respect of misrepresentations of tax matters by third parties. As you may know, the legislation implementing this proposal received Royal Assent on June 29, 2000 (i.e., S.C. 2000, c. 19).

Your letter replies to our request for input from the [xxx] on the appropriate prescribed percentages for the purpose of establishing a deviation range under new subsection 163.2(10) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). In your letter, you have indicated that the Institute has concluded that, if a percentage threshold is to-be set by the government, it should be the 200% test adopted by the U.S. under section 6700 of the Internal Revenue Code (the "IRC"). The Institute is also of the view that providing separate prescribed percentages for different industries would be inappropriate because it would be unworkable from a practical perspective — diversifications and business combinations defeat industry classification.

We agree with your observation that it may be impractical to have prescribed percentages that differ for various industries. However, we remain of the view that the deviation range established by prescribed percentages should be narrower than that which would exist under a range that is based upon a 200% standard.

It is our understanding that the U.S. 200% test for gross overstatements results in an automatic application of the penalty under section 6700 of the IRC, subject only to an exception for valuations for which there is a reasonable basis, which were made in good faith and then only if the Secretary of the Treasury waives the penalty under the authority of subsection 6700(b)(2) of the IRC. In contrast, section 163.2 of the Act merely provides a reverse onus. That is to say, in the case of valuations outside of the range, the onus is on the valuator to establish to the Minister of National Revenue or the judiciary that the valuation was reasonable in the circumstances, was made in good faith and was not based on a misleading assumption. The Canadian approach favours Canadian valuators.

The objective of the reverse onus rule in the Canadian provisions is to ensure that valuators and tax shelter promoters justify a substantial deviation from actual value. We would expect that a bona fide professional valuator would be prepared to substantiate that a particular valuation is reasonable in the circumstances (regardless of whether it is, on an ex post facto basis, proven to be inaccurate), that the valuation was made in good faith and that it is not based upon misleading assumptions. In this regard, therefore, it would be inappropriate to permit valuators to refuse to justify valuations that are proven to be inaccurate by a wide margin.

We anticipate a deviation range for all valuations that is narrower than 200%. However, consideration will be given within this parameter as to whether the deviation range for valuations used in a non-tax shelter context should differ from valuations used in a tax-shelter context and, if so, the appropriate percentages. If you wish to make further presentations to the Department on this issue, please contact Mr. Kerry Harnish at (613) 992-4385.

Finally, you should be aware that we intend to recommend that the percentages, which are "prescribed" for the purpose of applying new subsection 163.2(10) of the Act, be effective only for statements made after the day on which they are announced.

Thank you again for bringing your concerns to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(i) if the person's gross entitlements in respect of the activity are greater at that later time, the assessment of the penalty made at that later time is deemed to be an assessment of a separate penalty, and

(ii) in any other case, the notice of assessment of the penalty sent before that later time is deemed not to have been sent;

(b) a person's gross entitlements at any time in respect of a planning activity or a valuation activity, in the course of which the person makes or furnishes, participates in the making of or causes another person to make or furnish a false statement, shall exclude the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a penalty (other than a penalty the assessment of which is void because of subsection (13)) determined under paragraph (3)(a) in respect of the false statement for which notice of the assessment was sent to the person before that time; and

(c) where a person is assessed a penalty that is referred to in subsection (4), the person's gross compensation at any time in respect of the false statement that could be used by or on behalf of the other person shall exclude the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a penalty (other than a penalty the assessment of which is void because of subsection (13)) determined under subsection (5) to the extent that the false statement was used by or on behalf of that other person and for which notice of the assessment was sent to the person before that time.

Related Provisions: 163.2(4) — Meaning of "other person".

(13) Assessment void — For the purposes of this Act, if an assessment of a penalty that is referred to in subsection (2) or (4) is vacated, the assessment is deemed to be void.

(b) the total amount of the penalties to which the person is liable at that time under subsection (4) in respect of the statement.

(15) Employees — Where an employee (other than a specified employee or an employee engaged in an excluded activity) is employed by the other person referred to in subsections (2) and (4),

(a) subsections (2) to (5) do not apply to the employee to the extent that the false statement could be used by or on behalf of the other person for a purpose of this Act; and

(b) the conduct of the employee is deemed to be that of the other person for the purposes of applying subsection 163(2) to the other person.

Proposed Addition — 164(1.51)–(1.53)

(1.51) When subsec. (1.52) applies — Subsection (1.52) applies to a taxpayer for a taxation year if, at any time after the beginning of the year

(a) the taxpayer has, in respect of the tax payable by the taxpayer under this Part (and, if the taxpayer is a corporation, Parts I.3, VI, VI.1 and XIII.1) for the year, paid under any of sections 155 to 157 one or more instalments of tax;

(b) it is reasonable to conclude that the total amount of those instalments exceeds the total amount of taxes that will be payable by the taxpayer under those Parts for the year; and

(c) the Minister is satisfied that the payment of the instalments has caused or will cause undue hardship to the taxpayer.

(1.52) Instalment refund — If this subsection applies to a taxpayer for a taxation year, the Minister may refund to the taxpayer all or any part of the excess referred to in paragraph (1.51)(b).

Related Provisions: 164(1.51) — Conditions for 164(1.52) to apply; 164(1.53) — Refunded instalment deemed not paid for penalty/interest purposes.

(1.53) Penalties, interest not affected — For the purpose of the calculation of any penalty or interest under this Act, an instalment is deemed not to have been paid to the extent that all or any part of the instalment can reasonably be considered to have been refunded under subsection (1.52).

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 121(1), will add subsecs. 164(1.51)–(1.53), in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsections 164(1.51) to (1.53), which apply on Royal Assent, allow the Minister of National Revenue to refund excessive instalment amounts paid on account of a taxpayer's tax liability. In order for such a refund to be made, four conditions must be met. Three of these are set out in new subsection 164(1.51). First, the taxpayer must have paid one or more instalments of tax under Part I or, where the taxpayer is a corporation, Part I.3, VI, VI.1 or XIII.1 of the Act. Second, it must be reasonable to conclude that the total amount of the instalments the taxpayer has paid exceeds the total amount of taxes payable by the taxpayer under those Parts for the year. Third, the Minister must be satisfied that the payment of the instalments has caused or will cause the taxpayer undue hardship.

The last condition is implied in new subsection 164(1.52). The availability of an instalment refund in a particular case is a matter of the Minister's discretion. The final condition is therefore that the Minister agree to make the refund. Similarly, new subsection 164(1.52) makes it clear that the amount of any instalment refund is to be decided by the Minister: the Minister may refund all or any part of an excessive instalment.

New subsection 164(1.53) provides that, for the purposes of computing interest and penalties, a taxpayer that receives an instalment refund is treated as not having paid the instalment to that extent.

(1.6) Refund of UI premium tax credit — Notwithstanding subsection (1), where an overpayment on account of a taxpayer's liability under this Part is deemed to have arisen under subsection 126.1(6) or (7), the Minister shall, with all due dispatch, refund the amount of the overpayment without application for it.

Proposed Repeal — 164(1.6)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 121(2), will repeal subsec. 164(1.6), applicable after March 20, 2003.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 164(1.6) provides rules concerning refunds of the UI premium tax credit. This subsection is repealed consequential to the repeal of section 126.1. For additional information, see the commentary to section 126.1.

Related Provisions: 164(3) — No interest on refund.

History: Subsec. 164(1.6) added by 1994, c. 8, subsec. 27(1), applicable after 1992.

History: Subsec. 164(1.7) added by 1994, c. 8, subsec. 164(1.7), applicable from May 12, 1994.

(1.8) Request to pay refund to province — An individual (other than a trust) may, in the individual's return of income for a taxation year, request the Minister to pay to Her Majesty in right of a prescribed province all or any part of a refund for the year claimed by the individual in the return and, where the individual makes such a request,

(a) the Minister may make the payment to Her Majesty in right of the province in accordance with the request; and

(b) the amount of the payment is deemed to have been refunded under this section to the individual at the time a notice of an original assessment of tax payable under this Part by the individual for the year, or a notification that no tax is payable under this Part by the individual for the year, is sent to the individual.

Related Provisions: 241(4)(m) — Disclosure of information by CRA to prescribed province.

History: Subsec. 164(1.8) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 190(3), applicable to requests made in returns of income for 1997 et seq. taxation years filed after 1997.

Subsec. 190(12) of the said c. 19 provides that for the purpose of applying subsec. 164(1.8), Ontario is deemed to be a prescribed province until the Income Tax Regulations are amended to prescribe a province for the purpose of subsec. 164(1.8).

Regulations: None yet, but s. 190(12) of the 1995-97 technical bill (1998, c. 19) deems Ontario to be a prescribed province until Regulations are provided. Ontario is to be prescribed in the Regulations (Department of Finance Technical Notes, Dec. 1997).

(2) Application to other debts — Instead of making a refund or repayment that might otherwise be made under this section, the Minister may, where the taxpayer is, or is about to become, liable to make any payment to Her Majesty in right of Canada or in right of a province, apply the amount of the refund or repayment to that other liability and notify the taxpayer of that action.

> (2) Instead of making a refund or repayment that might otherwise be made under this section, the Minister may, where the taxpayer is liable or about to become liable to make any payment to Her Majesty in right of Canada, apply the amount of the refund or repayment to that other liability and notify the taxpayer of that action.

Subsec. 164(2) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 136(2), to substitute "to Her Majesty in right of Canada" for "under this Act", and "other debts" for "other taxes" in the heading.

(2.01) Withholding of refunds — The Minister shall not, in respect of a taxpayer, refund, repay, apply to other debts or set-off amounts under this Act at any time unless all returns of which the Minister has knowledge and that are required to be filed by the taxpayer at or before that time under this Act, the Air Travellers Security Charge Act, the Excise Act, 2001 and the Excise Tax Act have been filed with the Minister.

> (2.1) Where an amount deemed under section 122.5 to be paid by an individual during a month specified for a taxation year is, in accordance with subsection (2), applied to a liability of the individual, for the purposes of that subsection, the amount shall, to the extent that it is so applied, be deemed to be paid on the latest of

> (c) where the individual's return of income for the year or the individual's prescribed form for the year referred to in subsection 122.5(3) is filed after the day on or before which the return is required to be filed, the day the amount is applied.

(2.2) Application respecting refunds re section 122.61 [Child Tax Benefit] — Subsection (2) does not apply to a refund to be made to a taxpayer and arising because of section 122.61 except to the extent that the taxpayer's liability referred to in that subsection arose from the operation of paragraph 160.1(1)(a) with respect to an amount refunded to the taxpayer in excess of the amount to which the taxpayer was entitled because of section 122.61.

(a) where the child was under 6 years of age at the end of the preceding taxation year and no amount was deducted under section 63 for that year in respect of any child of the individual under 6 years of age at the end of that year, the total of the amounts of $559[20] and $200[20] referred to in paragraph 122.2(1)(a), and

(b) in any other case, $559[20],

in respect of the child, and

Proposed Repeal — 170(2)

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, s. 48, will repeal subsec. 170(2), in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Section 170 requires the transmittal of certain documents between the Tax Court of Canada and the Commissioner of Revenue.

Subsection 170(2) provides generally that, when a notice of appeal to the Tax Court of Canada under the Informal Procedure is received, the Commissioner of Revenue must transmit to the Tax Court of Canada copies of certain documents that are relevant to the appeal.

The requirements under subsection 170(2) are unnecessary since rules for the transmittal of documents to the Tax Court of Canada are provided under the Tax Court of Canada Act. Consequently, subsection 170(2) is repealed.

History: Subsec. 170(2) amended to substitute "Commissioner of Revenue" for "Commissioner of Customs and Revenue" by 2005, c. 38, subpara. 140(e)(ii), proclaimed in force December 12, 2005.

"Deputy Minister of National Revenue" substituted for "Deputy Minister of National Revenue for Taxation" in subsec. 170(2) by 1994, c. 13, subsec. 7(1), applicable May 12, 1994.

(2), (3) [Repealed under former Act]

(4) [Repealed]

Proposed Addition — 171(2)-(4)

(2) Partial disposition of appeal — If an appeal raises more than one issue, the Tax Court of Canada may, with the consent in writing of the parties to the appeal, dispose of a particular issue by

(a) dismissing the appeal with respect to the particular issue; or

(b) allowing the appeal with respect to the particular issue, and

(i) varying the assessment, or

(ii) referring the assessment back to the Minister for reconsideration and reassessment.

Technical Notes: Section 171 relates to the authority of the Tax Court of Canada (the Tax Court) to dispose of appeals made to the Tax Court.

Where an appeal raises a number of issues, new subsection 171(2) authorizes the Tax Court to hear and dispose of one or more of those issues separately if the parties to the appeal consent, in writing, to the separate hearing and disposition.

Related Provisions: 171(3) — Disposal of remaining issues; 171(4) — Appeal of specific issue to Federal Court of Appeal.

(3) Disposal of remaining issues — If a particular issue has been disposed of under subsection (2), the appeal with respect to the remaining issues may continue.

Technical Notes: Where the Tax Court has disposed of an issue(s) pursuant to subsection 171(2), new subsection 171(3) allows the appeal procedure at the Tax Court to continue on the remaining issues. Parties to the appeal are not required to recommence procedures, such as by filing of a new notice of objection with the Minister under section 165, or a new notice of appeal to the Tax Court, on the remaining issues.

(4) Appeal to Federal Court of Appeal — If the Tax Court of Canada has disposed of a particular issue under subsection (2), the parties to the appeal may, in accordance with the provisions of the Tax Court of Canada Act or the Federal Courts Act, as they relate to appeals from decisions of the Tax Court of Canada, appeal the disposition to the Federal Court of Appeal as if it were a final judgment of the Tax Court of Canada.

Technical Notes: Where the Tax Court has disposed of an issue(s) pursuant to subsection 171(2), new subsection 171(4) allows the parties to appeal the disposition of the Tax Court to the Federal Court of Appeal, in accordance with the provisions of the Tax Court of Canada Act or the Federal Courts Act, while the remaining issues continue to be dealt with at the Tax Court.

Application: The June 8, 2012 draft legislation, s. 13, will add subsecs. 171(2) to (4), applicable with respect to issues disposed of by the Tax Court of Canada after Royal Assent.

Proposed Amendment — 174(1)

(1) Common questions — The Minister may apply to the Tax Court of Canada for a determination of a question if the Minister is of the opinion that the question is common to assessments or proposed assessments in respect of two or more taxpayers and is a question of law, fact or mixed law and fact arising out of

(a) one and the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences; or

Application: The June 8, 2012 draft legislation, s. 14, will amend subsec. 174(1) to read as above, applicable in respect of applications made after Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Section 174 provides rules relating to the joining of two or more taxpayers to the determination of a question by the Tax Court. Section 174 is amended to extend the circumstances under which the Minister of National Revenue (the Minister) may apply for such a determination, for applications made to the Tax Court after Royal Assent to the enacting legislation.

Currently, under subsection 174(1), the Minister may apply to the Tax Court to determine a question arising out of one and the same transaction or occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences, if the question is common to assessments or proposed assessments of two or more taxpayers.

Subsection 174(1) is amended to allow the Tax Court, on application by the Minister, to also hear a question arising out of substantially similar transactions or occurrences or series of transactions or occurrences. Under subsection 174(3), as amended, the Tax Court may bind taxpayers named in the application to an appeal of another taxpayer if, for example, their income tax filings raise issues that arise from transactions or occurrences identical or substantially similar to those relevant to the appeal. The questions put before the Tax Court will be restricted to the common issues, allowing other issues, if any, to be dealt with independently.

Dept. of Finance news release 2012-065, June 8, 2012: Government Releases for Consultation Draft Legislative Proposals to Improve the Caseload Management of the Tax Court of Canada

The Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, and the Honourable Rob Nicholson, Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada, today released for consultation draft legislative proposals to improve the caseload management of the Tax Court of Canada.

The draft legislation released today would implement the proposals that were released for consultation on November 10, 2011 [see news release below — ed.]. It takes into consideration comments received from stakeholders.

The draft legislative proposals would:

- Update the monetary limits for access to the informal appeal procedure [Tax Court of Canada Act s. 18(1) — ed.].

  Under this monetary limit proposal, a taxpayer could elect to proceed by way of the Tax Court's Informal Procedure where the total amount in issue in an income tax appeal does not exceed $25,000 (or where a loss does not exceed $50,000). Also, under the new monetary limit for Goods and Services Tax/Harmonized

Sales Tax (GST/HST) appeals, an appeal involving an amount in dispute in excess of $50,000 would be required to proceed by way of the General Procedure.

- Certain procedural rule changes, which complement the introduction of the $50,000 limit for GST/HST appeals and align the rules for GST/HST appeals more closely with the rules that govern income tax appeals, are also included in the draft legislative proposals [amendments to Tax Court of Canada Act s. 17.3 — ed.]. As well, some procedural rule changes are proposed [TCCA ss. 18.30021–18.30024 and others — ed.] to harmonize the rules for excise duty appeals with the rules that have already been proposed to govern GST/HST appeals.
- Remove the requirement for the Tax Court of Canada to deal with all issues raised in an appeal of an assessment together, thus allowing some issues to be disposed of independently and enabling the Minister of National Revenue to give effect to the decision of the Court in respect of those discrete issues [171(2)–(4) — ed.].
- Permit the Tax Court of Canada to hear a question affecting a group of two or more taxpayers that arises out of substantially similar transactions, and provide that the resulting judicial determination is binding on each taxpayer in the group [174(1) (4.2) — ed.]

These proposals would apply after Royal Assent to a bill implementing the required legislative amendments. Explanatory notes for the draft amendments to the Income Tax Act are included with the legislative proposals.

Stakeholders can provide their comments on the draft legislation to the Department of Finance by e-mail <ConsultationsTCC-CCI@fin.gc.ca> or by mail at Tax Policy Branch — Court Caseload Consultation, Department of Finance, 140 O'Connor Street, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0G5. The closing date for submissions is July 9, 2012. Once received by the Department of Finance, all submissions will be subject to the Access to Information Act and may be disclosed in accordance with its provisions.

Backgrounder: Proposals to Improve the Caseload Management of the Tax Court of Canada

To improve the caseload management of the Tax Court of Canada ("Tax Court"), amendments to the Tax Court of Canada Act and the Income Tax Act are proposed.

Monetary Limits

The Tax Court of Canada Act [TCCA — ed.] provides for two procedures available to a taxpayer who wishes to appeal a tax assessment: the Informal Procedure and the General Procedure.

The Informal Procedure reduces costs and delays in appeals heard by the Tax Court. As well, the Informal Procedure rules provide for a simpler, less formal, appeal process in the Tax Court: for example, although the notice of appeal must set out, in general terms, the reasons for the appeal and the relevant facts, no special form is required [TCCA s. 18.15(1) — ed.]; the taxpayer may be represented by an agent who is not a lawyer [TCCA s. 18.14 — ed.]; the Tax Court is not bound by any legal or technical rules of evidence in conducting the hearing [TCCA s. 18.15(3) — ed.]; and the decisions have no precedential effect [TCCA s. 18.28, although the decisions are in practice considered in subsequent appeals — ed.]. Also, generally, the taxpayer is not ordered by the Court to pay any part of the Crown's costs if unsuccessful in their appeal [Tax Court of Canada Rules (Informal Procedure) s. 10(2) — ed.].

The Tax Court of Canada Act currently restricts access to the Informal Procedure, in the case of appeals under the Income Tax Act, to appeals where the aggregate of all amounts in issue is equal to or less than $12,000 (or where a loss does not exceed $24,000) [TCCA s. 18(1) — ed.]. In the case of an income tax appeal that involves an amount in excess of these limits, the appeal must proceed by way of the General Procedure, unless the taxpayer elects to limit the appeal to $12,000 (or to $24,000 for a loss) [TCCA s. 18.12 — ed.].

The monetary limits for appeals under the Income Tax Act under the Informal Procedure have remained unchanged since 1993. In order to promote greater access to the Tax Court at lower cost, it is proposed to increase the limit for the aggregate of all amounts in issue to $25,000 from $12,000 in respect of Informal Procedure appeals (and to increase the limit for a loss determination to $50,000 from $24,000).

The Tax Court of Canada Act would also be amended [TCCA s. 18.27(a), (b) — ed.] to allow the Governor in Council to make regulations to further increase the limit for the aggregate of all amounts in issue to a maximum of $50,000 (and to $100,000 for a loss) for Informal Procedure appeals under the Income Tax Act.

In addition, amendments are proposed with respect to limits on examinations for discovery, in order to reduce the overall costs of litigation. Currently, for appeals where the aggregate of all amounts in issue is $25,000 or less [TCCA s. 17.3(1) — ed.], an oral examination for discovery may not be conducted unless the parties consent or the Tax Court orders an oral examination for discovery. It is proposed to increase this amount to $50,000 from $25,000.

Unlike appeals under the Income Tax Act, the Tax Court of Canada Act does not currently require the use of the General Procedure for appeals above a monetary limit in the case of goods and services tax/harmonized sales tax (GST/HST) appeals under Part IX of the Excise Tax Act. In order to achieve a better balance between General Procedure and Informal Procedure caseloads, it is proposed to introduce a $50,000 limit for Informal Procedure appeals to the Tax Court in respect of GST/HST appeals. Accordingly, when an appeal involves an amount in dispute in excess of $50,000, the appeal would be required to proceed by way of the General Procedure [TCCA s. 18.3001(c)(ii) — ed.].

Pro-Tanto Judgments

Under the existing law, a taxpayer may appeal an assessment of tax for a particular taxation year. Where the assessment involves more than one issue, all such issues must be dealt with within a single appeal.

There are instances where it would be to the benefit of the taxpayer, the Minister of National Revenue ("Minister") and the Tax Court to allow the Tax Court to dispose of one or more such issues separately. Having a disposition of a particular issue (a "pro-tanto judgment" — that is, a judgment that disposes of part, but not all, of an appeal) apart from other issues in the appeal would enable a more efficient workflow for the Tax Court and would allow taxpayers to better manage their appeals. For example, an appeal may deal with multiple issues that are unrelated and varying in complexity. In such cases, a complex issue could be dealt with in isolation from the remainder, leading to an earlier resolution of the more straightforward issues.

The proposed amendments to the Income Tax Act [171(2) — ed.] would allow the Tax Court to dispose of a particular issue where both the parties to the appeal and the Tax Court agree that a particular issue should be dealt with separately.

Where some, but not all, of the issues are determined by the Tax Court, the Minister could issue a reassessment concerning those issues (even though all outstanding issues for the particular taxation year have not been resolved) and the appeal procedure at the Tax Court would continue on the remaining issues [171(3) — ed.]. Parties would not be required to recommence procedures, such as by the filing of a new notice of objection with the Minister, or a new notice of appeal to the Tax Court, on the remaining issues.

Taxpayers would be able to appeal the disposition of the particular issue to the Federal Court of Appeal while the remaining issues continue to be dealt with at the Tax Court [171(4) — ed.].

Common Questions

In recent years, the Tax Court has seen an increase in the number of appeals where issues and facts that are common to two or more taxpayers are repeatedly litigated [including many tax shelter appeals — ed.]

Currently, under section 174 of the Income Tax Act, the Minister may apply to the Tax Court to determine certain questions arising out of "one and the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences" which are common to the assessment of two or more taxpayers. The resulting judicial determination is binding on all of the taxpayers named in the application. Taxpayers that oppose the grouping of their appeals are allowed to object to the application in the Tax Court and, if unsuccessful, may appeal to the Federal Court of Appeal.

Not all common questions arise out of "one and the same" transaction, but rather out of identical or substantially similar transactions. Accordingly, it is proposed to amend the Income Tax Act to allow, on application by the Minister, the Tax Court to also hear a question arising out of identical or substantially similar transactions and cause the resulting judicial determination to be binding across the group [174(1)(b) — ed.]. The proposed measure would allow the Tax Court to bind taxpayers whose income tax filings raise issues identical or substantially similar to a lead court case. The questions put before the Tax Court would be restricted to the common issues, allowing other issues, if any, to be dealt with independently.

The Crown and any taxpayer who has filed an appeal from an assessment in the Tax Court, would be permitted to appeal the determination to the Federal Court of Appeal [174(4.1) — ed.]. Any other taxpayers named in the determination would be permitted to appeal a determination of the substantive question, only if they were granted leave by a judge of the Federal Court of Appeal [174(4.1)(b)(iii) — ed.].

Taxpayers bound by the determination by the Tax Court would also be bound by a subsequent decision of the Federal Court of Appeal [174(4.2) — ed.].

It is also proposed that the Income Tax Act be amended to specify that the Minister can serve notice of the application by way of regular mail [174(2)(b)(i) — ed.] or may seek direction from the Tax Court as to alternate means of service [174(2)(b)(ii) — ed.]. Currently, the Income Tax Act requires that a copy of an application be served by the Minister on each of the taxpayers named in the application and, by virtue of Rule 24 of the Tax Court of Canada Rules (General Procedure), service must be effected personally or by registered mail. Allowing the Minister to serve notice of the application by way of regular mail is more practical given the potentially large numbers of taxpayers involved. Also, there may be situations where service is more easily effected in a different manner; accordingly discretion will be provided to the Tax Court.

Application Date

These proposals, as modified to take into account the public consultations, would apply upon the passage of a bill implementing the required legislative amendments.

Dept. of Finance news release 2011-116, Nov. 10, 2011: Government Invites Comments on Proposals to Improve the Caseload Management of the Tax Court of Canada

The Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, and the Honourable Rob Nicholson, Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada, today invited stakeholders to comment on proposals to improve the caseload management of the Tax Court of Canada.

The proposals would:

- Update the monetary limits for access to the informal appeal procedure, providing taxpayers with greater access to a simplified and cost-effective judicial process and enabling a better balance in the Tax Court of Canada's caseload. Under this proposal, a taxpayer could elect to proceed by way of Informal Procedure where the aggregate of all amounts in issue in an income tax appeal is equal to or less than $25,000 (or where a loss does not exceed $50,000). Also, under a new monetary limit for GST/HST appeals, an appeal involving an amount in dispute in excess of $50,000 would be required to proceed by way of the General Procedure.
- Allow the Tax Court of Canada to dispose of issues raised in an appeal of an assessment separately, so that some issues can be resolved independently from others and to allow the Minister of National Revenue to give effect to the decision of the Court in respect of those discrete issues.
- Permit the Tax Court of Canada to hear a question affecting a group of two or more taxpayers that arises out of substantially similar transactions, and provide that the resulting judicial determination is binding across the group.

Stakeholders can provide their comments to the Department of Finance <ConsultationsTCC-CCI@fin.gc.ca> or by mail to the address below. The closing date for submissions is December 16, 2011. Draft legislation to give effect to these proposals may also be released during this consultation period. Once received by the Department of Finance, all submissions will be subject to the Access to Information Act and may be disclosed in accordance with its provisions. Should you express an intention that your submission be considered confidential, the Department will make all efforts to protect this information within the requirements of the law.

Backgrounder: Proposals to Improve the Caseload Management of the Tax Court of Canada

To improve the caseload management of the Tax Court of Canada ("Tax Court"), amendments to the Tax Court of Canada Act and the Income Tax Act are proposed.

Monetary Limits

The Tax Court of Canada Act provides for two procedures available to a taxpayer who wishes to appeal a tax assessment: the Informal Procedure and the General Procedure.

The Informal Procedure reduces costs and delays in appeals heard by the Tax Court. As well, the Informal Procedure rules provide for a simpler, less formal, appeal process in the Tax Court; for example, although the notice of appeal must set out, in general terms, the reasons for the appeal and the relevant facts, no special form is required; the taxpayer may be represented by an agent who is not a lawyer; the Tax Court is not bound by any legal or technical rules of evidence in conducting the hearing; and the decisions have no precedential effect. Also, generally, the taxpayer is not ordered by the Court to pay any part of the Crown's costs if unsuccessful in their appeal.

The Tax Court of Canada Act currently restricts access to the Informal Procedure, in the case of appeals under the Income Tax Act, to appeals where the aggregate of all amounts in issue is equal to or less than $12,000 (or where a loss does not exceed $24,000). In the case of an income tax appeal that involves an amount in excess of these limits, the appeal must proceed by way of the General Procedure, unless the taxpayer elects to limit the appeal to $12,000 (or to $24,000 for a loss).

The monetary limits for appeals under the Income Tax Act under the Informal Procedure have remained unchanged since 1993. In order to promote greater access to the Tax Court at lower cost, it is proposed to increase the limit for the aggregate of all amounts in issue to $25,000 from $12,000 in respect of Informal Procedure appeals (and to increase the limit for a loss determination to $50,000 from $24,000).

The Tax Court of Canada Act would also be amended to allow the Governor in Council to make regulations to further increase the limit for the aggregate of all amounts in issue to a maximum of $50,000 (and to $100,000 for a loss) for Informal Procedure appeals under the Income Tax Act.

In addition, amendments are proposed with respect to limits on examinations for discovery, in order to reduce the overall costs of litigation. Currently, for appeals where the aggregate of all amounts in issue is $25,000 or less, an oral examination for discovery may not be conducted unless the parties consent or the Tax Court orders an oral examination for discovery. It is proposed to increase this amount to $50,000 from $25,000.

Unlike appeals under the Income Tax Act, the Tax Court of Canada Act does not currently require the use of the General Procedure for appeals above a monetary limit in the case of goods and services tax/harmonized sales tax (GST/HST) appeals under Part IX of the Excise Tax Act. In order to achieve a better balance between General Procedure and Informal Procedure caseloads, it is proposed to introduce a $50,000 limit for Informal Procedure appeals to the Tax Court in respect of GST/HST appeals. Accordingly, when an appeal involves an amount in dispute in excess of $50,000, the appeal would be required to proceed by way of the General Procedure.

Pro-Tanto Judgments

Under the existing law, a taxpayer may appeal an assessment of tax for a particular taxation year. Where the assessment involves more than one issue, all such issues must be dealt with within a single appeal.

There are instances where it would be to the benefit of the taxpayer, the Minister of National Revenue ("Minister") and the Tax Court to allow the Tax Court to dispose of one or more such issues separately. For example, an appeal may deal with multiple issues that are unrelated and varying in complexity. In such cases, a complex issue could be dealt with in isolation from the remainder, leading to an earlier resolution of the more straightforward issues.

The proposed amendments to the Income Tax Act would allow the Tax Court to dispose of a particular issue where both the parties to the appeal and the Tax Court agree that a particular issue should be dealt with separately.

Where some, but not all, of the issues are determined by the Tax Court, the Minister could issue a reassessment concerning those issues (even though all outstanding issues for the particular taxation year have not been resolved) and the appeal procedure at the Tax Court would continue on the remaining issues. Parties would not be required to recommence procedures, such as by the filing of a new notice of objection with the Minister, or a new notice of appeal to the Tax Court, on the remaining issues.

Taxpayers would be able to appeal the disposition of the particular issue to the Federal Court of Appeal while the remaining issues continue to be dealt with at the Tax Court.

Common Questions

In recent years, the Tax Court has seen an increase in the number of appeals where issues and facts that are common to two or more taxpayers are repeatedly litigated.

Currently, under section 174 of the Income Tax Act, the Minister may apply to the Tax Court to determine certain questions arising out of "one and the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences" which are common to the assessment of two or more taxpayers. The resulting judicial determination is binding on all of the taxpayers named in the application. Taxpayers that oppose the grouping of their appeals are allowed to object to the application in the Tax Court and, if unsuccessful, may appeal to the Federal Court of Appeal.

Not all common questions arise out of "one and the same" transaction, but rather out of identical or substantially similar transactions. Accordingly, it is proposed to amend the Income Tax Act to allow, on application by the Minister, the Tax Court to also hear a question arising out of identical or substantially similar transactions and cause the resulting judicial determination to be binding across the group. The proposed measure would allow the Tax Court to bind taxpayers whose income tax filings raise issues identical or substantially similar to a lead court case. Any other taxpayers named in the determination would be permitted to appeal a determination of the substantive question, only if they were granted leave by a judge of the Federal Court of Appeal.

Taxpayers bound by the determination by the Tax Court would also be bound by a subsequent decision of the Federal Court of Appeal.

It is also proposed that the Income Tax Act be amended to specify that the Minister can serve notice of the application by way of regular mail or may seek direction from the Tax Court as to alternate means of service. Currently, the Income Tax Act requires that a copy of an application be served by the Minister on each of the taxpayers named in the application and, by virtue of Rule 24 of the Tax Court of Canada Rules (General Procedure), service must be effected personally or by registered mail. (i) by sending a copy to each taxpayer so named and each other person so likely to be affected, or

(ii) on ex parte application by the Minister, in accordance with the directions of the Court.

Application: The June 8, 2012 draft legislation, s. 14, will amend subsec. 174(2) to read as above, applicable in respect of applications made after Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Subsection 174(2) provides that the Minister's application to the Tax Court for a determination under subsection 174(1) shall set out the question in respect of which the Minister requests a determination, the names of the taxpayers that the Minister seeks to have bound by the determination, and the facts and reasons on which the Minister relies and on which the Minister based or intends to base assessments of tax payable by each of the taxpayers named in the application.

This subsection currently requires that a copy of an application be served by the Minister on each of the taxpayers named in the application, as well as on any other person who, in the opinion of the Tax Court, are likely to be affected by the determination of the question. By virtue of Rule 24 of the Tax Court of Canada Rules (General Procedure), service must be effected personally or by registered mail.

Subsection 174(2) is amended to specify that the Minister can serve notice of the application by way of regular mail or may seek direction from the Tax Court as to alternate means of service.

Related Provisions: 174(3) — Court order defining who will be bound by decision.

(3) Where Tax Court of Canada may determine question — Where the Tax Court of Canada is satisfied that a determination of the question set out in an application under this section will affect assessments or proposed assessments in respect of two or more taxpayers who have been served with a copy of the application and who are named in an order of the Tax Court of Canada pursuant to this subsection, it may

(a) if none of the taxpayers so named has appealed from such an assessment, proceed to determine the question in such manner as it considers appropriate; or

(b) if one or more of the taxpayers so named has or have appealed, make such order joining a party or parties to that or those appeals as it considers appropriate and proceed to determine the question.

Proposed Amendment — 174(3)

(3) Determination of question by the Tax Court — If the Tax Court of Canada is satisfied that a question set out in an application under this section is common to assessments or proposed assessments in respect of two or more taxpayers who have been served with a copy of the application, the Tax Court of Canada may

(a) make an order naming the taxpayers in respect of whom the question will be determined;

(b) if one or more of the taxpayers so served has or have appealed an assessment to the Tax Court of Canada in respect of which the question is relevant, make an order joining a party or parties to that or those appeals as it considers appropriate; and

(c) proceed to determine the question in such manner as it considers appropriate.

Application: The June 8, 2012 draft legislation, s. 14, will amend subsec. 174(3) to read as above, applicable in respect of applications made after Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Subsection 174(3) provides that the Tax Court may proceed to determine a question set out in an application under subsection 174(1) if it is satisfied that

- the question is common to the assessments or proposed assessments of the taxpayers named in the application; and
- those taxpayers have been served with a copy of the application.

If one or more taxpayers named in the application have appealed the issue to the Tax Court, the Tax Court may make an order joining a party or parties to the appeal and proceed to determine the question.

It is possible that none of the taxpayers named in the application have filed an appeal to the Tax Court. Subsection 174(3) is amended to clarify that an order of the Tax Court naming the taxpayers in respect of whom the question will be determined may be distinct from an order joining a party or parties to an appeal of a taxpayer. The Tax Court may proceed to determine the question in either case.

Proposed Repeal — 176

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, s. 49, will repeal s. 176, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Section 176 requires the Minister of National Revenue to transmit certain relevant documents to the Tax Court of Canada and the Federal Court of Appeal.

Subsection 176(1) provides generally that, when a notice of appeal to the Tax Court of Canada under the General Procedure is received, the Minister of National Revenue must cause to be transmitted to the Tax Court of Canada and to the appellant copies of certain documents that are relevant to the appeal.

Subsection 176(2) provides generally that, when a notice of appeal to the Federal Court of Appeal in respect of which section 180 applies is received, the Minister of National Revenue must cause to be transmitted to the Federal Court of Appeal copies of all documents that are relevant to the appeal.

The requirements under subsections 176(1) and (2) are unnecessary since rules for the transmittal of documents to the Tax Court of Canada and the Federal Court of Appeal are provided for under the Tax Court of Canada Act and the Federal Courts Act, respectively. Consequently, section 176 is repealed.

History: Subsec. 176(2) amended by 2002, c. 8, s. 149, in force July 2, 2003. The subsec. formerly read:

PART I.3 — TAX ON LARGE CORPORATIONS [PRE-2006]

181. (1) Definitions — For the purposes of this Part,

"financial institution", in respect of a taxation year, means a corporation that at any time in the year is

(b) an insurance corporation that carries on business in Canada,

(c) authorized under the laws of Canada or a province to carry on the business of offering its services as a trustee to the public,

(d) authorized under the laws of Canada or a province to accept deposits from the public and carries on the business of lending money on the security of real estate or investing in mortgages or hypothecary claims on real estate,

Proposed Amendment — 181(1)"financial institution"(d)

(d) authorized under the laws of Canada or a province to accept deposits from the public and carries on the business of lending money on the security of real property or immovables or investing in indebtedness on the security of mortgages on real property or of hypothecs on immovables,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), s. 234, will amend para. (d) of the definition "financial institution" in subsec. 181(1) to read as above, to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

(e) a registered securities dealer,

(f) a mortgage investment corporation, or

(g) a prescribed corporation;

Proposed Amendment — 181(1)"financial institution"(g)

(g) a corporation

(i) listed in the schedule, or

(ii) all or substantially all of the assets of which are shares or indebtedness of financial institutions to which the corporation is related;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 122, will amend para. (g) of the definition "financial institution" in subsec. 181(1) to read as above, applicable after December 22, 1997, but in applying the para. in respect of taxation years that end before December 20, 2002, it is to be read as follows:

(g) prescribed, or listed in the schedule;

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 181(1) sets out definitions for the purposes of the Part I.3 tax on large corporations. Among these is the term "financial institution," which is relevant for a number of purposes. Most importantly, corporations that are financial institutions compute their capital for the purposes of Part I.3 differently from other corporations. The status of a particular corporation is also relevant to corporations that invest in the particular corporation or hold its debt, since whether certain of those investments are counted in the investor corporation's "investment allowance" — and thus whether they will reduce their own tax under Part I.3 — depends, in part, on whether the particular corporation is a financial institution.

In addition to listing several types of corporations, the definition "financial institution" provides, in its paragraph (g), that the definition applies as well to a prescribed corporation. Currently, such corporations are prescribed under section 8604 of the Regulations. Paragraph (a) of that regulation provides that a corporation of which all or substantially all of the assets of which are shares or indebtedness of a financial institution (as defined in subsection 181(1)) to which the corporation is related, is itself prescribed to be a financial institution: the remaining paragraphs list particular corporations by name.

Paragraph (g) of the definition is amended to reflect a fundamental change in the technique by which these corporations will be identified as financial institutions. Rather than listing corporations in a regulation, this new approach is to list them in a schedule to the Act. Amended paragraph (g) therefore refers to corporations that are either listed in the schedule, as per new subparagraph (g)(i), or that are described in new subparagraph (g)(ii), currently paragraph (a) of section 8604 of the Regulations.

As a consequence to the changes to paragraph (g) of the definition, section 8604 of the Regulations is to be repealed and a schedule is added at the end of the Act [see after s. 262 — ed.]. Subject to a number of deletions due primarily to name changes and amalgamations, the schedule lists those corporations that are currently prescribed under section 8604 immediately before its repeal. The schedule also lists a number of corporations that are not currently prescribed, but meet the requirements for treatment as financial institutions and have asked to be treated as such.

Transitional rules for paragraph (g) of the definition ensure that corporations prescribed before the repeal of Regulation 8604 retain the status that they would have had under paragraph (g) had it not been amended to exclude prescribed corporations.

As described above, a number of corporations currently not prescribed are listed in the schedule, effective as of dates that precede December 20, 2002. Transitional rules ensure that, for any taxation year that begins before December 20, 2002, no corporation that deals at arm's length with any of these corporations will lose an investment allowance as a result the corporation's change in status to a financial institution under paragraph (g) of the definition.

but does not include, where the corporation is a prescribed federal Crown corporation for the purpose of section 27, any indebtedness evidenced by obligations issued to and held by Her Majesty in right of Canada;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 123(1), will amend subpara. 181.2(3)(g)(i) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 181.2 is amended in two respects. First, subsections 181.2(3) and (5) are amended to clarify the effect of tiered partnerships: structures in which one partnership is a member of another partnership. Second, an amendment is made to subsection 181.2(3) to accommodate a change to the accounting presentation of redeemable preferred shares.

Tiered Partnerships

Subsection 181.2(3) defines the "capital" of a corporation, and in paragraph 181.2(3)(g) includes in a corporation's capital a pro-rata share of the reserves, deferred foreign exchange gains and indebtedness of any partnership of which it is a member. To determine those amounts, the relevant paragraphs of subsection 181.2(3) are applied to the partnership in the same way as they apply to corporations. Paragraph 181.2(3)(g) is amended so that it itself applies on this basis. As a result, the proration of the reserve, deferred gain and debt amounts will carry through any number of tiered partnerships.

Subsection 181.2(4) provides for the "investment allowance" by which, in broad terms, one corporation's investment in another is excluded from the first corporation's taxable capital. Subsection 181.2(5) determines the carrying value of an interest of a corporation in a partnership for this purpose. Subsection 181.2(5) is amended to ensure that the carrying value of an interest of a corporation in a particular partnership, for the purposes of subsection 181.2(4), includes the carrying value of an interest of the particular partnership in another partnership.

(ii) the amount of the partnership's deferred unrealized foreign exchange losses at the end of that period that the member's share of the partnership's income or loss for that period is of the partnership's income or loss for that period

Proposed Amendment — 181.2(3)(g)

(g) the total of all amounts, each of which is the amount, if any, in respect of a partnership in which the corporation held a membership interest at the end of the year, either directly or indirectly through another partnership, determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts that would be determined under paragraphs (b) to (d) and (f) in respect of the partnership for its last fiscal period that ends at or before the end of the year if

(a) those paragraphs applied to partnerships in the same manner that they apply to corporations, and

(b) those amounts were computed without reference to amounts owing by the partnership

(i) to any corporation that held a membership interest in the partnership either directly or indirectly through another partnership, or

(ii) to any partnership in which a corporation described in subparagraph (i) held a membership interest either directly or indirectly through another partnership,

B is the partnership's deferred unrealized foreign exchange losses at the end of the period,

C is the share of the partnership's income or loss for the period to which the corporation is entitled either directly or indirectly through another partnership, and

D is the partnership's income or loss for the period

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 50(1), will amend para. 181.2(3)(g) to read as above, applicable to 2012 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 181.2 provides rules for determining the capital, taxable capital, taxable capital employed in Canada and investment allowance of corporations (other than financial institutions) resident in Canada for the purposes of the Part I.3 tax on large corporations, which was fully phased out after 2005. The determination of a corporation's taxable capital employed in Canada is relevant for other provisions in the Act, including the calculation of a corporation's small business deduction and the SR&ED expenditure limit.

Subsection 181.2(3) defines the "capital" of a corporation, and in paragraph 181.2(3)(g) includes in a corporation's capital a pro-rata share of the reserves, deferred foreign exchange gains and indebtedness of any partnership of which it is a member. To determine those amounts, the relevant paragraphs of subsection 181.2(3) are applied to the particular partnership in the same way as they apply to corporations. Paragraph 181.2(3)(g) also applies on this basis, such that it applies on an iterative basis to lower-tier partnerships in which the corporation has an interest through its membership in the particular partnership. This results in the proration of the reserves, deferred foreign exchange gains and debt amounts for the lower-tier partnerships. However, the calculation requires a corporation to look first to the fiscal period of the particular partnership of which the corporation is a member that ends in the corporation's taxation year, then to the fiscal period of the first lower-tier partnership that ends in the particular partnership's fiscal period, and so on.

In general, paragraph 181.2(3)(g) is amended [to] eliminate the iterative nature of this calculation. The amount determined under that paragraph will calculate the corporation's pro-rata share of reserves, deferred foreign exchange gains and indebtedness of any partnership of which it is a member, whether directly or through one or more other partnerships. In this regard, the amount added to a corporation's capital in respect of any partnership is to be calculated based on the amount at the end of the partnership's last fiscal period that ends at or before the end of the corporation's taxation year.

(h) the amount of its deferred tax debit balance at the end of the year,

(i) the amount of any deficit deducted in computing its shareholders' equity at the end of the year, and

Proposed Amendment — 181.2(3)(i)

(i) the amount of any deficit deducted in computing its shareholders' equity (including, for this purpose, the amount of any provision for the redemption of preferred shares) at the end of the year,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 123(2), will amend para. 181.2(3)(i) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after 1995.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Preferred Shares

In general, a corporation's tax payable under Part I.3 of the Act is computed with reference to amounts reflected in the balance sheet of the corporation, as prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP).

The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants' Handbook (the Handbook), which is the principal authority of GAAP in Canada, requires that a liability of a corporation in respect of a redeemable preferred share be reflected on the corporation's balance sheet. The Handbook provides that this liability may be accounted for in one of two ways. Under the first method, the difference between the stated capital of a share and its redemption value is charged to retained earnings, which in some cases may result in the corporation having negative retained earnings or a deficit. Retained earnings are unaffected under the second method, under which a line account is set up reflecting the redemption liability of the preferred shares.

Current paragraph 181.2(3)(i) allows for a reduction of a corporation's capital, to the extent of any deficit deducted in computing the corporation's shareholders' equity. To accommodate the alternative presentation of a provision for the redemption of preferred shares, the paragraph is amended to refer explicitly to the amount of such a provision.

(j) any amount deducted under subsection 135(1) in computing its income under Part I for the year, to the extent that the amount can reasonably be regarded as being included in the amount determined under any of paragraphs (a) to (g) in respect of the corporation for the year.

(k) the amount of its deferred unrealized foreign exchange losses at the end of the year.

Related Provisions: 132.2(1)(o) — Deemed year-end of mutual fund corporation on reorganization; 181(4) — Limitations respecting inclusions and deductions; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

(g) where the corporation was a member of a partnership at the end of the year, that proportion of the total of all amounts (other than amounts owing to the member or to corporations that are other members of the partnership) that would be determined under this paragraph and paragraphs (b) to (f) in respect of the partnership at the end of its last fiscal period ending at or before the end of the year (if the references in paragraphs (b) to (f) to "corporation" were read as references to "partnership") that the member's share of the partnership's income or loss for that period is of the partnership's income or loss for that period,

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 50(2), will amend para. 181.2(4)(d.1) to read as above, applicable to 2004 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 181.2(4) provides for the determination of a corporation's "investment allowance" by which, in broad terms, one corporation's investment in another is excluded from the first corporation's taxable capital. In general, investment in debt of a partnership is not included in a corporation's taxable capital if all the members of the partnership (an "eligible partnership") are "eligible corporations" (corporations, other than the investor corporation, that are neither financial institutions nor corporations exempt from Part I.3 tax otherwise than because they were non-residents and did not carry on a business through a permanent establishment in Canada). Paragraph 181.2(4)(d.1) is amended to allow for the effect of tiered partnerships: structures in which all the members of the investee partnership are eligible partnerships and eligible corporations.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 25, 2004:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of February 3, 2004, in which you provide additional material regarding the application, to tiered partnership structures, of the investment allowance provisions in Part I.3 of the Income Tax Act. Further to our meeting on this matter, it was helpful to see set out the particular criteria that in your view ought to apply in order for a corporation that loans or advances funds to such a structure to recognize an investment allowance in respect of that debt.

As you know, although the proposed amendments to the Act announced in December 2002 and released again in February 2004 address certain issues around partnerships and the Part I.3 tax, they do not — and were not intended to — deal with the question you have raised. That question, in short, is whether under any circumstances the investment allowance of a corporation ought to include an amount in respect of the corporation's holding of debt of a partnership, not all of the members of which are corporations. In its current form, paragraph 181.2(4)(d.1) recognizes partnership debt only if all the members of the partnership are corporations (other than financial institutions) that either are not exempt from Part I.3 tax or are neither resident in Canada nor carrying on business in Canada through a permanent establishment. The provision thus has the effect that advances or loans to second- or lower-tiered partnerships do not support an investment allowance, since one or more members of such partnerships are necessarily not corporations.

You have suggested that the investment allowance ought to be available in some cases of multiple partnership tiers. That is, subject to certain additional criteria which I will return to in a moment, you propose that a debt investment in a particular partnership support an investment allowance if all of the members of the partnership that are not corporations are themselves partnerships that, either directly or through further layers of partnerships, are made up of corporations. This concept can perhaps be expressed most succinctly by defining a new term, "eligible partnership". An eligible partnership would (again, subject to some further criteria) be one all of the members of which are either corporations or other eligible partnerships. The carrying value of any loan or advance to (or bond, etc. of) an eligible partnership would be included in computing the investment allowance of a corporation other than a financial institution.

I agree that this is in principle an appropriate result. In policy terms, the fact that the debtor's corporate structure has been arranged to include more than one layer of partnerships ought not necessarily to deny the holder of a debt an investment allowance. While as a practical matter there will often be ways of avoiding such a structure, or at least of relocating the debt, it is recognized that business and other considerations may make it difficult or undesirable in a particular instance to do that. For that reason, I am prepared to recommend an amendment to paragraph 181.2(4)(d.1), to be effective for the 2004 and subsequent taxation years, that would include in the investment allowance calculation the debt of what I have called "eligible partnerships."

At the same time, it will in my view be necessary both to define "eligible partnership", and to set out additional criteria that would be applicable in respect of debt issued by partnerships within a tiered partnership structure, with some care. In this regard, we would expect to make recommendations along the following lines:

- An eligible partnership could have no member that is a financial institution, or that is corporation that is exempt from tax under Part I.3 (otherwise than because it is non-resident and does not carry on business in Canada through a permanent establishment).
- Where a partnership's status as an eligible partnership is relevant in respect of a debt for a particular taxation year, the partnership would be required to maintain that status throughout the taxation year.
- For the purposes of including amounts in capital under paragraph 181.2(3)(g) in respect of a loan or an advance to an eligible partnership, the fiscal year-end of any intervening or higher-tiered partnership would be deemed to be the same as that of the debtor partnership.

Of course, we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendations that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, we trust that this statement of our position is helpful.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislative Division, Tax Policy Branch

Technical Notes (July 2010): Claims Reserves

In general, a corporation is required to compute amounts relevant in determining its tax payable under Part I.3 of the Act using generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP).

The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants' Handbook (the Handbook), which is the principle authority of GAAP in Canada, requires that property and casualty insurers account for claims reserves on a gross basis, rather than net of reinsurance.

Paragraphs 181.3(3)(c) and (d) stipulate the amounts to be included in determining the capital of an insurance corporation resident in Canada (other than a life insurance corporation) and an insurance corporation not resident in Canada, respectively. Among other things, claims reserves are required under these paragraphs to be included in computing the capital of such a corporation.

New subparagraph 181.3(3)(c)(vii) and clause 181.3(3)(d)(iv)(F) allow such corporations to reduce their capital by an amount that is recoverable through reinsurance, to the extent that the amount relates to an amount that was included in capital as a claims reserve. In this way, claims reserves are included on a net of reinsurance basis under paragraphs 181.3(3)(c) and (d).

(d) in the case of an insurance corporation that was throughout the year not resident in Canada and carried on an insurance business in Canada at any time in the year, the total at the end of the year of

(i) the amount that is the greater of

(A) the amount, if any, by which

(I) the corporation's surplus funds derived from operations (as defined in subsection 138(12)) as of the end of the year, computed as if no tax were payable under this Part or Part VI for the year

exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is

(II) an amount on which the corporation was required to pay, or would but for subsection 219(5.2) have been required to pay, tax under Part XIV for a preceding taxation year, except the portion, if any, of the amount on which tax was payable, or would have been payable, because of subparagraph 219(4)(a)(i.1), and

(III) an amount on which the corporation was required to pay, or would but for subsection 219(5.2) have been required to pay, tax under subsection 219(5.1) for the year because of the transfer of an insurance business to which subsection 138(11.5) or (11.92) has applied, and

(B) the corporation's attributed surplus for the year,

(ii) any other surpluses relating to its insurance businesses carried on in Canada,

(iii) the amount of its long-term debt that may reasonably be regarded as relating to its insurance businesses carried on in Canada, and

(iv) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the amount of its reserves for the year (other than its reserves in respect of amounts payable out of segregated funds) that may reasonably be regarded as having been established in respect of its insurance businesses carried on in Canada

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a reserve (other than a reserve described in subparagraph 138(3)(a)(i)) to the extent that it was included in the amount determined under clause (A) and was deducted in computing its income under Part I for the year,

(C) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a reserve described in subparagraph 138(3)(a)(i) to the extent that it was included in the amount determined under clause (A) and was deductible under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(i) in computing its income under Part I for the year,

(D) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount outstanding (including any interest accrued thereon) as at the end of the year in respect of a policy loan (within the meaning assigned by subsection 138(12)) made by the corporation, to the extent that it was deducted in computing the amount determined under clause (C), and

(E) the total amount of its deferred acquisition expenses in respect of its property and casualty insurance business in Canada, to the extent that it can reasonably be attributed to an amount included in the amount determined under clause (A); and

Proposed Addition — 181.3(3)(d)(iv)(F)

(F) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount recoverable through reinsurance, to the extent that it can reasonably be regarded as being included in the amount determined under clause (A) in respect of a claims reserve; and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 124(5), will add cl. 181.3(3)(d)(iv)(F), applicable to taxation years that begin after 1995.

183.1 (1) Application of Part — This Part applies to a corporation (other than a mutual fund corporation) for a taxation year in which the corporation, at any time in the year,

(a) was a public corporation; or

(b) was resident in Canada and had a class of shares outstanding that were purchased and sold in the manner in which such shares normally are purchased and sold by any member of the public in the open market.

(2) Tax payable — Where, as a part of a transaction or series of transactions or events,

(a) a corporation, or any person with whom the corporation was not dealing at arm's length, has, at any time, paid an amount, directly or indirectly, to any person as proceeds of disposition of any property, and

(b) all or any portion of the amount may reasonably be considered, having regard to all the circumstances, to have been paid as a substitute for dividends that would otherwise have been paid in the normal course by the corporation, the corporation shall, on or before its balance-due day for its taxation year that includes that time, pay tax of 45% of that amount or portion of it, as the case may be.

Related Provisions: 248(10) — Series of transactions.

History: The closing words of subsec. 183.1(2) amended by 2003, c. 15, s. 119, applicable to taxation years that begin after June 2003. The closing words formerly read:

(3) Stock dividend — Where, as a part of a transaction or series of transactions or events,

(a) a share was issued by a corporation as a stock dividend and the amount of the stock dividend was less than the fair market value of the share at the time that it was issued, and

(b) the share or any other share of the capital stock of the corporation was purchased, directly or indirectly, by the corporation, or by a person with whom the corporation was not dealing at arm's length, for an amount in excess of its paid-up capital, that excess shall, for the purposes of subsection (2), be deemed to have been paid as a substitute for dividends that would otherwise have been paid in the normal course by the corporation.

(4) Purchase of shares — Where, as a part of a transaction or series of transactions or events,

(a) a share of the capital stock of a corporation was purchased, directly or indirectly, by the corporation, or any person with whom the corporation was not dealing at arm's length, and

(b) any portion of the amount paid for the share may reasonably be considered, having regard to all the circumstances, as consideration for a dividend that had been declared, but not yet paid, on the share, that portion of the amount shall, for the purposes of subsection (2), be deemed to have been paid as a substitute for dividends that would otherwise have been paid in the normal course by the corporation notwithstanding that the dividend was actually paid thereafter.

(5) Indirect payment — Where, as a part of a transaction or series of transactions or events, a person received a payment from a corporation, or from any person with whom the corporation was not dealing at arm's length, in consideration, in whole or in part, for paying an amount to any other person as proceeds of disposition of any property, the corporation shall, for the purposes of subsection (2), be deemed to have paid the amount indirectly to the other person.

(6) Where subsec. (2) does not apply — Subsection (2) does not apply if none of the purposes of the transaction or series of transactions or events referred to therein may reasonably be considered, having regard to all the circumstances, to have been to enable shareholders of a corporation who are individuals or non-resident persons to receive an amount, directly or indirectly, as proceeds of disposition of property rather than as a dividend on a share that was of a class that was listed on a stock exchange or that was purchased and sold in the manner in which shares are normally purchased and sold by any member of the public in the open market.

(7) Where subsec. 110.6(8) does not apply — Where this section has been applied in respect of an amount, subsection 110.6(8) does not apply to the capital gain in respect of which the amount formed all or a part of the proceeds of disposition.

PART III — ADDITIONAL TAX ON EXCESSIVE ELECTIONS

184. (1) [Repealed under former Act]

(2) Tax on excessive elections — Where a corporation has elected in accordance with subsection 83(2), 130.1(4) or 131(1) in respect of the full amount of any dividend payable by it on shares of any class of its capital stock and the full amount of the dividend exceeds the portion thereof deemed by that subsection to be a capital dividend or capital gains dividend, as the case may be, the corporation shall, at the time of the election, pay a tax under this Part equal to 3/4 of the excess.

Proposed Amendment — 184(2)

(2) Tax on excessive elections — If a corporation has elected in accordance with subsection 83(2), 130.1(4) or 131(1) in respect of the full amount of any dividend payable by it on shares of any class of its capital stock (in this section referred to as the "original dividend") and the full amount of the original dividend exceeds the portion of the original dividend deemed by that subsection to be a capital dividend or capital gains dividend, as the case may be, the corporation shall, at the time of the election, pay a tax under this Part equal to 3/5 of the excess.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 125, will amend subsec. 184(2) to read as above, applicable to original dividends paid by a corporation after its 1999 taxation year.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Under section 83, a private corporation can identify a dividend as a "capital dividend," with the result that the dividend is not taxable to the shareholders who receive it. In concept, a capital dividend is a distribution of the non-taxable portion of the corporation's capital gains, which portion is recorded in the corporation's "capital dividend account". A similar mechanism allows mutual fund corporations and mortgage investment corporations to designate a dividend as a "capital gains dividend" — which is taxable to the shareholder, but as a capital gain.

Part III of the Act (sections 184 and 185) applies a special tax to a corporation that designates as a capital dividend or a capital gains dividend an amount that exceeds the amount available to be paid as such a dividend. If the corporation obtains the consent of its shareholders, it can avoid the special tax by treating the excess amount as a separate taxable dividend.

These amendments simplify Part III and update its language, reduce the rate of the special tax, and modify the requirement for shareholder consent to the recharacterization of an excessive dividend. These amendments apply to dividends that are paid by a corporation after its 1999 taxation year, with a special transitional rule for elections, described below in the notes to subsection 184(5).

Subsection 184(2) applies the tax under Part III of the Act to the amount by which a dividend paid by a corporation as a capital dividend or a capital gains dividend exceeds the amount eligible to be so designated. For greater clarity, the subsection is amended to refer to the full amount of the initial dividend as the "original dividend." That term is then used elsewhere in amended Part III.

The rate of tax imposed by subsection 184(2) is also changed, as part of a series of amendments that reflect recent and planned reductions in tax rates. The rate is reduced from 75% of the excess capital gains dividend to 60% of the excess.

Related Provisions: 18(1)(t) — Tax is non-deductible; 87(2)(z.2) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 184(3) — Election to treat excess as a separate dividend.

(2.1) Reduction of excess — Notwithstanding subsection (2), where a corporation has elected in accordance with subsection 83(2) in respect of the full amount of a dividend that became payable by it at a particular time in its 1988 taxation year and before June 18, 1987, the amount of the excess referred to in subsection (2) in respect of the dividend shall be deemed, for the purposes of subsection (2), to be the amount of the excess that would have been determined under subsection (2) in respect of the dividend if the corporation's taxation year had ended on December 31, 1987.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 125, will repeal subsec. 184(2.1), applicable to original dividends paid by a corporation after its 1999 taxation year.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 184(2.1) is a transitional rule that applies to certain dividends that became payable before June 18, 1987. That subsection has lapsed and is repealed.

(3) Election to treat excess as separate dividend — If, in respect of a dividend payable at a particular time after 1971, a corporation would, but for this subsection, be required to pay a tax under this Part equal to all or a portion of an excess referred to in subsection (2) of this section or subsection 184(1) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, it may elect in prescribed manner on or before a day that is not later than 90 days after the day of sending of the notice of assessment in respect of the tax that would otherwise be payable under this Part, and on such an election being made, subject to subsection (4), the following rules apply:

(a) the amount by which the full amount of the dividend exceeds the amount of the excess shall be deemed for the purposes of the election that the corporation made in respect of the dividend under subsection 83(2), 130.1(4) or 131(1) of this Act or subsection 83(1) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, and for all other purposes of this Act to be the full amount of a separate dividend that became payable at the particular time;

(b) such part of the excess as the corporation may claim shall, for the purposes of any election in respect thereof under subsection 83(2), 130.1(4) or 131(1) of this Act or subsection 83(1) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, and, where the corporation has so elected, for all purposes of this Act, be deemed to be the full amount of a separate dividend that became payable immediately after the particular time;

(c) the amount by which the excess exceeds any portion deemed by paragraph (b) to be a separate dividend for all purposes of this Act shall be deemed to be a separate dividend that is a taxable dividend that became payable at the particular time; and

(d) each person who held any of the issued shares of the class of shares of the capital stock of the corporation in respect of which the full amount of the dividend was paid shall be deemed

(i) not to have received any portion of the dividend, and

(ii) to have received at the time the dividend was paid the proportion of any separate dividend, determined under paragraph (a), (b) or (c), that the number of shares of that class held by the person at the time the dividend was paid is of the number of shares of that class outstanding at that time except that, for the purpose of Part XIII, a separate dividend that is a taxable dividend, a capital dividend or a life insurance capital dividend shall be deemed to have been paid on the day that the election in respect of this subsection is made.

Proposed Amendment — 184(3)

(3) Election to treat excess as separate dividend — If, in respect of an original dividend payable at a particular time, a corporation would, but for this subsection, be required to pay a tax under this Part in respect of an excess referred to in subsection (2), and the corporation elects in prescribed manner on or before the day that is 90 days after the day of mailing [to be changed to "sending" as per 2010 Budget second bill amendment enacted — ed.] of the notice of assessment in respect of the tax that would otherwise be payable under this Part, the following rules apply:

(a) the portion of the original dividend deemed by subsection 83(2), 130.1(4) or 131(1) to be a capital dividend or capital gains dividend, as the case may be, is deemed for the purposes of this Act to be the amount of a separate dividend that became payable at the particular time;

(b) if the corporation identifies in its election any part of the excess, that part is, for the purposes of any election under subsection 83(2), 130.1(4) or 131(1) in respect of that part, and, where the corporation has so elected, for all purposes of this Act, deemed to be the amount of a separate dividend that became payable immediately after the particular time;

(c) the amount by which the excess exceeds any portion deemed by paragraph (b) to be a separate dividend for all purposes of this Act is deemed to be a separate taxable dividend that became payable at the particular time; and

(d) each person who held any of the issued shares of the class of shares of the capital stock of the corporation in respect of which the original dividend was paid is deemed

(i) not to have received any portion of the original dividend, and

(ii) to have received, at the time that any separate dividend determined under any of paragraphs (a) to (c) became payable, the proportion of that dividend that the number of shares of that class held by the person at the particular time is of the number of shares of that class outstanding at the particular time except that, for the purpose of Part XIII, the separate dividend is deemed to be paid on the day that the election in respect of this subsection is made.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 125, will amend subsec. 184(3) to read as above, applicable to original dividends paid by a corporation after its 1999 taxation year.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 184(3) allows a corporation that would otherwise be liable to tax under Part III in respect of an excessive capital dividend or capital gains dividend to treat the excess as a separate taxable dividend, and thus to avoid the tax. The subsection is amended to update and clarify its language.

Related Provisions: 184(4) — Concurrence with election; 184(5) — Exception for non-taxable shareholders; 220(3.2), Reg. 600(b) — Late filing or revocation of election; 244(14), (14.1) — Date when notice sent.

Proposed Repeal — 184(3.2)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 125, will repeal subsec. 184(3.2), applicable to original dividends paid by a corporation after its 1999 taxation year.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 184(2.1).

Related Provisions: 248(7)(a) — Mail deemed received on day mailed.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-66R6: Capital dividends.

(4) Concurrence with election — An election under subsection (3) is not valid unless

(a) it is made with the concurrence of the corporation and all its shareholders

(i) who received or were entitled to receive all or any portion of the dividend in respect of which a tax would, but for subsection (3), be payable under this Part, and

(ii) whose addresses were known to the corporation; and

(b) either

(i) it is made on or before the day that is 30 months after the day on which the dividend became payable, or

(ii) each shareholder described in subparagraph (a)(i) concurs with the election, in which case, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), such assessment of the tax, interest and penalties payable by each such shareholder for any taxation year may be made as is necessary to take the corporation's election into account.

(4) Concurrence with election — An election under subsection (3) is valid only if

(a) it is made with the concurrence of the corporation and all its shareholders

(i) who received or were entitled to receive all or any portion of the original dividend, and

(ii) whose addresses were known to the corporation; and

(b) either

(i) it is made on or before the day that is 30 months after the day on which the original dividend became payable, or

(ii) each shareholder described in subparagraph (a)(i) concurs with the election, in which case, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), any assessment of the tax, interest and penalties payable by each of those shareholders for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take the corporation's election into account.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 125, will amend subsec. 184(4) to read as above, applicable to original dividends paid by a corporation after its 1999 taxation year.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 184(4) sets out the requirements for shareholders' consent to the recharacterization, under subsection 184(3), of an excessive capital dividend or capital gains dividend. This subsection is amended to update and clarify its language.

Related Provisions: 185 — Assessment of tax.

(5) Penalty — The penalty in respect of an election under subsection (3.1) or (3.2) in relation to a particular dividend is an amount equal to the product obtained when $500 is multiplied by the proportion that the number of months or parts of months during the period commencing on the day the dividend became payable and ending on the day on which that election was made is of 12.

Proposed Amendment — 184(5)

(5) Exception for non-taxable shareholders — If each person who, in respect of an election made under subsection (3), is deemed by subsection (3) to have received a dividend at a particular time is also, at the particular time, a person all of whose taxable income is exempt from tax under Part I,

(a) subsection (4) does not apply to the election; and

(b) the election is valid only if it is made on or before the day that is 30 months after the day on which the original dividend became payable.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 125, will amend subsec. 184(5) to read as above, applicable to original dividends paid by a corporation after its 1999 taxation year except that, for the purpose of subsec. 184(5), as amended, an election made before the 90th day after the draft legislation is assented to is deemed to have been made in a timely manner.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 184(5) provides an exception to the shareholder consent requirements of subsection 184(4). Where a corporation wishes to recharacterize an excessive dividend under subsection 184(3), and the dividend was paid on a class of shares all of the holders of which are persons all of whose taxable income is exempt from tax (for example, registered plans), the corporation need not obtain the shareholders' consent. Instead, the only requirement imposed by new subsection 184(5) is that the corporation's election be made within 30 months after the time that the original (excessive) dividend became payable.

An election under new subsection 184(5) will be deemed to have been made in a timely manner if it is made within 90 days after these amendments receive Royal Assent.

Related Provisions: 18(1)(t) — Penalty is non-deductible; 220(3.1) — Waiver of penalty by CRA.

History: Subsec. 184(4) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 152, applicable to elections made after July 13, 1990. Subsec. 184(4) formerly read:

(4) Concurrence with election — An election under subsection (3), (3.1) or (3.2) is not valid unless it is made with the concurrence of the corporation and all the shareholders who received or were entitled to receive all or any portion of the dividend in respect of which a tax would, but for subsection (3), (3.1) or (3.2), be payable under this Part or under Part I and whose addresses were known to the corporation.

188. (1) Deemed year-end on notice of revocation [of charity] — If on a particular day the Minister issues a notice of intention to revoke the registration of a taxpayer as a registered charity under any of subsections 149.1(2) to (4.1) and 168(1) or it is determined, under subsection 7(1) of the Charities Registration (Security Information) Act, that a certificate served in respect of the charity under subsection 5(1) of that Act is reasonable on the basis of information and evidence available,

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of an asset of the charity on the day (in this section referred to as the "valuation day") that is 120 days before the day on which

(i) the notice of the Minister's intention to revoke the charity's registration is mailed, if the registration is revoked under subsection 168(2), or

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a gift for which it issued a receipt described in subsection 110.1(2) or 118.1(2) in the period (in this section referred to as the "winding-up period") that begins on the valuation day and ends immediately before the payment day, or an amount received by it in the winding-up period from a registered charity,

Proposed Amendment — Former 188(1)(a)B [temporary]

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 126, provides that in applying the description of B in para. 188(1)(a) in respect of gifts made to a charity after December 20, 2002, to the extent that those gifts are relevant in respect of notices of intention to revoke the registration of the charity and certificates under subsec. 5(1) of the Charities Registration (Security Information) Act that are issued by the Minister of National Revenue before June 13, 2005, that description is to be read as follows:

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the eligible amount of a gift for which it issued a receipt described in subsection 110.1(2) or 118.1(2) in the period (in this section referred to as the "winding-up period") that begins on the valuation day and ends immediately before the payment day, or an amount received by it in the winding-up period from a registered charity,

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 188(1) imposes a tax payable by a registered charity in respect of the revocation of the charity's registration. Subsection 188(1) is amended consequential to the addition of new subsection 248(31), in respect of gifts made after December 20, 2002, to refer to the "eligible amount" of a gift for which a receipt was issued by the charity. For additional information, see the commentary to new subsection 248(31).

History: Subsec. 190.1(1.2) repealed by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 40(1), applicable in respect of taxation years that end after June 30, 2006. It formerly read:

(1.2) Additional tax payable by deposit-taking institutions — Every corporation (other than a life insurance corporation) that is a financial institution at any time in a taxation year shall pay a tax under this Part for the year, in addition to any tax payable under subsection (1), equal to the amount determined by the formula

History: Subsec. 190.1(2) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), s. 111, applicable to 1992 et seq. and, where a corporation that was a financial institution (within the meaning assigned by s. 190) throughout each of its taxation years ending in 1991 so elects by notifying the Minister in writing before December 11, 1993, to its taxation years ending in 1991. Subsec. 190.1(2) formerly read:

(2) Short taxation years — Where a taxation year of a corporation is less than 51 weeks, the tax payable for the year by the corporation under this Part shall be that proportion of its tax otherwise payable under this Part for the year that the number of days in the year is of 365.

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the corporation's tax payable under Part I for the year exceeds the lesser of

(ii) the corporation's Canadian surtax payable (within the meaning assigned by section 125.3) for the year, and

(iii) the amount that would, but for subsection 181.1(4), be its tax payable under Part I.3 for the year, and

Proposed Amendment — 190.1(3)(a)

(a) the corporation's tax payable under Part I for the year; and

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 51(1), will amend para. 190.1(3)(a) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after 2007.

Technical Notes: Part VI of the Act imposes a capital tax on financial institutions. A financial institution can reduce its capital tax payable by the amount of income tax it pays under Part I. If its income tax exceeds its capital tax payable for a taxation year, a financial institution can carry excess income tax credits forward seven years and back three years against Part VI tax.

Under the current rule, the amount of income tax payable in a taxation year that a corporation can deduct in computing its liability for tax under Part VI must be reduced by the lesser of the Canadian surtax payable and the tax payable under Part I.3 for the year by the corporation. Part I.3 formerly imposed a capital tax on large corporations. No tax is payable under Part I.3 for taxation years that begin after 2005, and the surtax has been eliminated for taxation years that begin after 2007. Consequently, the reference to a corporation's Canadian surtax payable for the year and to the tax payable under Part I.3 for the year is being removed.

(b) such part as the corporation claims of its unused Part I tax credits and unused surtax credits for its 7 taxation years immediately before and its 3 taxation years immediately after the year.

(c), (d) [Repealed]

History: The portion of subsec. 190.1(3) after para. (b) repealed by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 40(2), applicable in respect of taxation years that end after June 30, 2006. It formerly read:

to the extent that that amount does not exceed the amount by which

(c) the amount that would, but for subsection (1.2) and this subsection, be its tax payable under this Part for the year

exceeds

(d) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount deducted under subsection 125.2(1) in computing the corporation's tax payable under Part I for a taxation year ending before 1992 in respect of its unused Part VI tax credit (within the meaning assigned by section 125.2) for the year.

Para. 190.1(3)(c) amended by 1996, c. 21, subsec. 49(2), applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 1995. Para. (c) formerly read:

(c) the amount that would, but for this subsection, be its tax payable under this Part for the year

Subsec. 190.1(3) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), s. 111, applicable to 1992 et seq. and, where a corporation that was a financial institution (within the meaning assigned by s. 190) throughout each of its taxation years ending in 1991 so elects by notifying the Minister in writing before December 11, 1993, to its taxation years ending in 1991, except that, in its application to such years,

(a) paras. (a) and (b) shall be read as follows:

"(a) the corporation's tax payable under Part I for the year, and

(b) such part as the corporation claims of its unused Part I tax credits for its 7 taxation years immediately before and 3 taxation years immediately after the year," and

(b) the reference in para. (d) to "1992" shall be read as "1991".

(4) Idem — For the purposes of this subsection and subsections (3), (5) and (6),

(a) an amount may not be claimed under subsection (3) in computing a corporation's tax payable under this Part for a particular taxation year

(i) in respect of its unused Part I tax credit for another taxation year, until its unused Part I tax credits for taxation years preceding the other year that may be claimed under this Part for the particular year have been claimed, and

(ii) in respect of its unused surtax credit for another taxation year, until its unused surtax credits for taxation years preceding the other year that may be claimed under Part I.3 or this Part for the particular year have been claimed;

(b) an amount may be claimed under subsection (3) in computing a corporation's tax payable under this Part for a particular taxation year

(i) in respect of its unused Part I tax credit for another taxation year, only to the extent that it exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the amount claimed in respect of that unused Part I tax credit in computing its tax payable under this Part for a taxation year preceding the particular year, and

(ii) in respect of its unused surtax credit for another taxation year, only to the extent that it exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the amount claimed in respect of the unused surtax credit

(A) in computing its tax payable under this Part for a taxation year preceding the particular year, or

(B) in computing its tax payable under Part I.3 for the particular year or a taxation year preceding the particular year; and

(c) an amount may be claimed under paragraph (3)(b) in computing a corporation's tax payable under this Part for a taxation year that ends before July 1, 2006 in respect of its unused Part I tax credit for a taxation year that ends after July 1, 2006 (referred to in this paragraph as the "credit taxation year") only to the extent that the unused Part I tax credit exceeds the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that would, if this Part were read as it applied to the 2005 taxation year, be the corporation's tax payable under this Part for the credit taxation year

exceeds

(ii) the corporation's tax payable under this Part for the credit taxation year.

Related Provisions: 87(2.11) — Vertical amalgamations.

History: Para. 190.1(4)(c) added by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 40(3), applicable in respect of taxation years that end after June 30, 2006.

Subsec. 190.1(4) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), s. 111, applicable to 1992 et seq. and, where a corporation that was a financial institution (within the meaning assigned by s. 190) throughout each of its taxation years ending in 1991 so elects by notifying the Minister in writing before December 11, 1993, to its taxation years ending in 1991, except that, in its application to such years, subsec. (4) shall be read without reference to subparas. (a)(ii) and (b)(ii).

(5) Definitions — For the purposes of subsections (3), (4) and (6),

"unused Part I tax credit" of a corporation for a taxation year ending after 1991 means the amount, if any, by which

(a) the corporation's tax payable under Part I for the year

exceeds the total of

(b) the amount that would, but for subsection (3), be its tax payable under this Part for the year, and

(c) the corporation's Canadian surtax payable (within the meaning assigned by section 125.3) for the year;

Proposed Amendment — 190.1(5)"unused Part I tax credit"

"unused Part I tax credit", of a corporation for a taxation year, means the amount, if any, by which

(a) the corporation's tax payable under Part I for the year

exceeds

(b) the amount that would, but for subsection (3), be its tax payable under this Part for the year;

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 51(2), will amend the definition "unused Part I tax credit" in subsec. 190.1(5) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after 2007.

Technical Notes: Under the current rule, the "unused Part I tax credit" of a corporation for a taxation year is the amount by which its tax payable under Part I for the year exceeds the total of its Part VI tax payable (determined without taking into account the deduction allowed with respect to the amount for Part I tax paid in the year) and the corporation's Canadian surtax payable for the year. In general, a corporation's Canadian surtax payable for a year is equal to the lesser of the amount of surtax payable by the corporation for the year and its income tax payable under Part I for the year. The surtax has been eliminated for taxation years beginning after 2007. Accordingly, this amendment removes the reference to a corporation's Canadian surtax payable for the year.

"unused surtax credit" of a corporation for a taxation year has the meaning assigned by subsection 181.1(6).

Related Provisions: 181.1(1.2) — Calculation to be based on tax rate of 0.225%; 181.5(1.1), (4.1) — Calculation to be based on capital deduction of $10 million.

(b) the corporation does not elect under para. 88(2)(b) of 1994, c. 21 [see under subpara. 190.11(b)(i), below],

for the purposes of determining the corporation's unused Part I tax credit for the 1991 taxation year, subsec. 190.1(5) shall be read as follows:

(5) For the purpose of computing the amount that may, because of paragraph (3)(b), be deducted by a corporation in computing its tax payable under this Part for a particular taxation year, in respect of its tax payable under Part I for a taxation year ending in 1991, and for the purposes of subsections (4) and (6), the corporation's "unused Part I tax credit" for the 1991 taxation year is the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which its tax payable under Part I for the 1991 taxation year exceeds the amount that would, but for subsection (3), be its tax payable under this Part for that year, and

(b) its tax payable under this Part (determined without reference to subsections (1.1) and (3)) for the particular year.

Subsec. 190.1(5) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), s. 111, applicable to 1992 et seq. and, where a corporation that was a financial institution (within the meaning assigned by s. 190) throughout each of its taxation years ending in 1991 so elects by notifying the Minister in writing before December 11, 1993, to its taxation years ending in 1991, except that, in its application to such years, subsec. (5) shall be read as follows [but see History annotation above]:

(5) For the purposes of this subsection and subsections (3), (4) and (6), "unused Part I tax credit" of a corporation for a taxation year ending after 1990 means the amount, if any, by which its tax payable under Part I for the year exceeds the amount that would, but for subsection (3), be its tax payable under this Part for the year.

(6) Acquisition of control — Where at any time control of a corporation was acquired by a person or group of persons, no amount in respect of its unused Part I tax credit or unused surtax credit for a taxation year ending before that time is deductible by the corporation for a taxation year ending after the time and no amount in respect of its unused Part I tax credit or unused surtax credit for a taxation year ending after that time is deductible by the corporation for a taxation year ending before that time, except that

(a) the corporation's unused Part I tax credit and unused surtax credit for a particular taxation year that ended before that time is deductible by the corporation for a taxation year that ends after that time (in this paragraph referred to as the "subsequent year") to the extent of that proportion of the corporation's tax payable under Part I for the particular year that is of the greater of

(ii) the amount determined under subparagraph (i), and

(iii) the corporation's taxable income for the particular year; and

(b) the corporation's unused Part I tax credit and unused surtax credit for a particular taxation year that ends after that time is deductible by the corporation for a taxation year (in this paragraph referred to as the "preceding year") that ended before that time to the extent of that proportion of the corporation's tax payable under Part I for the particular year that

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is

(I) its income under Part I for the particular year from a business that was carried on by the corporation in the preceding year and throughout the particular year for profit or with a reasonable expectation of profit, or

(II) where properties were sold, leased, rented or developed or services were rendered in the course of carrying on that business before that time, its income under Part I for the particular year from any other business all or substantially all of the income of which was derived from the sale, leasing, rental or development, as the case may be, of similar properties or the rendering of similar services

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deducted under paragraph 111(1)(a) or (d) in computing its taxable income for the particular year in respect of a non-capital loss or a farm loss, as the case may be, for a taxation year in respect of any business referred to in clause (A)

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 190.13 contains the rules for determining the capital of a financial institution for the purpose of Part VI of the Act. Section 190.13 is amended to accommodate a change to the accounting presentation of provisions for the redemption of preferred shares.

Generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP) are relevant to the determination of amounts referred to in section 190.13. The accounting procedures described in the notes to amended section 181.2 are therefore relevant in the context of Part VI of the Act, and readers may consult those notes for additional background. As in that section, the amendments introduced to section 190.13 include, in the computation of a deficit deducted in computing shareholders' equity, the amount of any provision for the redemption of preferred shares. This inclusion is added to two specific provisions: subparagraph 190.13(a)(v), in respect of financial institutions other than life insurers and authorized foreign banks; and subparagraph 190.13(b)(iv) in respect of Canadian-resident life insurance corporations.

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, s. 52, will repeal s. 190.16, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: The Part VI minimum tax on financial institutions was amended in 2006 to increase the Part VI capital deduction to $1 billion from $200 million and introduce a single Part VI tax rate of 1.25% on taxable capital employed in Canada above that capital deduction, effective for taxation years that end on or after July 1, 2006. Section 190.16 sets out the transitional rules in respect of those amendments to Part VI.

As those transitional rules are no longer necessary, section 190.16 is repealed for taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Proposed Addition — 191(6)

(6) Excluded dividend — partner — If at any time a corporation pays a dividend to a partnership, the corporation is, for the purposes of this subsection and paragraph (a) of the definition "excluded dividend" in subsection (1), deemed to have paid at that time to each member of the partnership a dividend equal to the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount of the dividend paid to the partnership; and

B is the member's specified proportion for the last fiscal period of the partnership that ended before that time (or, if the partnership's first fiscal period includes that time, for that first fiscal period).

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 128, will add subsec. 191(6), applicable to dividends paid after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 191 sets out a number of rules relating to the taxes imposed, under Part VI.1 of the Act, on taxable Canadian corporations that pay dividends of certain kinds. Those taxes are not payable in respect of "excluded dividends," a term defined in subsection 191(1). Dividends paid by a corporation to a shareholder that holds a "substantial interest" in the corporation are excluded dividends.

"Substantial interest" is itself defined in subsection 191(2). In general, a shareholder has a substantial interest in a corporation if the shareholder is related to the corporation (otherwise than because of a right under paragraph 251(5)(b)) or if the shareholder's holdings meet certain thresholds in terms of votes and value.

If a shareholder has a substantial interest in a corporation, and is also a member of a partnership that holds shares of the corporation, it is appropriate that a dividend paid by the corporation to the partnership be an excluded dividend, to the extent of the shareholder's interest in the dividend. To ensure this result, new subsection 191(6) is added to the rules that govern the Part VI taxes. The new subsection provides that a dividend paid to a partnership is, for the purposes of the "excluded dividend" definition, considered to have been paid ratably to each member of the partnership.

Three technical aspects of the new rule bear special mention. First, the apportionment of the dividend among the partners is based upon each partner's share of the partnership's income for its last fiscal period that ended before the corporation paid the dividend. (If the dividend was paid during the partnership's first fiscal period, the apportionment looks to that period.)

Second, to ensure appropriate effects where there is more than one tier of partnerships between the dividend-paying corporation and the person that holds a substantial interest in the corporation, the new provision applies to itself. That is, if a member of a partnership is itself a partnership, the rule will treat the dividend-paying corporation as having paid a proportionate amount as a dividend not only to the second partnership, but also to that second partnership's members.

Third, in apportioning a dividend among members of a partnership, new subsection 191(6) uses the new definition of "specified proportion," which is added to subsection 248(1). For further information, see the commentary to that amendment.

191.1 (1) Tax on taxable dividends — Every taxable Canadian corporation shall pay a tax under this Part for each taxation year equal to the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of

(i) 66⅔% of the amount, if any, by which the total of all taxable dividends (other than excluded dividends) paid by the corporation in the year and after 1987 on short-term preferred shares exceeds the corporation's dividend allowance for the year,

Proposed Amendment — 191.1(1)(a)(i)

(i) the amount determined by multiplying the amount by which the total of all taxable dividends (other than excluded dividends) paid by the corporation in the year and after 1987 on short-term preferred shares exceeds the corporation's dividend allowance for the year, by

(A) 50% for dividends paid in a taxation year that ends before 2010,

(B) 45% for dividends paid in a taxation year that ends after 2009 and before 2012,

(C) 40% for dividends paid in a taxation year that ends after 2011,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 129, will amend subpara. 191.1(1)(a)(i) to read as above, applicable to 2003 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 191.1(1) provides for a tax to be paid under Part VI.1 by a corporation that has paid taxable dividends on taxable preferred shares. In the case of short-term preferred shares, subparagraph 191.1(1)(a)(i) sets the tax rate at 66 ⅔% of the dividend. This rate produces an amount of tax that approximates the amount of income tax that would have been collected had a corporate shareholder sought the same after-tax return in the form of interest. The Part VI.1 tax is based on an assumed combined federal and provincial corporate income tax rate. That result obtains, at the current 66 ⅔ percent rate, if interest income is assumed to be taxed at 40%. This amendment reduces the tax rate under subparagraph 191.1(1)(a)(i) in the context of the reductions in the general federal corporate income tax rate for the 2003 and subsequent taxation years. This amendment is made in the course of the review of provisions in the Act that assume a specific underlying corporate income tax rate in the context of the reductions in the general federal corporate income tax rate, as was announced in the Economic Statement delivered on October 30, 2007. The review of other such provisions continues and any other amendments will be announced upon completion of that review.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Aug. 2, 2002:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing further to your letter of July 31, 2002, regarding the rates of tax imposed under Part VI.1 of the Income Tax Act and the treatment, under Part I of the Act, of amounts paid under Part VI.1. Specifically, you have asked for written confirmation of this Division's intention to recommend certain changes in both of these areas. You have emphasized that this matter is of pressing concern for your client, and we have accordingly given your enquiry some priority.

This will confirm that we do intend to propose such changes, as part of a series of technical measures designed to reflect recent and planned reductions in corporate income tax rates. Our recommendation in respect of Part VI.1 will be that the rate of tax imposed by subparagraph 191.1(1)(a)(i) be reduced from 66⅔% to 50%. Complementing this, we will recommend that the factor to be applied in computing the deduction for Part I purposes [110(1)(k) — ed.] in respect of Part VI.1 taxes be adjusted from ⅔ to 3. Both of these measures would apply for the 2003 and subsequent taxation years.

As you know, I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will endorse these proposals. Nonetheless, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(1.1) Cumulative excess amount in respect of RRSPs — The cumulative excess amount of an individual in respect of registered retirement savings plans at any time in a taxation year is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the amount of the individual's undeducted RRSP premiums at that time

exceeds

(b) the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the individual's unused RRSP deduction room at the end of the preceding taxation year,

B is the amount, if any, by which

(i) the lesser of the RRSP dollar limit for the year and 18% of the individual's earned income (as defined in subsection 146(1)) for the preceding taxation year exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is

(ii) the individual's pension adjustment for the preceding taxation year in respect of an employer, or

(iii) a prescribed amount in respect of the individual for the year,

C is, where the individual attained 18 years of age in a preceding taxation year, $2,000, and in any other case, nil,

D is the group RRSP amount in respect of the individual at that time,

Proposed Amendment — 204.2(1.1)(b)D

D is the group plan amount in respect of the individual at that time,

Application: The December 14, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 17(1), will amend the description of D in para. 204.2(1.1)(b) to read as above, in force or deemed in force on the day of the coming into force of S.C. 2012, c. 16 (Bill C-25, Royal Assent June 18, 2012), Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

Technical Notes: Part X.1 of the Act imposes a penalty tax in respect of excess contributions made to registered retirement savings plans (RRSPs). The amount of tax payable in respect of any month is 1% of an individual's cumulative excess amount at the end of that month.

As a consequence of the introduction of pooled registered pension plans (PRPPs), an individual's unused RRSP deduction room (see subsection 146(1)) and deductible RRSP premiums (see subsection 146(5)) will be reduced each year by contributions to a PRPP made by the individual or by the individual's employer to an account of the individual under a PRPP. Accordingly, consequential amendments are being made to section 204.2 to ensure that non-discretionary contributions to a PRPP in respect of an individual will not be included in the individual's cumulative excess amount and will not be subject to the monthly 1% tax under subsection 204.1(2.1).

The amendments to section 204.2 do not expressly add references to the contributions that an individual member makes to a PRPP. However, for the purposes of various sections of the Act including section 146 (RRSPs) and Part X.1, new subsection 147.5(11) deems an individual's contributions to his or her account under a PRPP to be premiums paid to an RRSP of the individual.

For further information, please see the commentary on new section 147.5, and on the amendments to the definition "unused RRSP deduction room" in subsection 146(1) and to subsection 146(5).

Subsection 204.2(1.1) defines an individual's cumulative excess amount at the end of any month in a year to be the excess of the individual's undeducted RRSP premiums at that time over the amount determined by the formula in paragraph 204.2(1.1)(b). Generally, the amount determined by the formula includes the amount of RRSP deduction room available to the individual for the year plus a margin of $2,000 plus a "group RRSP amount" (variable D) in respect of the individual.

Subsection 204.2(1.1) is amended to replace the term "group RRSP amount" in variable D with the term "group plan amount", consequential on related amendments to section 204.2 that ensure non-discretionary contributions to a PRPP in respect of an individual will not be included in the individual's "cumulative excess amount" and will not be subject to Part X.1 tax.

E is, where the individual attained 18 years of age before 1995, the individual's transitional amount at that time, and in any other case, nil, and

Para. 204.2(1.1)(b) amended by 1996, c. 21, subsec. 51(1), applicable to 1996 et seq. Para. (b) formerly read:

(b) the amount determined by the formula

$$A + B - C + M$$

where

A is the individual's unused RRSP deduction room at the end of the immediately preceding taxation year,

B is the amount, if any, by which the lesser of the RRSP dollar limit for the year and 18% of the individual's earned income (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146(1)) for the immediately preceding taxation year exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the individual's pension adjustment for the immediately preceding taxation year in respect of an employer or a prescribed amount in respect of the taxpayer for the year,

C is the individual's net past service pension adjustment, at that time, for the year, and

M is, where the individual attained 18 years of age in a preceding taxation year, $8,000, and otherwise, nil.

(1.2) Undeducted RRSP premiums — For the purposes of subsection (1.1) and the description of K in paragraph (1.3)(a), the amount of undeducted RRSP premiums of an individual at any time in a taxation year is the amount determined by the formula

where

H is, for taxation years ending before 1992, nil, and for taxation years ending after 1991, the amount, if any, by which

(a) the amount of the individual's undeducted RRSP premiums at the end of the immediately preceding taxation year

exceeds

(b) the total of the amounts deducted under subsections 146(5) and (5.1) in computing the individual's income for the immediately preceding taxation year, to the extent that each amount was deducted in respect of premiums paid under registered retirement savings plans in or before that preceding year,

I is the total of all amounts each of which is

(a) a premium (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146(1)) paid by the individual in the year and before that time under a registered retirement savings plan under which the individual or the individual's spouse or common-law partner was the annuitant (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146(1)) at the time the premium was paid, other than

(i) an amount paid to the plan in the first 60 days of the year and deducted in computing the individual's income for the immediately preceding taxation year,

(ii) an amount paid to the plan in the year and deducted under paragraph 60(j), (j.1), (j.2) or (l) in computing the individual's income for the year or the immediately preceding taxation year,

(iii) an amount transferred to the plan on behalf of the individual in accordance with any of subsections 146(16), 147(19) and 147.3(1) and (4) to (7) or in circumstances to which subsection 146(21) applies,

Proposed Amendment — 204.2(1.2)I(a)(iii)

(iii) an amount transferred to the plan on behalf of the individual in accordance with any of subsections 146(16), 147(19), 147.3(1) and (4) to (7) and 147.5(20) or in circumstances to which subsection 146(21) applies,

Application: The December 14, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 17(2), will amend subpara. (a)(iii) of the description of I in subsec. 204.2(1.2) to read as above, in force or deemed in force on the day of the coming into force of S.C. 2012, c. 16 (Bill C-25, Royal Assent June 18, 2012), Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

Technical Notes: Subsection 204.2(1.2) provides rules for determining the amount of an individual's undeducted RRSP premiums at any time. This amount is used in computing the individual's cumulative excess amount in respect of RRSPs under subsection 204.2(1.1). As a consequence of new PRPP rules in section 147.5 and related amendments to section 146 (RRSP rules), variables I and J in the formula H + I - J in subsection 204.2(1.2) are amended to take into account contributions made by an individual's employer to the individual's PRPP account and withdrawals from the PRPP account, in the year and before the time of the determination.

Subparagraph (a)(iii) of variable I in subsection 204.2(1.2) is amended to add transfers from a PRPP to an RRSP to the list of transfers that are not considered for purposes of the Part X.1 tax to be premiums paid to an RRSP. Variable I is also amended to add a new paragraph (c) to include in an individual's undeducted RRSP premiums any amounts contributed in the year and before the time of the determination to the individual's PRPP account by an employer or former employer. However, as a result of the amendments to subsection 204.2(1.1) and 204.2(1.3), non-discretionary contributions to a PRPP in respect of an individual will not be included in the individual's cumulative excess amount and will not be subject to Part X.1 tax.

Paragraph (a) of variable J in subsection 204.2(1.2) is amended to subtract from undeducted RRSP premiums any amounts that are withdrawn from the individual's PRRP account in the year and before the time of the determination and that are included in computing the individual's income for the year.

Although subsection 204.2(1.2) will not expressly refer to an individual's contributions to a PRPP, new subsection 147.5(11) deems an individual's contributions to his or her PRPP account to be premiums paid to an RRSP of the individual. As a result, an individual's PRPP contributions in a year are included in computing the individual's undeducted RRSP premiums under subsection 204.2(1.2).

(iv) an amount deductible under subsection 146(6.1) in computing the individual's income for the year or a preceding taxation year,

(v) where the individual is a non-resident person, an amount that would, if the individual were resident in Canada throughout the year and the immediately preceding taxation year, be deductible under paragraph 60(j), (j.1), (j.2) or (l) in computing the individual's income for the year or the immediately preceding taxation year, or

(vi) an amount paid to the plan in the year that is not deductible in computing the individual's income for the year because of subparagraph 146(5)(a)(iv.1) or (5.1)(a)(iv), or

(b) a gift made in the year and before that time to a registered retirement savings plan under which the individual is the annuitant (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146(1)), other than a gift made thereto by the individual's spouse or common-law partner, and

Proposed Addition — 204.2(1.2)I(c)

(c) an amount contributed in the year and before that time by an employer or former employer of the individual to an account of the individual under a pooled registered pension plan, and Application: The December 14, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 17(3), will add para. (c) to the description of I in subsec. 204.2(1.2), in force or deemed in force on the day of the coming into force of S.C. 2012, c. 16 (Bill C-25, Royal Assent June 18, 2012), Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

J is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount (other than the portion thereof that reduces the amount on which tax is payable by the individual under subsection 204.1(1)) received by the individual in the year and before that time out of or under a registered retirement savings plan or a registered retirement income fund and included in computing the individual's income for the year

Technical Notes: Subsection 204.2(1.3) provides rules for determining the "group RRSP amount" of an individual for the purposes of paragraph 204.2(1.1)(b). An individual's group RRSP amount for a year is the amount that is needed to ensure that Part X.1 tax does not apply in that year to certain non-discretionary group RRSP contributions made in the year.

Subsection 204.2(1.3) is amended to replace the term "group RRSP amount" (in the preamble and in variable K) with "group plan amount" and to replace the term "qualifying group RRSP premium paid by an individual" in variable F with "qualifying group plan amount in respect of an individual". This amendment is consequential to related amendments to section 204.2 that ensure non-discretionary contributions to a PRPP in respect of an individual will not be included in the individual's cumulative excess amount and will not be subject to Part X.1 tax.

History: Subsec. 204.2(1.3) repealed and substituted by 1996, c. 21, subsec. 51(3), applicable to 1996 et seq. Subsec. (1.3) formerly read:

G is the amount of the individual's PSPA withdrawals for the year, determined as of that time in accordance with prescribed rules.

All that portion of subsec. 204.2(1.3) preceding the description of G amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), s. 117, applicable after 1988. That portion formerly read:

(1.3) For the purposes of subsection (1.1), the net past service pension adjustment of an individual, at any time, for a taxation year is the amount determined by the formula

where

P is the total of all amounts each of which is the accumulated PSPA of the individual for the year in respect of an employer, determined as of that time in accordance with prescribed rules,

F is the amount of the individual's PSPA transfers for the year, determined as of that time in accordance with prescribed rules, and Regulations: 8303(2) (accumulated PSPA before 1996); 8307(5) (individual's PSPA withdrawals before 1996).

(1.31) Qualifying group RRSP premium — For the purpose of the description of F in paragraph (1.3)(a), a qualifying group RRSP premium paid by an individual is a premium paid under a registered retirement savings plan where

(a) the plan is part of a qualifying arrangement,

(b) the premium is an amount to which the individual is entitled for services rendered by the individual (whether or not as an employee), and

(c) the premium was remitted to the plan on behalf of the individual by the person or body of persons that is required to remunerate the individual for the services, or by an agent for that person or body, but does not include the part, if any, of a premium that, by making (or failing to make) an election or exercising (or failing to exercise) any other right under the arrangement after beginning to participate in the arrangement and within 12 months before the time the premium was paid, the individual could have prevented from being paid under the plan and that would not as a consequence have been required to be remitted on behalf of the individual to another registered retirement savings plan or to a registered pension plan in respect of a money purchase provision of the plan.

Proposed Amendment — 204.2(1.31)

(1.31) Qualifying group plan amount — For the purposes of the description of F in paragraph (1.3)(a), a qualifying group plan amount in respect of an individual is a premium paid under a registered retirement savings plan or an amount contributed by an employer or former employer of the individual to an account of the individual under a pooled registered pension plan if

(a) the plan is part of a qualifying arrangement or is a pooled registered pension plan,

(b) the premium or contribution is an amount to which the individual is entitled for services rendered by the individual (whether or not as an employee), and

(c) the premium or contribution was remitted to the plan on behalf of the individual by the person or body of persons that is required to remunerate the individual for the services, or by an agent for that person or body, but does not include the part, if any, of a premium or contribution that, by making (or failing to make) an election or exercising (or failing to exercise) any other right under the plan after beginning to participate in the plan and within 12 months before the time the premium was paid or the contribution was made, the individual could have prevented the premium or contribution and that would not as a consequence have been required to be remitted on behalf of the individual to another registered retirement savings plan or pooled registered pension plan or to a money purchase provision of a registered pension plan.

Application: The December 14, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 17(8), will amend subsec. 204.2(1.31) to read as above, in force or deemed in force on the day of the coming into force of S.C. 2012, c. 16 (Bill C-25, Royal Assent June 18, 2012), Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

Technical Notes: Subsection 204.2(1.31) defines "qualifying group RRSP premium", which is relevant in determining an individual's group RRSP amount under amended subsection 204.2(1.3). A qualifying group RRSP premium of an individual is the non-elective portion of an RRSP contribution made to an RRSP that is part of a "qualifying arrangement" (as defined in subsection 204.2(1.32)) and that was remitted to the RRSP on behalf of the individual by a person who is required to remunerate the individual for services rendered. It does not include the discretionary portion of an individual's RRSP contribution, that is, the portion the individual could have prevented from being paid to the RRSP, by making an election or exercising any other right under the arrangement (or by failing to do one of these things) after starting to participate in the arrangement and within 12 months preceding the payment. However, the elective portion does not include any amount that, had it not been paid to the RRSP, would have been required to be remitted on behalf of the individual to another RRSP or to a money purchase provision of a registered pension plan.

Subsection 204.2(1.31) is amended to replace the term "qualifying group RRSP premium paid by an individual" with "qualifying group plan amount in respect of an individual" (consequential on a similar amendment to subsection 204.2(1.3)) and to include in that amount, in addition to premiums paid to the an RRSP of the individual, amounts contributed by the individual's employer or former employer to the individual's PRPP account. New subsection 147.5(11) deems an individual's contributions to the individual's account under a PRPP to be a premiums paid to an RRSP of the individual.

Subsection 204.2(1.31) is further amended so that (in addition to discretionary RRSP contributions) discretionary employer contributions to an individual's PRPP account are not included in the definition of "qualifying group plan amount".

For further information, please see the commentary on new subsection 147.5(11) and on amendments to the definition "unused RRSP deduction room" in subsection 146(1) and to subsection 146(5).

PART X.3 — LABOUR-SPONSORED VENTURE CAPITAL CORPORATIONS

Proposed Amendment — Part X.3

Federal budget, supplementary information, Feb. 16, 1999: RRSP withdrawals under the Home Buyers' Plan (HBP) and the Lifelong Learning Plan (LLP)

The HBP and the LLP allow a qualifying individual to withdraw RRSP funds on a tax-free basis to purchase a home or to pay for education. HBP withdrawals are repayable over a 15-year period, while LLP withdrawals are repayable over a 10-year period. To the extent that a scheduled repayment for a year is not made, it is added in computing the participant's income for the year.

The Quebec government has proposed to allow individuals to withdraw proceeds from the redemption of provincial LSVCC shares held within an RRSP, without the provincial LSVCC credit being recovered if the withdrawal is made under the HBP or the LLP. Under existing law, the federal credit will not be recovered in these circumstances. Individuals making such withdrawals are expected to acquire replacement shares in annual amounts determined under the existing HBP and LLP repayment schedules. These replacement purchases are not eligible for the Quebec LSVCC credit. Where an individual fails to acquire LSVCC replacement shares, a special Quebec tax of 15 per cent of the shortfall is imposed on the individual to recover the LSVCC credit that Quebec provided on the purchase of the redeemed shares.

The budget proposes that purchases of replacement shares in Quebec LSVCCs likewise not be eligible for the federal LSVCC credit. In addition, where an individual fails to acquire a replacement share, it is proposed to levy a federal penalty tax that matches the special 15 per cent Quebec tax. These proposals will apply from the date the corresponding Quebec proposals apply.

Similar changes are not contemplated for federally-registered LSVCCs or LSVCCs registered in other provinces. Because shares in Quebec LSVCCs are not normally redeemable until retirement, amounts on which an LSVCC credit was paid will be available for small business investment for a considerable period of time even if withdrawn under the HBP or the LLP for part of that time. In contrast, because shares in federally-registered LSVCCs or in LSVCCs registered in other provinces may generally be redeemed without a recovery of the federal credit after eight years, it would be inappropriate to allow the amounts invested in these shares not to be available for small business investment for any length of time in that period.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 22, 2008:

GrowthWorks, Vancouver, BC

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing in response to your letter dated October 4, 2007 in which you identified an issue with respect to the application of the definition "reserve" in subsection 204.8(1) of the Income Tax Act (Act).

Under the Act, federally registered Labour-Sponsored Venture Capital Corporations ("LSVCCs") are generally required to invest at least 60% of their assets in eligible small businesses. Any amount not invested in eligible small businesses must be held in investments that meet the definition "reserve". Under this provision, "reserve" is defined as property described in any of paragraphs (a), (b), (c), (f) and (g) of the definition "qualified investment" in section 204 of the Act.

You have expressed a concern that deposits with credit unions are excluded from the definition "reserve" in subsection 204.8(1) of the Act. We agree with your concern, and as such, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister that the definition "reserve" be amended to include deposits with credit unions that are "member institutions", as that term is defined in subsection 137.1(5) of the Act. If our recommendation is acted upon, we anticipate that the amendments would be included in a future technical bill and would apply with respect to taxation years that end on or after January 1, 2007. While I cannot offer any assurance that the Minister will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

"revoked corporation" means a corporation the registration of which has been revoked under subsection 204.81(6);

Related Provisions: 211.7(1)"revoked corporation" — Definition for Part XII.5.

"specified active business", at any time, means an active business that is carried on in Canada where

(a) at least 50% of the full-time employees employed at that time in respect of the business are employed in Canada, and

(b) at least 50% of the salaries and wages paid to employees employed at that time in respect of the business are reasonably attributable to services rendered in Canada by the employees;

History: The definition "specified active business" in s. 204.8 amended by 1998, c. 19, s. 209, applicable after 1988. It formerly read:

"specified active business", at any time, means an active business that is carried on in Canada where, at that time,

(a) at least 50% of the full-time employees employed in respect of the business are employed in Canada, and

(b) at least 50% of the salaries and wages paid to employees employed in respect of the business are reasonably attributable to services rendered in Canada by the employees.

"specified individual", in respect of a share, means an individual (other than a trust) whose labour-sponsored funds tax credit (as defined by subsection 127.4(6)) in respect of the original acquisition of the share is not nil or would not be nil if this Act were read without reference to paragraphs 127.4(6)(b) and (d).

History: The definition "specified individual" in s. 204.8 amended by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 55(3), applicable after 1995. It formerly read:

"specified individual", in respect of a share, means an individual (other than a trust) whose labour-sponsored funds tax credit for a taxation year would take into account the amount of consideration paid to acquire, or to subscribe for, the share if the information return described in paragraph 204.81(6)(c) in respect of the share were filed as required under paragraph 127.4(3)(b).

The definition "specified individual" added to s. 204.8 by 1994, c. 8, subsec. 29(2), applicable after December 2, 1992.

"start-up period" of a corporation means

(a) subject to paragraph (c), in the case of a corporation that first issued Class A shares before February 17, 1999, the corporation's taxation year in which it first issued those shares and the four following taxation years,

(b) subject to paragraph (c), in the case of a corporation that first issues Class A shares after February 16, 1999, the corporation's taxation year in which it first issues those shares and the following taxation year, or

(c) where a corporation files an election with its return under this Part for a particular taxation year of the corporation that ends after 1998 and that is referred to in paragraph (a) or (b), the period, if any, consisting of the taxation years referred to in paragraph (a) or (b), as the case may be, other than the particular year and all taxation years following the particular year.

History [204.8(1)"start-up period"]: The definition "start-up period" added to subsec. 204.8(1) by 2000, c. 19, subsec. 54(3), applicable after 1997.

Proposed Addition — 204.8(1)"terminating corporation"

"terminating corporation" in respect of a particular corporation means a predecessor corporation in circumstances where

(a) subsection 204.85(3) applies to a merger of the particular corporation and the predecessor corporation,

(b) Class A shares of the particular corporation have been issued to the predecessor corporation in exchange for property of the predecessor corporation, and

(c) within a reasonable period of time after the exchange, Class A shareholders of the predecessor corporation receive all of the Class A shares of the particular corporation issued to the predecessor corporation in the course of a wind-up of the predecessor corporation;

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 35(2), will add the definition "terminating corporation" to subsec. 204.8(1), applicable after 2004.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 204.8(2)(a), in conjunction with section 204.841, imposes a tax on an LSVCC if its articles cease to comply with the requirements in paragraph 204.81(1)(c). Some LSVCCs may be required to amend their articles of incorporation in order to complete a merger with another LSVCC. In these cases, the predecessor LSVCCs will terminate and continue as a new fund. The successor LSVCC will purchase, at fair market value, all the assets of each terminating LSVCC. The terminating LSVCCs will redeem the shares of the individual investors, providing, as payment for the redemption, Class A shares of the continuing LSVCC.

Such a transaction may qualify as a "merger" under subsection 204.85(3), providing relief from some provisions of the Act that might otherwise apply upon the redemption of shares of an LSVCC. For example, a redemption arising on a merger will generally not result in recovery of the labour-sponsored funds tax credit from the shareholders of the terminating LSVCCs.

The new definition "terminating corporation" applies to an LSVCC (the "predecessor LSVCC") that undertakes a merger to which subsection 204.85(3) applies with another LSVCC if Class A shares of the continuing LSVCC have been issued to the predecessor LSVCC in exchange for property of the predecessor LSVCC and, within a reasonable period of time after the exchange, the Class A shareholders of the predecessor LSVCC will receive all of those Class A shares of the continuing LSVCC in the course of a wind-up of the predecessor LSVCC.

This amendment is made concurrently with the amendment of clause 204.81(1)(c)(ii)(A) and applies after 2004.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Oct. 17, 2005: See under 211.7(3).

Clause 204.81(1)(c)(ii)(A) sets out that the Class A shares of the LSVCC may be issuable only to individuals (other than trusts), trusts governed by registered retirement savings plans, and trusts governed by Tax-Free Savings Accounts.

Clause 204.81(1)(c)(ii)(A) is amended to also permit the issuance of Class A shares to a terminating corporation that is being merged with the LSVCC. This amendment is made concurrently with the addition of the definition "terminating corporation" in subsection 204.8(1) and applies after 2004.

Proposed Amendment — 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E)

(E) the redemption occurs

(I) more than eight years after the day on which the share was issued, or

(II) if the day that is eight years after that issuance is in February or March of a calendar year, in February or on March 1st of that calendar year but not more than 31 days before that day, or

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 131(1), will amend cl. 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E) to read as above, applicable after February 6, 2000 to corporations incorporated at any time.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 204.81 sets out the conditions for the registration of labour-sponsored venture capital corporations (LSVCCs). Subsection 204.81(1) permits the Minister of National Revenue to register a corporation as an LSVCC under Part X.3 if its articles satisfy specified conditions, and other requirements are met. Subparagraph 204.81(1)(c)(v) sets out the requirements of a federally-registered LSVCC's articles regarding the circumstances in which the LSVCC may redeem shares of its capital stock. The current rule generally provides, pursuant to clause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E), a minimum holding period of eight years for corporations that are incorporated after March 5, 1996.

Clause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E) is amended to require that the articles of a federally-registered LSVCC provide that the LSVCC shall not redeem its shares unless the redemption occurs either

- more than eight years after the day on which the share was issued, or
- in February or on March 1st but not more than 31 days before the day that is eight years after the day on which the share was issued.

"Eligible labour body" substituted for "national central labour body" in para. (b), cl. (c)(ii)(B) and subpara. (c)(iii) of subsec. 204.81(1) by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), s. 119, applicable to 1992 et seq.

Regulations: 6706 (prescribed conditions for 204.81(1)(c)(v)(G)).

Forms: T5005: Application to register a labour-sponsored venture capital corporation.

(1.1) Corporations incorporated before March 6, 1996 — In applying clause (1)(c)(v)(E) in relation to any time before 2004 in respect of a corporation incorporated before March 6, 1996, the references in that clause to "eight" are replaced with references to "five" if, at that time, the relevant statements in the corporation's articles refer to "five".

(1.2) Deemed provisions in articles — In applying subsection (1) in relation to any time before 2004, to a corporation incorporated before February 7, 2000, if the articles of the corporation comply with subclause (1)(c)(v)(E)(I) (as modified, where relevant, by subsection (1.1)), those articles are deemed to provide the statement required by subclause (1)(c)(v)(E)(II).

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 131(2), will add subsecs. 204.81(1.1) and (1.2), applicable after February 6, 2000.

Technical Notes (July 2010): However, federally-registered LSVCCs that were incorporated before March 6, 1996 may contain statements in their articles that provide that the LSVCC shall not redeem certain of its shares unless the redemption occurs more than five years after the day on which such a share was issued. New subsection 204.81(1.1) provides that in applying clause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E), at any time before 2004, in respect of a corporation incorporated before March 6, 1996, the references in that clause to the word "eight" are replaced with references to the word "five" if, at that time, the relevant statements in the corporation's articles refer to the word "five". This is intended to ensure that the extended (February, or March 1st) redemption provisions required of a federally-registered LSVCC's articles apply equally to shares originally subject to a minimum five year holding period and those subject to a minimum eight year holding period.

New subsection 204.81(1.2) is a transitional rule that provides a federally-registered LSVCC, incorporated before February 7, 2000, with a reasonable amount of time to amend its articles as required by clause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E). Subsection 204.81(1.2) provides that, in applying subsection 204.81(1) at any time before 2004 to such an LSVCC, if the LSVCC's articles comply with subclause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E)(I) (as modified by subsection 204.81(1.1)) those articles are deemed to provide the statement required by subclause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E)(II).

New subsections 204.81(1.1) and (1.2) apply after February 6, 2000. These amendments are part of a set of amendments, announced by the Minister of Finance (News Release 2000-009, dated February 7, 2000) [reproduced under 211.8(1)(a)B(i)(B), (C) — ed.] concerning the redemption requirements for federally-registered LSVCCs. For information on a related amendment, see the commentary to subsection 211.8(1).

(2) Registration number — On registering a corporation under subsection (1), the Minister shall assign to it a registration number.

(3) Successive registrations — Where an eligible labour body causes more than one corporation to be registered under this Part, for the purposes of paragraph (6)(h) and section 204.82, each of those corporations shall be deemed

(a) to have issued a Class A share at the earliest time any such corporation issued a Class A share, and, where the corporation did not exist at the time referred to in paragraph (a),

(b) to have been in existence during the particular period beginning immediately before that time and ending immediately after the corporation was incorporated, and

(c) to have had, throughout the particular period, fiscal periods ending on the same calendar day in each year in the particular period as the calendar day on which its first fiscal period after it was incorporated ended.

History: "Eligible labour body" substituted for "national central labour body" in subsec. 204.81(3) by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), s. 119, applicable to 1992 et seq.

(4) Determination of cost — For the purposes of this Part, the cost at any time to a corporation of an eligible investment that is a guarantee shall be deemed to be 25% of the amount of the debt obligation subject to the guarantee at that time.

(5) Registration date — Where the Minister registers a corporation for the purposes of this Part, the corporation shall be deemed to have become so registered on the later of

(a) the day the application for registration of the plan is received by the Minister, and

(b) where in the application for registration a day is specified as the day on which the registration is to take effect, that day.

(6) Revocation of registration — The Minister may revoke the registration of a corporation for the purposes of this Part where

(a) the articles of the corporation do not comply with paragraph (1)(c) and would not comply with that paragraph if the corporation had been incorporated after December 5, 1996;

(a.1) the corporation does not comply with any of the provisions of its articles described in paragraph (1)(c), except where there would be no failure to comply if the provisions of its articles were consistent with the articles of a corporation that would be permitted to be registered under this Part if it had been incorporated after December 5, 1996;

(b) an individual acquires or irrevocably subscribes and pays for a Class A share of the capital stock of the corporation in the period beginning on the 61st day of a calendar year and ending on the 60th day of the following calendar year and the corporation fails to file with the Minister an information return in prescribed form containing prescribed information before April of that following calendar year;

(c) an individual acquires or irrevocably subscribes and pays for a Class A share of the capital stock of the corporation in the period beginning on the 61st day of a calendar year and ending on the 60th day of the following calendar year and the corporation fails to issue to the individual before April of that following calendar year an information return in prescribed form stating the amount of the consideration paid for the share in that period;

(d) the corporation issues more than one information return described in paragraph (c) in respect of the same acquisition of or subscription for a Class A share;

(e) the financial statements of the corporation presented to its shareholders are not prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles;

(f) the corporation fails within 6 months after the end of any taxation year to have an independent valuation of its shares made as of the end of that year;

(g) [Repealed]

(h) the corporation does not pay the tax or penalty payable under section 204.82 by it on or before the day on or before which that tax or penalty is required to be paid;

(i) tax was payable under subsection 204.82(3) by the corporation for 3 or more taxation years;

(j) the corporation provides a guarantee that is an eligible investment and fails to maintain, at any time during the term of the guarantee, a reserve equal to the cost to the corporation of the guarantee at that time;

(k) the corporation pays a fee or commission in excess of a reasonable amount in respect of the offering for sale, or the sale, of its shares; or

PART X.5 — PAYMENTS UNDER REGISTERED EDUCATION SAVINGS PLANS

204.94 (1) Definitions — The definitions in subsection 146.1(1) apply for the purposes of this Part, except that the definition "subscriber" in that subsection shall be read without reference to paragraph (c).

(2) Charging provision — Every person shall pay a tax under this Part for each taxation year equal to the amount determined by the formula

Proposed Amendment — 204.94(2) opening words

(2) Charging provision — Every person (other than a public primary caregiver that is exempt from tax under Part I) shall pay a tax under this Part for each taxation year equal to the amount determined by the formula

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 37, will amend the opening words of subsec. 204.94(2) to read as above, applicable to 2007 et seq.

Technical Notes: Part X.5 of the Act imposes a special 20% tax on "accumulated income payments" from registered education savings plans (RESPs). This special tax generally applies where an RESP is terminated because the beneficiary does not pursue post-secondary education and the plan's accumulated investment income is paid out to the subscriber. The tax is intended to discourage the use of RESPs strictly for tax deferral purposes and is in addition to regular income tax. Subsection 204.94(2) sets out the charging provision for the tax.

Under section 146.1, an RESP may be established on behalf of a child in care by the child's "public primary caregiver", which is defined in subsection 146.1(1) as the department, agency or institution that maintains the child or the public trustee or curator of the province in which the child resides. Child welfare services are generally administered by a provincial government department. However, some jurisdictions, including Ontario and Nova Scotia, have created independent non-profit organizations to provide these services. While paragraph 149(1)(l) will provide an exemption from regular income tax with respect to any accumulated income payments made to child welfare agencies in these provinces, there is no comparable exemption from Part X.5 tax. Child welfare agencies in Ontario and Nova Scotia may thus be liable for Part X.5 tax on accumulated income payments from RESPs set up on behalf of children under their care.

Subsection 204.94(2) is amended so that it does not apply to a public primary caregiver as defined in subsection 146.1(1). This will ensure that all child welfare organizations — regardless of legal structure — are able to reallocate the full amount of any investment income from an RESP that is not used for the beneficiary's post-secondary education to other RESPs established for other children under the organization's care. The amendment is consistent with the fact that non-profit child welfare organizations are already exempt from regular income tax on accumulated income payments and will provide comparable tax treatment for all RESPs established by child welfare organizations.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Jan. 7, 2008: Ms. Lenore Burton, Director General, Canada Education Savings Program, Human Resources and Social Development Canada, 140 Promenade du Portage, Phase IV, Gatineau, QC K1A 0J9

Dear Ms. Burton:

This is in reply to your letter of April 13, 2007 in which you request that we consider an amendment to the Income Tax Act (Act) to address an anomaly in the tax treatment of child welfare organizations that have established registered education savings plans (RESPs) on behalf of children in their care. We also acknowledge several discussions between our respective officials on this matter. Please excuse the delay in replying.

Under section 146.1 of the Act, an RESP may be established on behalf of a child in care by the child's "public primary caregiver", which is defined as the department, agency or institution that maintains the child or the public trustee or curator of the province in which the child resides. We understand that child welfare services generally are administered by a provincial government department. However, Ontario and Nova Scotia have created independent non-profit organizations to provide child welfare services.

We understand that, in the course of coordinating a common RESP provider for children in care across Canada, concern was raised that the child welfare agencies in Ontario and Nova Scotia may be subject to the 20 percent tax on accumulated income payments in Part X.5 of the Act.

As you know, this special tax generally applies where an RESP is terminated because the beneficiary does not pursue post-secondary education and the accumulated investment income is paid out to the subscriber. The tax is intended to discourage the use of RESPs strictly for tax deferral purposes and is in addition to regular income tax.

While paragraph 149(1)(l) of the Act will provide an exemption from regular income tax with respect to any accumulated income payments made to child welfare agencies in these provinces, there is no comparable exemption from Part X.5 tax.

We understand that this is not an issue for most provinces, as any accumulated income payments made from an RESP established by a provincial government department would be immune from taxation under the constitution [Constitution Act, 1867, s. 125 — ed.] However, because Ontario and Nova Scotia use non-profit organizations, constitutional immunity is not available.

You have asked that the Act be amended to expressly exempt child welfare organizations from being liable for Part X.5 tax. This will ensure that all child welfare organizations — regardless of legal structure — are able to reallocate the full amount of any investment income of an RESP that is not used for the beneficiary's post-secondary education to other RESPs established for other children under the organization's care.

We have considered your request and are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that Part X.5 of the Act be amended so that it does not apply to a "public primary caregiver" as defined in subsection 146.1(1) of the Act. This is consistent with the fact that non-profit child welfare organizations are already exempt from regular income tax on accumulated income payments and will provide comparable tax treatment for all RESPs established by child welfare organizations.

I trust that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you. Please feel free to share this letter with the child welfare organizations and the financial institution that was selected to be the common RESP provider.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

"benefit", in relation to a registered disability savings plan, includes any payment or allocation of an amount to the plan that is represented to be a return on investment in respect of property held by the plan trust, but which cannot reasonably be considered, having regard to all the circumstances, to be on terms and conditions that would apply to a similar transaction in an open market between parties dealing with each other at arm's length and acting prudently, knowledgeably and willingly.

Related Provisions: 206.2(2)(a) — Tax on benefit.

"qualified investment" for a trust governed by a registered disability savings plan means

(a) an investment that would be described by any of paragraphs (a) to (d), (f) and (g) of the definition "qualified investment" in section 204 if the reference in that definition to "a trust governed by a deferred profit sharing plan or revoked plan" were read as a reference to "a trust governed by a registered disability savings plan" and if that definition were read without reference to the words "with the exception of excluded property in relation to the trust";

(b) a contract for an annuity issued by a licensed annuities provider where

(i) the trust is the only person who, disregarding any subsequent transfer of the contract by the trust, is or may become entitled to any annuity payments under the contract, and

(c) a contract for an annuity issued by a licensed annuities provider where

(i) annual or more frequent periodic payments are or may be made under the contract to the holder of the contract,

(ii) the trust is the only person who, disregarding any subsequent transfer of the contract by the trust, is or may become entitled to any annuity payments under the contract,

(iv) the day on which the periodic payments began or are to begin is not later than the end of the later of

(A) the year in which the beneficiary under the plan attains the age of 60 years, and

(B) the year following the year in which the contract was acquired by the trust,

(v) the periodic payments are payable for the life of the beneficiary under the plan and either there is no guaranteed period under the contract or there is a guaranteed period that does not exceed 15 years,

(vi) the periodic payments

(A) are equal, or

(B) are not equal solely because of one or more adjustments that would, if the contract were an annuity under a retirement savings plan, be in accordance with subparagraphs 146(3)(b)(iii) to (v) or that arise because of a uniform reduction in the entitlement to the periodic payments as a consequence of a partial surrender of rights to the periodic payments, and

(vii) the contract requires that, in the event the plan must be terminated in accordance with paragraph 146.4(4)(p), any amounts that would otherwise be payable after the termination be commuted into a single payment; and

(d) a prescribed investment.

(a) the parent corporation controls the other corporation,

(b) the parent corporation or a corporation controlled by the parent corporation owns

(i) shares of the capital stock of the other corporation that would give the parent corporation or the corporation controlled by the parent corporation 25% or more of the votes that could be cast under all circumstances at an annual meeting of shareholders of that other corporation, and

(ii) shares of the capital stock of the other corporation having a fair market value of 25% or more of the fair market value of all the issued shares of the capital stock of that other corporation, or

(c) the other corporation is controlled by a particular corporation and the parent corporation or a corporation controlled by the parent corporation owns

(ii) that has not been satisfied at or before that time by the issue of new units of the trust or by a payment of an amount by the trust;

(iii) [Repealed]

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 133(2), will replace subparas. (b)(i)–(iii) of the definition "cost amount" in former subsec. 206(1) [repealed by S.C. 2005, c. 30] with subparas. (b)(i) and (ii) to read as above, applicable to months that end after December 20, 2002 and before 2005, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Part XI of the Act set out rules for a 1% per month penalty tax on excess foreign property held by deferred income plans. Part XI was repealed, effective for months that end after 2004, in Budget Implementation Act, 2005, S.C. 2005, c. 30. A number of amendments are being made to Part XI that are effective prior to its repeal.

"Cost amount" is defined in subsection 206(1) for the purposes of Part XI. The definition was introduced in 2001 to deal with arrangements that provided for trust income to be "capitalized" without the trust issuing new units. Under the definition, the cost amount otherwise determined of a taxpayer's interest in such a trust reflects the capitalized amounts. For months that end after December 20, 2002 and before 2005, the definition is to be read to clarify that it applies to trusts under which all beneficiaries are registered plan trusts (e.g., trusts described in paragraph (e) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1)).

"designated value" of a property at any time means the greater of

(a) the fair market value at that time of the property, and

(b) the carrying value at that time of the property;

"excluded share" means

(a) a share that is of a class of shares listed on a prescribed stock exchange in Canada, where no share of that class has been issued after December 4, 1985 (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into before 5:00 p.m. Eastern Standard Time on December 4, 1985),

(b) a share last acquired after 1995 that is of a class of shares listed on a prescribed stock exchange in Canada, where

(i) no share of that class has been issued after July 20, 1995 (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing made before July 21, 1995), and

(ii) the share would not be foreign property if the expression "primarily from foreign property" in paragraph (d.1) of the definition "foreign property" in this subsection were read as "primarily from portfolio investments in property that is foreign property" and that paragraph were read without reference to "(other than an excluded share)", and

(c) a share last acquired after 1995 as a consequence of the exercise of a right acquired before 1996 where the share would not be foreign property if the expression "primarily from foreign property" in paragraph (d.1) of the definition "foreign property" in this subsection were read as "primarily from portfolio investments in property that is foreign property" and that paragraph were read without reference to "(other than an excluded share)";

"foreign property" means

(a) tangible property situated outside Canada except automotive equipment registered in Canada,

(b) automotive equipment not registered in Canada pursuant to the laws of Canada or a province,

(c) intangible property (other than any property described in paragraphs (d) to (g)) situated outside Canada including, without restricting the generality of the foregoing, any patent under the laws of a country other than Canada and any licence in respect thereof,

(d) any share of the capital stock of a corporation other than a Canadian corporation,

(d.1) except as provided by subsection (1.1), any share (other than an excluded share) of the capital stock of, or any debt obligation issued by, a corporation (other than an investment corporation, mutual fund corporation or registered investment) that is a Canadian corporation, where shares of the corporation can reasonably be considered to derive their value, directly or indirectly, primarily from foreign property,

Proposed Amendment — Former 206(1)"foreign property"(d.1)

(d.1) any share (other than an excluded share) of the capital stock of, or any debt obligation (other than a debt obligation described in subparagraph (g)(iii)) issued by, a corporation (other than an investment corporation, a mutual fund corporation or a registered investment) that is a Canadian corporation, if shares of the corporation can reasonably be considered to derive their value, directly or indirectly, primarily from foreign property,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 133(3), will amend para. (d.1) of the definition "foreign property" in former subsec. 206(1) [repealed by S.C. 2005, c. 30] to read as above, applicable to months that end after October 2003 and before 2005, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): "Foreign property" is defined in subsection 206(1). Under paragraph (d.1) of the definition, foreign property includes certain shares and debt issued by Canadian corporations, if shares of the corporation may reasonably be considered to derive their value primarily from foreign property. Paragraph (g) of the definition treats as foreign property the indebtedness of a non-resident person other than indebtedness issued by various international organizations or indebtedness issued by an authorized foreign bank and payable at a Canadian branch of that bank.

For months that end after October 2003 and before 2005, paragraphs (d.1) and (g) are to be read to provide that a mortgage obligation that is fully secured by real property situated in Canada is not foreign property.

(e) except as prescribed, any share of the capital stock of a mutual fund corporation or investment corporation that is not a registered investment, other than a share of the capital stock of an investment corporation that was last acquired before October 14, 1971,

(f) any property that, under the terms or conditions thereof or any agreement relating thereto, is convertible into, is exchangeable for or confers a right to acquire, property that is foreign property, but not including property that is

(i) a share of the capital stock of a Canadian corporation listed on a prescribed stock exchange in Canada, or

(ii) a right issued before 1984 and listed on a prescribed stock exchange in Canada to acquire a share of the capital stock of a Canadian corporation,

(g) indebtedness of a non-resident person, other than

(i) indebtedness issued by an authorized foreign bank and payable at a branch in Canada of the bank, or

(ii) indebtedness issued or guaranteed by

(A) the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development,

(B) the International Finance Corporation,

(C) the Inter-American Development Bank,

(D) the Asian Development Bank,

(E) the Caribbean Development Bank,

(F) the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development,

(G) the African Development Bank, or

(H) a prescribed person,

Proposed Addition — Former 206(1)"foreign property"(g)(iii)

(iii) a debt obligation that is fully secured by a mortgage, charge, hypothec or similar instrument in respect of real or immovable property situated in Canada or that would be fully secured were it not for a decline in the fair market value of the property after the debt obligation was issued,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 133(4), will add subpara. (g)(iii) to the definition "foreign property" in former subsec. 206(1) [repealed by S.C. 2005, c. 30], applicable to months that end after October 2003 and before 2005, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 206(1)"foreign property"(d.1) above.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, November 3, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

This is in reply to your letter of September 22, 2003 in which you seek an amendment to the Income Tax Act to address certain practical difficulties of monitoring the foreign property character of Canadian-based commercial mortgage-backed securities (CMBS).

We understand that CMBS in Canada are generally issued as certificates representing undivided co-ownership interests in a pool of mortgage loans secured by commercial real property situated in Canada. To determine the foreign property character of the certificates, it is necessary to determine the character of each of the mortgage loans in the pool based on the attributes of the issuer. As the issuers are typically private corporations, obtaining the information necessary to make on-going determinations as to the applicability of paragraphs (d.1) and (g) of the "foreign property" definition in subsection 206(1) and subsection 206(1.1) is time-consuming and expensive. Finally, we understand that the foreign property component of typical CMBS offerings in Canada is minimal.

Given these factors, we are prepared to recommend relief. In particular, we will recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Income Tax Act be amended, effective for months ending after October 2003, to exclude from the definition "foreign property" certificates representing undivided co-ownership interests in a pool of mortgage loans secured by real property situated in Canada, subject to the following conditions:

- at the time of issuance of the certificates, not more than 20% of the total amount of the mortgage loans in the pool would otherwise constitute foreign property;
- at the time of issuance of the certificates, not more than 20% of the total amount of the mortgage loans in the pool is attributable to mortgage loans issued by a single person or related group;
- the certificates are issued as part of an offering of at least $25 million;
- the amount of each mortgage loan in the pool, at the time [of] its issuance, (together with the amount of any other debt of equal or superior rank) does not exceed the fair market value, at that time, of the real property subject to the mortgage loan; and
- no mortgage loan is added to the pool after issuance of the certificates unless it is non-foreign property.

As you are aware, we are also considering possibility of providing a more general exclusion for any mortgage loan in respect of real property situated in Canada. If a decision is made to provide a general exclusion, it would be communicated by way of public announcement. [Subpara. (g)(iii) provides this more general exclusion — ed.]

I trust this addresses your concerns and thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 206(1) includes a definition of a partner's "specified proportion" of a partnership for a fiscal period. Possible Future Amendment — Doubling the TFSA contribution limit

Here for Canada*, Conservative Party election platform (conservative.ca), April 2011: Doubling the Tax-Free Savings Account Limit

Hard-working Canadians are increasingly concerned about their savings — having enough set aside for their children's education and a nest-egg for their retirement.

To help Canadians save more for the future, in 2008 our Government established the Tax-Free Savings Account (TFSA). The TFSA is the most important personal savings vehicle since the RRSP.

The measure has been a huge success — approximately 4.7 million Canadians have opened a TFSA. And it's of special benefit to seniors — they can withdraw savings from it without any clawback of their OAS or GIS payments.

We will build on this success, by doubling the amount Canadians can save each year, to $10,000. This measure will be implemented when the federal budget is balanced within our next full term of office.

Proposed Administrative Relief — TFSA penalties

CRA/Finance news release, June 25, 2010: Joint Ministerial Statement Concerning Tax-Free Savings Accounts

The Honourable Keith Ashfield, Minister of National Revenue, and the Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, issued the following statement today:

The Government of Canada would like to provide an update on the recent administrative concerns expressed by some Canadians regarding the Tax Free Savings Account (TFSA).

2009 was the first year of the program and the response to the TFSA has been overwhelmingly positive. Approximately 4.7 million Canadians have taken out a TFSA since the program was initiated.

Our government recognizes that there was some genuine confusion about the rules for the TFSA in the first year. We understand that it may take time for some Canadians to learn about the program and for some financial institutions to properly inform their clients about this product.

The Government of Canada confirms that for the 2009 filing year, the first year of the program, we have taken the decision to be as flexible as possible in cases where a genuine misunderstanding of the TFSA contribution rules occurred. Our intention is to review each situation on a case-by-case basis and, where appropriate, waive taxes on excess contributions for this year.

For instance, individuals who used their TFSA as a regular banking account in 2009, making deposits and withdrawals on a frequent basis, or who have transferred funds between TFSAs at different institutions, but whose net contributions never exceeded the 2009 limit of $5000, may not be required to pay the tax on excess contributions for this year.

Of the nearly 4.7 million Canadians who have a TFSA, less than 2% (70,000) have recently received a letter from the Canada Revenue Agency asking to provide further information about their accounts before June 30, 2010. We have decided to extend this deadline from June 30 to August 3, 2010, to allow ample time for Canadians to provide the necessary information about their accounts.

If you received a TFSA return letter:

- You are encouraged to respond to the CRA letter by providing additional information or explanations that you may have in respect of your over-contributions.
- If no additional information is provided or you do not contact the CRA, a notice of assessment will be issued. Only at that time should you use the request for taxpayer relief form or a formal notice of objection.

If you have questions about your TFSA, you are encouraged to contact the CRA at 1-800-959-8281 or visit our Web site at: www.cra-arc.gc.ca.

CRA Notice, Sept. 21, 2010: TFSA returns and payment of taxes — Questions and Answers

1. How many Canadians opened a Tax-Free Savings Account (TFSA)?

Since last year, more than 4.8 million Canadians have opened one or more TFSAs.

2. Does the Canada Revenue Agency know how many people over-contributed to their TFSA in 2009?

On June 1, 2010, the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) mailed over 72,000 proposed TFSA returns to individuals who may have over-contributed to their TFSA seeking more information about their situation, which corresponds to less than 2% of all TFSA holders. The proposed TFSA returns that were issued do not constitute an official notice of assessment. Rather, it is a calculation of tax that may be payable based on information provided to the CRA by the TFSA holders' financial institutions.

Individuals who received the proposed TFSA tax return had until August 3, 2010 to respond by either agreeing to pay (sign the return and send it back with a cheque in the enclosed envelope) or to send the CRA a letter to request a review of their file and possible relief of tax based upon their situation and related circumstances. If an individual who received a TFSA return did not respond to the letter by August 3, 2010, the CRA will assess the return based on the information available and issue a TFSA notice of assessment.

Ministers Flaherty (Finance) and Ashfield (National Revenue) have indicated that the government intends to be as flexible as possible and will treat each circumstance on a case by case basis (cra.gc.ca/whtsnw/tms/jutsttmnt-eng.html).

If you did not respond by the August 3, 2010 deadline, you can still send CRA a letter to request a review of your file based upon your situation and related circumstances. Upon receipt of your request, the CRA will review the request on an individual basis.

Any decision to grant or deny a request will be based on the circumstances and a complete review of all the facts in each specific situation.

If individuals need help remembering dates or amounts of withdrawals/contributions, they should contact their financial institution for clarification.

3. Is the amount owing a tax or a penalty?

Some news articles refer to the amount owing as a tax and some refer to the amount owing as a penalty. The 1% per month amount owing on excess TFSA contributions is a tax and not a penalty.

4. Is the CRA going to waive the tax for all individuals who recently received a letter?

No. Any request received to waive tax will be reviewed on a case-by-case basis.

Individuals who received a proposed TFSA return have the opportunity to send the CRA a letter to request a review of their file based upon their situation and related circumstances. Upon receipt of their request, the TFSA processing unit will review their request on an individual basis. Any decision to grant or deny a request is based on the circumstances and a complete review of all the facts in each specific situation.

5. Why isn't the CRA proactively granting relief of the tax where it seems applicable?

The relevant legislation, section 207.06(1) of the Income Tax Act, requires that a request for relief be initiated by an affected individual, where it is necessary to demonstrate that errors were reasonable and that, if applicable, reasonable steps were promptly taken to remove any excess amount from the TFSA.

Furthermore, it would not be possible for the CRA to identify the intent of certain individuals by simply reviewing information provided from financial institutions. The CRA cannot presume all circumstances of each individual.

6. What should be done if someone disagrees with the proposed return they received?

Below are the steps an individual can take if they disagree with the proposed TFSA return or if they have received a notice of assessment regarding their TFSA return.

Letter and proposed return received — mailed in June 2010

The letters issued in early June do not represent a formal notice of assessment. If an individual disagrees with part or all of the tax owing, they should respond to the proposed return package — including a signed copy of the RC243 TFSA return, any correspondence from their bank(s), and a letter explaining their circumstances and the reasons for requesting administrative relief.

Individuals who received a letter but who have not yet received a TFSA notice of assessment should not be filing Form RC4288, Request for Taxpayer Relief or Form T400A, Objection — Income Tax Act.

Notice of assessment received

If individuals signed and sent back the TFSA return by August 3, 2010, the CRA will assess the return and issue a TFSA notice of assessment.

For those individuals who do not send back their TFSA return or for which a request for relief of tax is denied, the CRA will issue a TFSA notice of assessment.

Notice of objection

If individuals disagree with their TFSA notice of assessment, they can make a formal objection by sending a completed Form T400A, Objection — Income Tax Act, or a signed letter to the Chief of Appeals at their tax services office or tax centre on or before whichever of the following two dates is later:

- one year after the due date for the return; or
- 90 days after the date of the notice of assessment or notice of reassessment.

You can file an objection for many reasons, such as:

- you disagree with an assessment you have received indicating taxes are owed; or
- there is a dispute over how we have interpreted the income tax law.

Filing an objection is the first step in the formal process of resolving a dispute. After you file an objection, the Appeals Division will impartially review it.

Taxpayer relief request

If an individual receives a TFSA notice of assessment that includes a late-filing penalty or arrears interest, the individual can request that such amounts be cancelled by completing and submitting Form RC4288, Request for Taxpayer Relief. This form should only be used if a notice of assessment has been issued and if a late filing penalty and/or arrears interest was included. This form should not be used to request relief of the TFSA tax on excess contributions.

7. What is the rationale for why recontributions, in the same year, are not allowed?

From the time the TFSA was introduced, the government has been clear on the rules that govern them, including those regarding excess contributions. They were set out in budget publications released on February 26, 2008, and further explained on the CRA's TFSA Web page (cra.gc.ca/tfsa).

Under these rules, withdrawals from a TFSA in a given year are not added back to the individual's contribution room until the following year.

TFSA holders can transfer funds between their TFSAs without penalty by instructing their financial institution to execute a direct transfer from one account to another.

The ability to recontribute withdrawals is a key feature in the success of the TFSA and its ability to be used for many different savings objectives over an individual's lifetime.

The requirement that recontributions cannot be made until the following year is necessary to allow an individual's annual contribution room to be determined in a simple manner.

- Contribution room is affected by various factors such as contributions, withdrawals, accumulations of unused TFSA room and indexation
- Without such a rule, it would be very difficult to verify whether a given contribution is within the individual's TFSA limit.

8. Can funds from a TFSA be transferred from one financial institution to another within the same year?

Yes, as long as the transfer is a direct transfer between the two financial institutions.

Some TFSA transfers are being taxed because the CRA is unaware that they are "direct" transfers, as the TFSA holder's financial institution may have erroneously processed the transfer as a new contribution and filed the information to the CRA in this manner. Sometimes, the error can stem from the fact that the TFSA holder withdrew the funds from institution A and deposited it to their regular bank account and then contributed these funds to institution B. In either of these two scenarios, the action is not being completed and reported as a "direct transfer", which, if done properly, would alleviate any tax. Individuals should contact their financial institution for them to confirm to the CRA that these operations are in fact "direct" transfers.

9. Is there a CRA form to be used for TFSA transfers?

No specific form was designed for this purpose as the financial institutions process these requests electronically.

If an individual wants to transfer their TFSA from one financial institution to another, they should contact their financial institutions for additional information.

Form T2033, Direct Transfer under subsection 146.3(14.1) or paragraph 146(16)(a) or 146.3(2)(e), is not used to transfer TFSAs between financial institutions.

10. How are taxes for overcontributing to a TFSA calculated?

The 1% tax on an excess TFSA amount is applicable from the first $1 of excess contributions. This 1% per-month tax is applicable on the highest excess TFSA amount in your account for each month in which an excess exists. Since it is based on the highest excess TFSA amount, this means that the 1% tax would be applicable for a particular month even if an excess amount was contributed and later withdrawn during the same month.

For any year in which tax is payable by the holder of a TFSA on an excess TFSA amount in their account, it is necessary to complete and file Form RC243, Tax-Free Savings Account (TFSA) Return 20_, and Form RC243-SCH-A, Schedule A — Excess TFSA Amounts.

11. Do individuals have to submit Form RC4288, Request for Taxpayer Relief?

A request for taxpayer relief only applies to the cancellation or waiver of late filing penalties or arrears interest that is based upon the issuance of a notice of assessment. As the TFSA program has yet to assess any TFSA taxes and issue a formal notice of assessment, a request for taxpayer relief on penalties and interest would not apply at this time. However, there are provisions in the Income Tax Act that allow the CRA to grant administrative relief on tax payable such as involving excess TFSA contributions.

The Income Tax Act authorizes the Minister to waive the tax imposed on excess TFSA contributions or contributions made to a TFSA while a non-resident of Canada, if the Minister is satisfied that

(a) the tax liability arose because of reasonable error, and

(b) the individual arranges, without delay, for the contributions to be withdrawn.

Individuals must submit their requests for administrative relief in writing and they will be reviewed on a case by case basis and any decision to grant or deny relief is based on the specific circumstances and a review of all the facts.

12. Can an individual file a notice of objection, using Form T400A, Objection — Income Tax Act?

A notice of objection should not be filed in response to the TFSA proposed return that was sent in early June, as this proposed return does not represent an actual tax assessment. If you disagree with the tax payable on the proposed TFSA return, send a letter explaining the facts and circumstances of your situation for the CRA to review.

However, if you have received a notice of assessment and disagree with the tax, we strongly recommend that you first call the CRA individual income tax enquiries line at 1-800-959-8281 to discuss the matter. Many disputes are resolved this way.

If you still disagree, you can make a formal objection by sending a completed Form T400A, Objection — Income Tax Act, or a signed letter to the Chief of Appeals at your tax services office or tax centre.

You can file an objection for many reasons, such as:

- you disagree with an assessment you have received indicating taxes are owed; or
- there is a dispute over how we have interpreted the income tax law.

Form T400-A, Objection — Income Tax Act can only be filed with the CRA once you have received a notice of assessment.

The time limit for filing an objection is the later of the following two dates:

- one year after the date of the return's filing deadline; or
- 90 days after the day we mailed the notice of assessment or notice of determination.

Refer to publication P148, Resolving Your Dispute: Objection and Appeal Rights under the Income Tax Act for additional information.

13. Where does the CRA obtain information on an individual's TFSA?

As of February 2010, financial institutions were required to electronically file to the CRA information with respect to TFSA accounts opened in 2009. This information will be filed annually. The information provided allows the CRA to calculate and advise individuals of their unused TFSA contribution room and also to proactively identify individuals potentially subject to the TFSA excess contribution tax.

14. The TFSA proposed return I received indicates an over-contribution of $30,000 which results in a tax owing of $300. There is no way I contributed anywhere near $30,000. How did the CRA calculate the amount owing?

The tax of 1% is applicable for each month that an excess amount existed in the account. So, the tax payable is partly based on excess contributions to a TFSA but also partly based on how many months those excess amounts remained in the account.

For example, an excess contribution of $3,000 made in March 2009 and left in the account through the remainder of 2009 would result in an excess tax of $300 based on the following calculation: $3,000 × 10 (number of months in over contribution) × 1%.

Additional example — an excess contribution of $5,000 made in July 2009 and left in the account through the remainder of 2009 would result in an excess tax of $300 based on the following calculation: $5,000 × 6 (number of months in over contribution) × 1%.

You have an excess TFSA amount at any time in a year if the total of all TFSA contributions you made in the year up to that time (other than a qualifying transfer or an exempt contribution) exceeds the total of your TFSA contribution room at the beginning of the year, plus any qualifying portion of a withdrawal made in the year up to that time.

If, at any time in a calendar month, there is an excess TFSA amount in your account, you are liable to a 1% tax on your highest excess TFSA amount in that month.

The 1% per-month tax will continue to apply for each month that the excess amount remains in the TFSA. It will continue to apply, on a pro-rata basis, until the earlier of:

- when the entire excess amount is withdrawn; or
- when the entire excess amount is absorbed by the addition of your unused TFSA contribution room for a later year.

15. Why was a tax for over-contribution established? Are some of the rules regarding TFSAs put in place to prevent people from misusing them; which rules and why?

When the TFSA legislation was drafted and subsequently enacted, various provisions were included to guard against or otherwise deter transactions which would have been abusive or otherwise intended to exploit or improperly take advantage of tax sheltering opportunities offered by a TFSA.

Without a tax on excess TFSA contributions in place, certain individuals could contribute rather large amounts of perhaps $50,000 or even $1 million or more and the interest, dividends or capital gains could escape taxation. As well, an individual could open separate TFSAs at 10 different financial institutions and contribute $5,000 to each, attempting to avoid detection by the CRA and improperly avoid paying tax on income or gains generated by these.

16. Does an individual need to file a tax return to make a legitimate contribution to a TFSA?

An individual can contribute to a TFSA without filing, or having filed, a tax return. An individual does not have to set up a TFSA or file a tax return to acquire contribution room. Please see TFSA eligibility criteria.

17. What should an individual do if they are already over their limit for 2010?

The CRA recommends that any individual who has already over contributed to their TFSA for 2010 withdraw the excess as soon as possible. Withdrawing the excess portion as soon as possible will reduce the amount of excess contribution tax payable in 2010.

CRA/Finance news release, Aug, 19, 2011: Ministers Shea and Flaherty offer flexibility to those who mistakenly over-contributed to their TFSAs

Our Government is pleased that Canadians are increasingly taking advantage of the Tax-Free Savings Account (TFSA) since its launch in 2009. Indeed, approximately 6.7 million Canadians have already opened a TFSA.

The Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) continues to work to increase awareness of TFSA guidelines among Canadians and financial institutions.

Of the nearly 6.7 million Canadians who have a TFSA, we are pleased that over 98 per cent have managed their TFSA accounts in accordance with the guidelines. This year, less than 1.5 per cent of TFSA holders will be receiving a letter from the CRA asking to provide further information about their accounts.

Our Government recognizes that some genuine confusion about the rules for the TFSA in these initial years will naturally occur. We understand that it may take time for some Canadians to learn about the program. The CRA will continue to build on existing communications and work with financial institutions to ensure that Canadians have access to all available information.

As a result, we would like to confirm that for the 2010 filing year, the second year of the program, we will once again be as flexible as possible in cases where a genuine misunderstanding of the TFSA contribution rules occurred.

Every TFSA holder who receives a letter indicating that they may have over-contributed will be able to ask the CRA to review their specific file and, where appropriate, waive taxes on excess contributions for 2010.

It is important that we hear from you if you want to be considered for this administrative relief.

Also, if you receive such a letter, please be advised it does not automatically mean that you will be subject to a tax. It simply means that more information is needed. The proposed TFSA return is not a notice of assessment. Individuals who received a proposed TFSA return have 60 days to respond.

If you have questions about your TFSA, you are encouraged to contact the CRA at 1-800-959-8281 or visit our Web site at: www.cra-arc.gc.ca.

Proposed Repeal — 207.06(3) — and other relieving amendments

Dept. of Finance letter 2012FIN370816, June 12, 2012: Mr. Darcy Moch & Ms. Penny Woolford, Co-Chairs, The Joint Committee on Taxation of The Canadian Bar Association, Ottawa, ON and The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants, Toronto, ON

Dear Mr. Moch and Ms. Woolford:

I am writing to follow up on our discussions with members of the Joint Committee regarding the Joint Committee's submission dated October 28, 2011 on the registered retirement savings plan and registered retirement income fund (RRSP) measures included in Budget 2011 which have now been implemented as part of Bill C-13.

Preliminary Matters

Your submission raises a number of issues, which range from broad policy considerations to very technical matters. We would, at the outset, like to thank the members of the Joint Committee for their comments on these measures, which clearly required significant time and thought.

As we noted during our most recent conference call, and as discussed in more detail below, we agree with some of the concerns raised and will be recommending to the Minister of Finance that technical amendments be introduced to modify the impact of some of the rules, particularly with regard to the prohibited investment rules. We will also recommend that the effective date of these technical amendments coincide with the effective date of the Budget 2011 measures.

General Comments

The contribution and benefit limits for registered pension plans (RPPs) and RRSPs are designed to permit most individuals to save enough, over a 35-year career, to obtain a pension equal to 70% of pre-retirement earnings, an amount generally considered sufficient to allow individuals to maintain their living standards in retirement. Individuals are permitted to contribute 18% of earnings annually to an RRSP or defined contribution RPP, up to a specified dollar limit ($22,970 and $23,820 respectively for 2012 [146(1)"RRSP deduction limit", 147.1(1)"money purchase limit" — ed.], equating to 18% of about $128,000 per year). Defined benefit RPPs are permitted to provide pension benefits of 2% of earnings per year of service, up to a specified dollar limit ($2,647 for 2012). The RPP and RRSP dollar limits are indexed to average wage growth. The RRSP and defined contribution RPP limits are designed to provide savings opportunities comparable to those available under the limits for defined benefit RPPs, based on several long-term economic assumptions. The RPP and RRSP limits are also integrated, in order to provide comparable retirement savings opportunities whether an individual saves in an RPP, an RRSP or both.

In short, the various tax-deferred retirement savings plans contemplated by the Income Tax Act (the Act) are intended to enable individuals, who may be members or annuitants under different plans, to achieve roughly similar levels of savings. Although the actual savings achieved will depend on the timing and level of contributions and the returns achieved compared to the assumptions upon which the retirement savings system is based, the main objective of the tax rules that govern RPP and RRSP savings is to facilitate retirement savings up to the limits described above.

The qualified investment rules have for many years contained parameters intended to prevent taxpayers from using RRSPs to shelter large amounts of investment or business income from tax, beyond the scope of these basic system parameters. For example, the pre-existing RRSP qualified investment rules contained explicit provisions directed at preventing the earning of income from employment or services inside a registered plan (regulations 4900(8) and (13) as they read prior to Bill C-13); and small business investments were subject to a general 10% test similar to the prohibited investment rules, subject to what were intended to operate as minor exceptions, e.g. for lower value investments ($25,000).

In addition to addressing RRSP strip transactions, the Budget 2011 measures were fundamentally intended to return the scope of RRSP savings to these intended parameters. Having said that, we acknowledge that some taxpayers face challenges responding to the new rules, creating a need for reasonable transitional rules, as well as some guidance with regard to the broad waiver powers provided to the Minister of National Revenue in relation to these rules.

On this latter point, for more information regarding the administrative positions and procedures of the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) in relation to the new rules, please refer to the Budget 2011 RRSPs questions and answers documents at www.cra-arc.gc.ca/tx/rgstrd/bdgt2011-eng.html and to CRA Rulings positions 2011-0418161E5 and 2011-0430141E5 (both dated February 3, 2012), which provide information on the rules and how to apply for a waiver of Part XI.01 taxes, including a (non-exhaustive) series of examples of situations in respect of which the CRA is favourably disposed to considering a waiver of taxes payable. These examples in particular respond to a number of common questions and concerns and we believe provide important administrative guidance to taxpayers in respect of the new rules.

We note that the CRA has advised us that the restriction in subsection 207.06(3), which requires an amount equal to the "advantage" to be distributed from the registered plan before the advantage tax is waived, could unduly limit the scope for exercising the waiver powers in Part XI.01. We agree and will recommend that subsection 207.06(3) be repealed and replaced by an additional paragraph in subsection 207.06(2) that allows the full or partial removal of the advantage amount from a registered plan to be considered as a factor in determining whether some or all of the tax should be waived.

The balance of this letter addresses areas of your submission where we agree that technical amendments are warranted.

Grandfathering

You have requested several changes to the transitional rules for these measures, including complete grandfathering for pre-March 23, 2011 investments. The idea of complete grandfathering — that is, allowing taxpayers with pre-March 23, 2011 investments to be completely exempt from the new rules — raises serious fairness concerns. It would seem inappropriate to allow taxpayers to continue to enjoy indefinite tax-deferred savings benefits well beyond the limits contemplated by the tax system.

The improvements to the transitional rules for these measures reflect to a large extent comments made by members of the tax community and taxpayers in general, and provide a reasonable adjustment period for taxpayers, while ensuring that the basic policy intent of the RRSP system applies consistently going forward. Having said this, given that the transitional rules now require the Part I recognition of income and gains on prohibited investments, your suggestion that the current ten-year period in the transitional rules [207.01(1)"transitional prohibited investment benefit" — ed.] should be made indefinite has been considered and will be proposed. Consequently, it is intended that legislative amendments be put before Parliament to remove the termination date for transitional prohibited investment benefits.

Breadth of "significant interest"; use of arm's length vs. related; and the scope of subparagraph (b)(ii) of the definition "prohibited investment"

You raise a number of issues relating to circumstances where the legislation causes an investment to be a "prohibited investment" [207.01(1) — ed.] in circumstances where the actual registered plan investment is in the nature of a portfolio investment. We note that the arm's length test is used throughout the Act, but recognize that it is not as bright-line a test as "related" and that, while many taxpayers who currently hold prohibited investments appear to be part of a group with very close ties to the investment entity, it is possible to hold a portfolio position that, unknown to the taxpayer, is in fact a prohibited investment for the taxpayer's RRSP due to the combination of family holdings and/or non-arm's length relationships. We agree that the scope of the existing definition "prohibited investment" may be too broad in certain cases and could apply in circumstances where a particular individual's registered plan holds a comparatively small investment in, for example, an investment fund controlled by their employer or by the employer of a family member.

Consequently we will recommend that subparagraph (b)(ii) of the definition "prohibited investment" in subsection 207.01[(1)] of the Act be amended to eliminate the words "or with a person or partnership described in subparagraph (i)". This change will generally have the effect of preventing an investment from being considered a "prohibited investment" in circumstances where the RRSP annuitant both lacks a "significant interest" in the corporation, partnership or trust in question and deals at arm's length with the corporation, trust, or partnership. (Under the existing definition, even if both those conditions are satisfied, a small portfolio investment could still be prohibited for an individual if the corporation, trust or partnership did not deal at arm's length with another corporation, trust or partnership, and the individual had a "significant interest" (which could in reality represent holdings by a family member) only in the latter.).

We note more generally the potential for an individual's registered plan to hold an investment that is technically a "prohibited investment" in a variety of circumstances where their direct investment through their registered plan is small in terms of value, relative to the capitalization of the entity, and is moreover substantially the same as the investment of numerous other arm's length parties in the same entity. In policy terms, the prohibited investment rules are intended to prevent the acquisition by an individual's registered plan of closely-held investments (in relation to the individual), or investments that carry a significant risk of being designed with a view to streaming disproportionate returns into a registered plan (effectively circumventing contribution limits) or that facilitate an intentional de-valuation of the investment (in order to avoid a later income inclusion).

In order to better target the prohibited investment rules, we will therefore recommend that income tax amendments be introduced to exclude from "prohibited investment" status a registered plan investment if all of the following are satisfied:

1. persons who deal at arm's length with the controlling individual of the registered plan hold at least

   a. 90% of the "equity value" (as defined in subsection 122.1(1) of the Act);

   b. 90% of the total of the "equity value" plus the outstanding debt of the organization; and

   c. 90% of the total votes associated with the "equity" (as defined in subsection 122.1(1) of the Act);

2. one or more persons who deal at arm's length with the controlling individual own equity that has terms and conditions that are substantially similar to the terms and conditions of the investment that is held by the registered plan, and if that equity owned by those arm's length persons was acquired by a particular individual, that individual would be a specified shareholder or a specified unitholder of the organization determined, if the class of equity owned by the controlling individual is separate from the class owned by those arm's length persons, as if those classes of equity were one class;

3. the controlling individual deals at arm's length with the organization; and

4. none of the main purposes of the controlling individual in the acquisition or holding of the investment by the registered plan is to obtain an advantage (other than income or capital gains on the investment).

We recognize that the application of the above four tests may present some complexity, particularly in comparison to entity-specific carve-outs or a more general relaxation of the prohibited investment definition. However, the most prevalent factor in the aggressive tax planning we observed in this area was the ownership and control of a significant portion of a particular business or fund. We are therefore recommending a test of general application intended to enable the small number of registered plan investors who technically have a prohibited investment to nonetheless demonstrate (based on these four tests) that they have a portfolio-style interest in a particular qualified investment and that they are not in a position to manipulate the valuation or income distribution in respect of that investment. This test avoids creating a special exception for any particular category of qualified investments, providing a more neutral basis on which to satisfy the policy objectives. At the same time, the test is easier to satisfy in that it focuses on the relationship between the controlling individual and the organization and less on the relationships between the controlling individual and others.

Fund start-up and wind-up

Another issue that is related to the definition "prohibited investment" [207.01(1) — ed.] that has been raised by some stakeholders is the difficulty of avoiding "prohibited investment" status for the first few investors, or the last few investors, in an investment fund that is intended to be (or was) widely held. Existing paragraph 5000(b) of the Income Tax Regulations provides a time-limited exclusion from the prohibited investment rules for mutual funds that substantially comply with National Instrument 81-102 of the Canadian Securities Administrators (NI 81-102). This exclusion accommodates traditional mutual fund investments in their start-up phase, where potentially a relatively small ordinary course investment by a registered plan could represent over 10% of a mutual fund for a temporary period. Based on representations received since Budget 2011, we are prepared to recommend two expansions of this exception. First, we will recommend that this measure also apply in respect of registered investments (which are required to hold only qualified investments for the type of registered plan in respect of which they are registered) provided that they meet a basic diversification test and are not established with a tax avoidance objective. Second, we will recommend that this exclusion be expanded to also accommodate a reasonable winding-up period for the funds (i.e. NI 81-102 funds and registered investments) that qualify for the start-up period exclusion. We anticipate that this could be accomplished by adding a reference in subparagraph 5000(b)(ii) to the last two taxation years that precede the dissolution of an NI 81-102 mutual fund trust or corporation, or a registered investment, to the extent that that dissolution was planned to occur during that period.

Uncertainty of "open market"

You highlight the potential uncertainty regarding the meaning of the phrase "would not have occurred in an open market" in paragraph (b) of the definition "advantage" in subsection 207.01(1). We recognize that the phrase is potentially quite broad (if interpreted as only excluding transactions on stock exchanges) and has created some uncertainty. The term is intended to describe a transaction that does not occur on a commercially reasonable basis (such as one, for example, in which the parties are acting in concert to achieve a tax benefit). The term is intended to focus on transaction terms that are not commercially reasonable having regard to all the circumstances. We will therefore recommend that clause (b)(i)(A) be amended to refer to a transaction or event or a series of transactions or events which would not have occurred in a normal commercial or investment context where parties deal at arm's length and act prudently, knowledgeably and willingly.

We note, however, that in policy terms, this clarification will not accommodate estate freeze transactions, which generally involve the creation and issuance of a nominally-valued class of shares in a business with significant value, and which could not be considered commercially reasonable transactions for the purposes of these rules. In fact, such estate freeze transactions involve a type of internal capital restructuring to which the advantage rules were designed to apply in the registered plan context.

Definition "swap transaction"

You raise a number of concerns with the definition "swap transaction" [207.01(1) — ed.]. We consider the effective prohibition on swap transactions to be an important improvement to the integrity of the registered plan regime, and we do not foresee a practical manner of distinguishing between occasional transactions in respect of which valuation is readily, objectively, and prospectively established, and those in which often minor changes in the value — or trading price — are exploited for tax planning purposes. We also note that taxpayers may still achieve similar results — without the tax planning benefits — by selling one property outside their registered plan and acquiring it on the open market inside their registered plan. However, we do agree that the exception in paragraph (c) of the definition "swap transaction" could be more clearly worded to ensure that both the removal of the prohibited or non-qualified investment, and the transfer in, generally of cash, on a swap to remove a prohibited investment is properly excluded from the ambit of the definition "swap transaction". We are prepared to recommend an amendment to clarify this intended result.

Property becoming a Prohibited Investment

Your submission notes that a deemed disposition rule for investments that become prohibited would help the rules operate more clearly. We agree that a deemed disposition and reacquisition of a property at the time immediately before it becomes a prohibited investment — similar to the existing rule in subsection 207.04(5) that applies when a property ceases to be a prohibited investment — would provide clearer results, consistent with the policy intent of the measures, and we will recommend the introduction of such a rule.

Conclusion

We would recommend that all these amendments apply generally after March 22, 2011 and that they be included in a package of technical amendments that we would propose for release for comment at an early opportunity. Given that these rules generally apply also to tax-free savings accounts (TFSAs), we will recommend that the above changes apply also in the TFSA context where relevant. We trust this statement of our intentions is helpful.

Finally, I note that we have also been involved with discussions with a number of other organizations in relation to issues relating to the prohibited investment rules, and that these other organizations will have an interest in the comments we are providing in this letter to you. Accordingly, I have taken the liberty of copying each of these organizations on this correspondence. We look forward to continuing the helpful dialogue we have with the Joint Committee regarding Canadian income tax law and policy matters.

Yours sincerely,

Part XI.4 — Tax on Excess EPSP Amounts

207.8 (1) Excess EPSP amount — In this Part, "excess EPSP amount", of a specified employee for a taxation year in respect of an employer, means the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the portion of the total of all amounts paid by the employer of the specified employee (or by a corporation with which the employer does not deal at arm's length) to a trust governed by an employees profit sharing plan that is allocated for the year to the specified employee; and

B is the specified employee's total income for the year from employment with the employer computed without reference to paragraph 6(1)(d) and sections 7 and 8.

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

(2) Tax payable — If a specified employee has an excess EPSP amount for a taxation year, the specified employee shall pay, for the year, a tax equal to the amount determined by the formula

where

A is 29%;

B is

(i) if the specified employee is resident in the Province of Quebec at the end of the year, 0%,

(ii) if the specified employee is resident in a province other than Quebec at the end of the year, the highest provincial personal income tax rate that applies for the year to a resident of the province, or

(iii) in any other case, 14%; and

C is the total of all excess EPSP amounts of the specified employee for the year.

Related Provisions: 8(1)(o.2) — Deduction from income to prevent double tax; 207.8(3) — Waiver or cancellation of tax.

(3) Waiver or cancellation — If a specified employee would otherwise be liable to pay a tax under subsection (2), the Minister may waive or cancel all or part of the liability if the Minister considers it just and equitable to do so having regard to all the circumstances.

Application: The March 29, 2012 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Federal Budget), cl. (13), will add Part XI.4 (s. 207.8), applicable in respect of payments made after March 28, 2012 to a trust governed by an employees profit sharing plan. Cl. 14 reads as follows:

(14) That paragraph (13) not apply in respect of payments made before 2013 to a trust governed by an employees profit sharing plan pursuant to a legal obligation arising under a written agreement or arrangement entered into before March 29, 2012.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 29, 2012: Employees Profit Sharing Plans

Employees Profit Sharing Plans (EPSPs) [144(1) — ed.] are trust arrangements that enable employers to share profits with employees, assist employees to save, and better align the economic interests of management and labour. Under an EPSP, an employer may make tax-deductible contributions to a trust [144(5), 20(1)(w) — ed.] and the trustee is required to allocate to beneficiaries each year all employer contributions, profits from trust property, capital gains and losses, and certain amounts in respect of forfeitures [144(1)"employees profit sharing plan"(b) — ed.]. These EPSP allocations, with certain exceptions, are included in computing the income of the beneficiaries for the taxation year in which they are allocated [144(3), (4) — ed.]. Once amounts are allocated, payments are made by the trustee to the beneficiaries in accordance with the terms of the plan (for example, immediately, after a minimum vesting period, or on retirement or termination). Because the allocations are taxable, payments out of the trust are generally not subject to tax when received by the beneficiaries [144(6), (7) — ed.].

Recently, EPSPs have been used increasingly as a means for some business owners to direct profits to members of their families in order to reduce or defer the payment of income tax on these profits. Budget 2011 announced that the Government would review EPSPs and undertake consultations to ensure that any changes to the tax rules (to limit the potential for abuse) continue to accommodate appropriate uses of EPSPs. The consultations took place from August to October 2011. Participants in the consultations generally recognized the importance of having reasonable limitations on EPSP contributions, particularly in respect of non-arm's length employees.

To ensure that EPSPs are used for their intended purposes, Budget 2012 proposes a targeted measure to discourage excessive employer contributions. This proposal introduces a special tax [207.8(2) — ed.] payable by a specified employee[2] on an "excess EPSP amount". In general terms, an "excess EPSP amount" [207.8(1) — ed.] will be the portion of an employer's EPSP contribution, allocated by the trustee to a specified employee, that exceeds 20% of the specified employee's salary received in the year by the specified employee from the employer.

The special tax will be made up of two components. The first component [207.8(2)A — ed.] will be equal to the top federal marginal tax rate of 29%. The second component [207.8(2)B — ed.] will be equal to the top marginal tax rate of the province of residence of the specified employee[3] and will be shared with provinces and territories participating in a Tax Collection Agreement. A new deduction will be introduced [8(1)(o.2) — ed.] to ensure that an excess EPSP amount is not also subject to regular income tax. A specified employee will, however, not be able to claim any other deductions or credits in respect of an excess EPSP amount.

A mechanism will be introduced [207.8(3) — ed.] to authorize the Minister of National Revenue to waive or cancel the application of these excess EPSP amount rules if the Minister considers that it is just and equitable to do so, having regard to all the circumstances. In such cases, the normal rules will apply.

This measure will apply in respect of EPSP contributions made by an employer on or after March 29, 2012, other than contributions made before 2013 pursuant to a legally binding obligation arising under a written agreement or arrangement entered into before March 29, 2012.

[2] "Specified employee" is defined in subsection 248(1) of the Income Tax Act and generally includes an employee who has a significant equity interest in their employer or who does not deal at arm's length with their employer.

[3] The second component will be zero if the specified employee's province of residence is Quebec.

(b) the amount deducted under subsection 66.4(2) in computing the person's income for the year to the extent that it may reasonably be considered to be attributable to the property, and

(ii) the period of time during which the person's interest in the income attributable to the property may reasonably be expected to continue is

(B) in any other case, less than 10 years,

(iii) the person's interest in the income attributable to the property, expressed as a percentage of production for any period, may reasonably be expected to be reduced substantially,

(iv) another person has a right under an arrangement to acquire, at any time, the property or a portion thereof or a similar property from the person and it is reasonable to consider that one of the main reasons for the arrangement, or any series of transactions or events that includes the arrangement, was to reduce or postpone tax that would, but for this subparagraph, be payable under this Part, or

(b) an interest in a partnership or trust that holds a Canadian resource property where it is reasonable to consider that one of the main reasons for the existence of the interest is to reduce or postpone the tax that would, but for this paragraph, be payable under this Part,

but does not include

(c) an interest in respect of a property that was acquired by the person solely in consideration of the person's undertaking under an agreement to incur Canadian exploration expense or Canadian development expense in respect of the property and, where the agreement so provides, to acquire gas or oil well equipment (as defined in subsection 1104(2) of the Income Tax Regulations) in respect of the property,

(c.1) an interest in respect of a property that was retained by the person under an agreement under which another person obtained an absolute or conditional right to acquire another interest in respect of the property, if the other interest is not carved-out property of the other person because of paragraph (c),

(ii) the person is a trust, governed by a registered retirement savings plan or a registered retirement income fund, who acquired the interest, directly or indirectly, from an individual or the spouse or common-law partner, or former spouse or common-law partner, of the individual who was, immediately after the interest was acquired, a beneficiary under the trust governed by the fund or plan;

(I) whose interest, at that time, in the other trust was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, either by it or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income, and

(iv) a person or partnership that

(A) is a designated beneficiary under the other trust because of paragraph (c) or (e), or

(I) identical to its interest (referred to in this clause as the "particular interest") as a beneficiary under the other trust,

(II) acquired from each person or partnership from whom it acquired the particular interest, and

(III) held, at all times after the later of October 1, 1987 and the day on which the particular interest was created, by the same persons or partnerships that held the particular interest at those times; or

(e) a particular partnership any of the members of which is at that time

(i) another partnership, except if

(A) each such other partnership is a Canadian partnership,

(C) the interest of each member, of each such other partnership, that is a person exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by that member or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income, and

(ii) a non-resident person,

(iii) a non-resident-owned investment corporation,

(iv) another trust that is, under paragraph (d), a designated beneficiary of the particular trust or that would, under paragraph (d), be a designated beneficiary of the particular trust if the other trust were at that time a beneficiary under the particular trust whose interest as a beneficiary under the particular trust were

(B) held, at all times after the later of October 1, 1987 and the day on which the particular partnership's interest as a beneficiary under the particular trust was created, by the same persons or partnerships that held that interest of the particular partnership at those times, or

(v) a person exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income except if the interest of the particular partnership in the particular trust was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by the particular partnership or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 210 is amended so that a number of definitions that apply for the purposes of Part XII.2 are now found in new subsection 210(1). In addition, new subsection 210(2) replaces section 210.1, which is being repealed.

New subsection 210(1) contains the definitions "designated beneficiary" (previously found in section 210) and "designated income" (previously found in subsection 210.2(2)). These definitions apply in Part XII.2.

Under paragraphs (a) and (b) of the definition "designated beneficiary", a designated beneficiary includes, respectively, a non-resident person and a non-resident-owned investment corporation. Under paragraph (c) of the definition, a person exempt from tax under Part I of the Act is treated as a designated beneficiary because of owning an interest in a trust (acquired from a beneficiary under the trust) unless, generally speaking, no taxable entity previously owned that interest. Under paragraph (d) of the definition, a trust is a designated beneficiary of another trust if a beneficiary of the trust includes, generally, either a person or partnership described in any of paragraphs (a), (b), (c) or (e) of the definition or another trust (other than a testamentary trust resident in Canada). Under paragraph (e) of the definition, a partnership is a designated beneficiary of a trust if a member of the partnership is a person described in paragraph (a), (b) or (d) of the definition, another partnership or a person exempt from tax under Part I by reason of subsection 149(1).

The opening words of the definition "designated beneficiary" are amended so that the references in the definition to a "trust" under which there may be a designated beneficiary are references to a "particular trust".

Paragraph (c) of the definition "designated beneficiary" is amended to clarify that a designated beneficiary of a particular trust includes, except as provided in subparagraphs (c)(i) and (ii) of the definition, a person who is, because of subsection 149(1), exempt from tax under Part I on all or part of their taxable income and who acquired an interest in the particular trust after October 1, 1987 directly or indirectly from a beneficiary under the particular trust.

Paragraph (d) of the definition "designated beneficiary" is amended so that a designated beneficiary of a particular trust includes another trust (in this commentary referred to as the "other trust") having as a beneficiary any one of the following persons or partnerships:

- under subparagraphs (d)(i) and (ii) of the definition, a non-resident person (including a trust) or a non-resident-owned investment corporation;
- under subparagraphs (d)(iii) of the definition, any trust, other than
  - — a testamentary trust (however, note that if the testamentary trust were non-resident, the other trust would be treated as a designated beneficiary of the particular trust because of subparagraph (d)(i)),
  - — a mutual fund trust,
  - — a trust that is exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income (however, note that under subparagraph (d)(iv), described below, such a trust may cause the other trust to be a designated beneficiary of the particular trust), and
  - — a trust none of the beneficiaries under which is, at that time, a designated beneficiary under it and whose interest, at that time, in the other trust was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, either by it or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income;
- under subparagraph (d)(iv) of the definition, a person (including a trust) or partnership that
  - — is a designated beneficiary under the other trust because of paragraph (c) of the definition (i.e., a person who is, because of subsection 149(1), exempt from tax under Part I on all or part of their taxable income and who acquired an interest in the particular trust after October 1, 1987 directly or indirectly from a beneficiary under the particular trust) or because of paragraph (e) of the definition, or

- would, based on the assumptions set out in clause (d)(iv)(B), be a designated beneficiary under the particular trust because of paragraph (c) or (e) of the definition.

Note that a person or partnership that is a beneficiary of the other trust need only be described in any of one of subparagraphs (d)(i) to (iv) in order for the other trust to be a designated beneficiary of the particular trust. Note also that references in paragraph (d) of the definition to the expression "resident in Canada" are removed as these are unnecessary given that paragraph (a) of the definition provides that a non-resident person is a designated beneficiary.

Paragraph (d) of the definition is also amended to provide that the other trust will not be treated, under that paragraph, as a designated beneficiary of the particular trust if it is a testamentary trust, a mutual fund trust, or a trust that is exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income. However, these excluded trusts may be treated as designated beneficiaries of the particular trust under paragraphs (a) or (c) of that definition (e.g., a non-resident testamentary trust).

Amended paragraph (e) of the definition provides, in new subparagraph (e)(i), that a designated beneficiary of a particular trust includes a particular partnership any of the members of which is another partnership. However, no such other partnership will cause the particular partnership to be a designated beneficiary under the particular partnership if

- all such other partnerships are Canadian partnerships (as defined in subsection 102(1)),
- the interest of each such other partnership in the particular partnership is held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by the other partnership or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income,
- the interest of each member, of each such other partnership, that is a person exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by that member or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income, and
- the particular partnership's beneficial interest in the particular trust is held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by the particular partnership or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income.

Under subparagraphs (e)(ii) to (iv), a particular partnership will be a designated beneficiary under a particular trust if any one of the partnership's members is a non-resident person, a non-resident-owned investment corporation, or a specified person. For this purpose, a specified person means a trust that is a designated beneficiary of the particular trust because of paragraph (d) of the definition or a trust that would be such a designated beneficiary on the following assumptions: the other trust was at that time a beneficiary under the particular trust whose interest as a beneficiary under the particular trust were

- acquired from each person or partnership from whom the particular partnership acquired its interest as a beneficiary under the particular trust, and
- held at all times after the later of October 1, 1987 and the day on which the particular partnership's interest as a beneficiary under the particular trust was created, by the same persons or partnerships that held at those times that interest of the particular partnership.

New subparagraph (e)(iv) of the definition provides that a particular partnership will be a designated beneficiary of a particular trust if any of the members of the particular partnership is a person exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all or part of its taxable income, unless the interest of the particular partnership in the particular trust was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by the particular partnership or by persons who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax under Part I on all of their taxable income.

Note that, for the purposes of the definition "designated beneficiary", a new rule in section 132.2 applies in respect of certain trust units acquired by a beneficiary under a "qualifying exchange" (as defined in subsection 132.2(1)). For more detail, see the commentary on section 132.2.

Note as well that paragraph 210.2(3)(b) is amended to ensure that subsection 210.2(3) does not apply to a non-resident person that would be a designated beneficiary under the trust if the definition "designated beneficiary" in subsection 210(1) were read without reference to its paragraph (a).

"designated income", of a trust for a taxation year, means the amount that would be the income of the trust for the year determined under section 3 if

(a) this Act were read without reference to subsections 104(6), (12) and (30);

(b) the trust had no income other than taxable capital gains from dispositions described in paragraph (c) and incomes from

(i) real or immovable properties in Canada (other than Canadian resource properties),

(ii) timber resource properties,

(iii) Canadian resource properties (other than properties acquired by the trust before 1972), and

(iv) businesses carried on in Canada;

(c) the only taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses referred to in paragraph 3(b) were from

(i) dispositions of taxable Canadian property, and

(ii) dispositions of particular property (other than property described in any of subparagraphs 128.1(4)(b)(i) to (iii)), or property for which the particular property is substituted, that was transferred at any particular time to a particular trust in circumstances in which subsection 73(1) or 107.4(3) applied, if

(A) it is reasonable to conclude that the property was so transferred in anticipation that a person beneficially interested at the particular time in the particular trust would subsequently cease to reside in Canada, and a person beneficially interested at the particular time in the particular trust did subsequently cease to reside in Canada, or

(B) when the property was so transferred, the terms of the particular trust satisfied the conditions in subparagraph 73(1.01)(c)(i) or (iii), and it is reasonable to conclude that the transfer was made in connection with the cessation of residence, on or before the transfer, of a person who was, at the time of the transfer, beneficially interested in the particular trust and a spouse or common-law partner, as the case may be, of the transferor of the property to the particular trust; and

(d) the only losses referred to in paragraph 3(d) were losses from sources described in any of subparagraphs (b)(i) to (iv).

Technical Notes (July 2010): The tax under Part XII.2 of the Act is calculated by reference to a trust's "designated income" (as determined under subsection 210.2(2)).

Subsection 210.2(2) is being replaced (for more detail, see the commentary below) and the definition "designated income" is now found in subsection 210(1).

Paragraphs (a), (b) and (d) of the new definition "designated income" in subsection 210(1) are largely unchanged from the equivalent provisions found in repealed subsection 210.2(2).

Paragraph (c) of the new definition replaces paragraph 210.2(2)(b). Under subparagraph (c)(i), designated income is calculated by reference to taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses from dispositions of the trust's taxable Canadian property. Subparagraph (c)(ii) provides that a trust's designated income is also calculated by reference to taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses from a disposition by the trust of particular property (other than property described in any of subparagraphs 128.1(4)(b)(i) to (iii)).

In this context, particular property (or property for which the particular property is a substitute) must be property (referred to in this commentary as the "transferred property") that was transferred to a particular trust in circumstances in which subsection 73(1) or 107.4(3) applied. This condition will be met whether the particular trust is the trust in respect of which the designated income is being determined, or any other trust to which the transferred property was transferred in circumstances in which subsection 73(1) or 107.4(3) applied and that subsequently transferred, directly or indirectly, the property to the trust in respect of which the designated income is being determined.

In addition, clauses (c)(ii)(A) and (B) of the definition require

- that it be reasonable to conclude that the transferred property was, at a particular time, transferred to the particular trust in anticipation of the emigration of a person beneficially interested at the particular time in the particular trust and that a person (whether the anticipated person or another) beneficially interested at that time in the particular trust subsequently ceases to reside in Canada, or
- at the particular time that the transferred property was transferred to the particular trust, that the terms of the particular trust satisfy the conditions in subparagraph 73(1.01)(c)(i) or (iii) and that it be reasonable to conclude that the transfer was made in connection with the cessation of residence, on or before that time, of a person who was, at that time, beneficially interested in the particular trust and a spouse or common-law partner, as the case may be, of the transferor of the transferred property to the particular trust.

These amendments generally apply for the 1996 and subsequent taxation years. Subparagraph (c)(ii) of the definition as described above applies, in effect, to dispositions, of property by a trust, that occur after December 20, 2002.

Related Provisions: 248(5) — Substituted property.

(2) Tax not payable — No tax is payable under this Part for a taxation year by a trust that was throughout the year

(a) a testamentary trust;

(b) a mutual fund trust;

(c) exempt from tax under Part I because of subsection 149(1);

(d) a trust to which paragraph (a), (a.1) or (c) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1) applies; or

(e) non-resident.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 210.1 provides a list of types of trusts to which Part XII.2 does not apply.

Section 210.1 is being repealed. The list of types of trusts to which Part XII.2 does not apply is now found in new subsection 210(2). New subsection 210(2), consequential on the amendments to the definition "designated beneficiary" (described in the commentary above), also clarifies that it applies only to determine to which trusts the special Part XII.2 tax does not apply. Subsection 210(2) does not apply, for example, to determine whether a trust referred to in that subsection may have a designated beneficiary.

Note as well that paragraph 210.2(3)(b) is amended to update its structure to conform to modern drafting standards.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 135, will amend s. 210 to read as above, applicable to 1996 et seq., except that para. (c) of the definition "designated income" in subsec. 210(1) is to be read

(a) in respect of dispositions that occur after October 1, 1996 and before December 21, 2002, as follows:

(c) the only taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses referred to in paragraph 3(b) were from dispositions of taxable Canadian property; and

and

(b) in respect of dispositions that occur in a 1996 taxation year and before October 2, 1996, as follows:

(c) the only taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses referred to in paragraph 3(b) were from dispositions of property that would have been taxable Canadian property if, at no time in the year, the trust had been resident in Canada; and

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 11, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of April 11, 2003, concerning the proposed definition "designated beneficiary" in Part XII.2 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"), contained in the legislative proposals relating to income tax released by the Finance Minister on December 20, 2002. I would also like to acknowledge our meeting of May 13, 2003 and your subsequent discussions with Mr. Grant Nash of this Division.

As you know, Part XII.2 of the Act seeks to avoid the minimization of tax on specified Canadian-source income earned by non-residents through a Canadian-resident trust. Part XII.2 is also intended to discourage arrangements between taxable and tax-exempt beneficiaries designed to allow taxable income earned by a trust to be flowed through to tax-exempt beneficiaries after the acquisition of the trust unit by the tax-exempt beneficiary from the taxable beneficiary. Part XII.2, therefore, plays an important role in protecting the Canadian tax base and ensuring that taxpayers that use trust intermediaries to hold property do not obtain income advantages that are not available to taxpayers that hold such property directly.

Part XII.2 tax is levied at the trust level, but generally is payable only where a trust has a "designated beneficiary". Under the proposed definition "designated beneficiary" contained in the legislative proposals, a designated beneficiary under a particular trust would include a particular partnership if any member of the particular partnership were another partnership. In your letter, you are seeking a modification to that definition so that the particular partnership would not be treated as a designated beneficiary of the trust if it were a Canadian partnership the membership interests in which trade on a prescribed stock exchange.

We have considered the arrangement that you have identified and a number of other arrangements involving partnerships that invest directly, or indirectly through other partnerships, in trusts. In light of these deliberations, we are prepared to recommend modifications to the definition "designated beneficiary", but we are of the view that in dealing with partnership arrangements under Part XII.2 it is appropriate that partnerships be required to ascertain the characteristics of their members in order for a partnership to avoid characterization as a designated beneficiary under a trust. Accordingly, the modifications that we would support in this context would be narrower than those that you proposed.

In particular, a particular partnership that is a beneficiary of a trust will continue to be treated as a designated beneficiary under the trust if any of its members is another partnership. However, we will recommend that any such other partnership, that is a member of the particular partnership, will not cause the particular partnership to be a designated beneficiary under the trust if:

- that other partnership is a Canadian partnership (as defined by subsection 248(1) of the Act),
- that other partnership is a limited partnership whose interest in the particular partnership is held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by it or by persons ("eligible persons") who were exempt because of subsection 149(1) from Part I tax on all of their taxable income,
- the interest of each member, of the other partnership, that is a person exempt because of subsection 149(1) from Part I tax on all or part of its taxable income was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by that member or by eligible persons, and
- the beneficial interest of the particular partnership in the trust was held, at all times after the day on which the interest was created, by the particular partnership or by eligible persons.

Based on our discussions with you, we are also prepared to recommend that these modifications be effective for the 2001 and subsequent taxation years.

Thank you for writing to us on this matter.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 13, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in reply to your letters to Mr. Len Farber of March 5 and March 9, 2001 and your letter of April 10, 2001 to Mr. Grant Nash of this Division, concerning the rules for designated beneficiaries in section 210 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

The definition "designated beneficiary" in section 210 applies for the purposes of Part XII.2 of the Act. One of the objectives of Part XII.2 tax is to prevent the minimization of tax on specified Canadian-source income that would otherwise arise where a Canadian trust's income is distributed to a non-resident and is subject only to Part XIII tax. Part XII.2 tax is also meant to discourage transactions between taxable and tax-exempt beneficiaries designed to allow taxable income earned by a trust to be flowed-through to tax-exempt beneficiaries after the acquisition of a trust unit by the tax-exempt beneficiary from the taxable beneficiaries.

We understand that you have seen a sanitized version of two earlier letters issued by us [below — ed.] in which we agreed to recommend changes to the definition "designated beneficiary" in section 210 of the Act. Under the structure described in the earlier letters ("double-tier structure"), registered pension plans and other investors would invest in units issued by a unit trust ("top fund"). The top fund would in turn invest in units issued by other trusts ("bottom funds"). In the earlier letter, we agreed to recommend changes so that the top fund would not be considered a designated beneficiary of the bottom fund solely because the beneficiaries of the top fund include a person exempt from tax under Part I of the Act. However, under the recommended changes, a top fund would be considered a designated beneficiary of the bottom fund if the top fund acquired its interest in the bottom fund directly or indirectly from another beneficiary of the bottom fund, unless the interest was owned, at all times after the creation of the bottom fund, by the top fund or a person exempt from tax under Part I of the Act because of subsection 149(1).

You have asked that we clarify whether it was intended that the proposed changes would accommodate structures of more than two levels of trust ("multiple-tier structures"). In particular, you have described a structure in which the units of the top fund are held by a third unit trust (i.e. pooled fund arrangement) the units of which are in turn held by other trusts none of which is a designated beneficiary of the third trust. You have also indicated that similar pooled fund arrangements may be used involving multiple levels of unit trusts.

In light of the policy objectives of Part XII.2, we are prepared to recommend a further change to the definition "designated beneficiary". In particular, we will recommend that a top fund be treated as a designated beneficiary of a bottom fund, subject to the exceptions described below, where the top fund acquires its interest directly from the bottom fund or directly or indirectly from another beneficiary of the bottom fund. However, the top fund would not be a designated beneficiary of the bottom fund at a particular time where it meets two conditions. The first condition would be that its interest in the bottom fund be owned at all times after the date on which the bottom fund was created by the top fund or a person exempt from tax under Part I because of subsection 149(1). The second condition would be that none of the beneficiaries of the top fund be a designated beneficiary of the top fund. We will further recommend that these amendments be effective for the 1996 and subsequent taxation years.

Thank you for writing to us on this matter.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 9, 1999:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of October 20, 1999 concerning the definition "designated beneficiary" in section 210 of the Income Tax Act. I apologize for the delay in responding to you.

I am attaching a copy of our earlier letter to you of September 3, 1996 in which we agree to recommend changes to the definition "designated beneficiary" so that Part XII.2 tax is not exigible in the circumstances of certain kinds of "tiering" arrangements involving trusts (such as, for example, those arrangements described in your letters of October 20, 1999 and June 10, 1996). It continues to be our intention to recommend inclusion of this amendment in a future technical bill.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 25, 1998:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in reply to your letter of May 13, 1998 concerning the rules for designated beneficiaries in section 210 of the Income Tax Act. I understand that you have had access to a sanitized version of a letter from this Division on the same subject dated September 3, 1996.

Your letter contemplates a structure involving a number of different trusts resident in Canada and partnerships. Under this structure, a trust governed by a registered pension plan and other investors resident in Canada will have interests in a trust (the "middle trust"). The middle trust will invest in units issued by a unit trust (the "bottom trust"). In addition, a registered charity and other taxpayers resident in Canada will invest in a partnership which, in turn, will invest in units issued by the bottom trust. We also assume from the comments in your letter that neither the middle trust nor the partnership will acquire units of the bottom trust from other unitholders of the trust, but will instead acquire their units directly from the bottom trust.

One of the objectives of Part XII.2 tax is to prevent the minimization of tax on specified Canadian-source income that would otherwise arise where a Canadian trust's income is distributed to a non-resident and is subject only to Part XIII tax. Part XII.2 tax is also meant to discourage transactions between taxable and tax-exempt beneficiaries designed to allow "lumpy" taxable income earned by a trust to be flowed-through to tax-exempt beneficiaries after the acquisition of a trust unit by the tax-exempt beneficiary from the taxable beneficiaries.

Given the existing structure and objectives of Part XII.2, we agree it would be anomalous for either the middle trust or partnership in the circumstances described above to be treated as "designated beneficiaries" under the bottom trust. I am prepared to recommend amendments to eliminate this anomaly. I expect these amendments will be introduced in a future technical bill and be effective from no later than the beginning of this year.

Thank you for writing to us on this matter.

Yours sincerely,

Daniel MacIntosh, Director, Tax Legislation Division

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 3, 1996:

Dear [xxx]

This is in reply to your letter of June 10, 1996 to Simon Thompson regarding a suggested change to the definition of "designated beneficiary" in section 210 of the Income Tax Act.

Your letter contemplates a structure involving a number of different trusts resident in Canada. Under this structure, registered pension plans and other investors resident in Canada will invest in trust units issued by one unit trust (the "top fund"). The top fund will invest in units issued by other unit trusts (the "bottom funds"). You have asked that section 210 of the Act be amended so the top fund will not be a "designated beneficiary" of the bottom funds as a consequence of the top fund having beneficiaries (i.e., registered pension plans) which are exempt from tax under Part I of the Act.

We agree that one of the objectives of Part XII.2 tax is to prevent the minimization of tax on specified Canadian-source income that would otherwise arise where a Canadian trust's income is distributed to a non-resident and is subject only to Part XIII tax. However, Part XII.2 tax is also meant to discourage transactions between taxable and tax-exempt beneficiaries designed to allow "lumpy" taxable income earned by a trust to be flowed-through to tax-exempt beneficiaries after the acquisition of a trust unit by the tax-exempt beneficiary from the taxable beneficiaries.

In view of the second objective of Part XII.2 tax, described above, it would be difficult to recommend the amendment referred to above by itself. However, I understand that you have discussed this matter with one of my staff and are amenable to an additional amendment in this context. The additional amendment would, in effect, provide that the top fund would be a "designated beneficiary" under a bottom fund if it acquired an interest in the bottom fund directly or indirectly from a beneficiary under the bottom fund (except where the interest was owned, at each time after the date on which the bottom fund was created, by the top fund or a person exempt from tax under Part I of the Act because of subsection 149(1) of the Act). The combination of the two amendments would meet the both of the policy objectives. I am prepared to recommend that these amendments be introduced in a future technical bill and be effective from a date that will accommodate the planned structure described in your letter.

Thank you for writing to us on this matter.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber, Director, Tax Legislation Division

Proposed Repeal — 210.2(1.1)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 136(1), will repeal subsec. 210.2(1.1), applicable to 1996 et seq.

(2) Designated income — For the purposes of subsection (1), the designated income of a trust for a taxation year means the amount that, but for subsections 104(6), (12) and (30), would be the income of the trust for the year determined under section 3 if

(a) it had no income other than taxable capital gains from dispositions described in paragraph (b) and incomes from

(i) real properties in Canada (other than Canadian resource properties),

(ii) timber resource properties,

(iii) Canadian resource properties (other than properties acquired by the trust before 1972), and

(iv) businesses carried on in Canada;

(b) the only taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses referred to in paragraph 3(b) were from dispositions of taxable Canadian property; and

(c) the only losses referred to in paragraph 3(d) were losses from sources described in subparagraphs (a)(i) to (iv).

Proposed Amendment — 210.2(2)

(2) Amateur athlete trusts — Notwithstanding subsection 210(2), a trust shall pay a tax under this Part in respect of a particular taxation year of the trust equal to 56.25% of the amount that is required by subsection 143.1(2) to be included in computing the income under Part I for a taxation year of a beneficiary under the trust, if

(a) the beneficiary is at any time in the particular taxation year a designated beneficiary under the trust; and

(b) the particular taxation year ends in that taxation year of the beneficiary.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 136(1), will amend subsec. 210.2(2) to read as above, applicable to 1996 et seq. ("Designated income" is moved to 210(1); this provision was 210.2(1.1).)

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 210.2(1.1) extends the tax under Part XII.2 to amateur athlete trusts, which are provided for in section 143.1, in circumstances where amounts are distributed by such trusts to non-resident beneficiaries.

Subsection 210.2(1.1) is amended by renumbering it as subsection 210.2(2). In addition, the reference in that subsection to section 210.1 is, given that section's renumbering as subsection 210(2), replaced with a reference to subsection 210(2). The amended subsection also replaces the existing reference to the phrase "36% of $^{100}/_{64}$" with the numerical equivalent of "56.25%". Finally, the provision is amended to clarify that Part XII.2 tax applies to a trust for a particular taxation year of the trust on the amount that is required by subsection 143.1(2) to be included in computing the income under Part I for a taxation year of a beneficiary under the trust, only if

- the beneficiary is at any time in the particular taxation year a designated beneficiary under the trust, and
- the particular taxation year ends in that taxation year of the beneficiary.

Related Provisions: 104(7.01)(b)(i) — No deduction under 104(6) for designated income of trust.

History: Para. 210.2(2)(b) amended by 2001, c. 17, s. 172, applicable after October 1, 1996. It formerly read:

(b) the only taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses referred to in paragraph 3(b) were from dispositions of property that would have been taxable Canadian property if, at no time in the year, the trust had been resident in Canada; and

(3) Tax deemed paid by beneficiary — Where an amount (in this subsection and subsection 210.3(2) referred to as the "income amount") in respect of the income of a trust for a taxation year is, by reason of subsection 104(13) or 105(2), included in computing

(a) the income under Part I of a person who was not at any time in the year a designated beneficiary under the trust, or

(b) the income of a non-resident person (other than a person who, at any time in the year, would be a designated beneficiary under the trust if section 210 were read without reference to paragraph 210(a)) that is subject to tax under Part I by reason of subsection 2(3) and is not exempt from tax under Part I by reason of a provision contained in an tax convention or agreement with another country that has the force of law in Canada,

Proposed Amendment — 210.2(3)(b)

(b) the income of a non-resident person (other than a person who, at any time in the year, would be a designated beneficiary under the trust if section 210 were read without reference to paragraph (a) of the definition "designated beneficiary" in that section) that is subject to tax under Part I by reason of subsection 2(3) and is not exempt from tax under Part I by reason of a provision contained in a tax treaty,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 136(3), will amend para. 210.2(3)(b) to read as above, applicable to 1996 et seq., except that in applying para. 210.2(3)(b) for the 1996 and 1997 taxation years, "treaty" is to be read as "convention or agreement with another country that has the force of law in Canada".

Technical Notes (July 2010): Note as well that paragraph 210.2(3)(b) is amended to ensure that subsection 210.2(3) does not apply to a non-resident person that would be a designated beneficiary under the trust if the definition "designated beneficiary" in subsection 210(1) were read without reference to its paragraph (a). . . .

Note as well that paragraph 210.2(3)(b) is amended to update its structure to conform to modern drafting standards.

PART XII.5 — RECOVERY OF LABOUR-SPONSORED FUNDS TAX CREDIT

211.7 (1) Definitions — The definitions in this section apply for the purposes of this Part.

"approved share" has the meaning assigned by subsection 127.4(1).

"labour-sponsored funds tax credit" in respect of a share is

(a) where the original acquisition of the share occurred before 1996, 20% of the net cost of the share on that acquisition; and

(b) in any other case, the amount that would be determined under subsection 127.4(6) in respect of the share if this Act were read without reference to paragraphs 127.4(6)(b) and (d).

"net cost" has the meaning assigned by subsection 127.4(1).

"original acquisition" has the meaning assigned by subsection 127.4(1).

Proposed Addition — 211.7(1)"qualifying exchange"

"qualifying exchange" means an exchange by a taxpayer of an approved share, that is part of a series of Class A shares of the capital stock of a corporation, for another approved share, that is part of another series of Class A shares of the capital stock of the corporation, where

(a) the only consideration received by the taxpayer on the exchange is the other share; and

(b) the rights in respect of the series are identical except for the portion of the reserve (within the meaning assigned by definition in subsection 204.8(1)) of the corporation that is attributable to each series.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 38(1), will add the definition "qualifying exchange" to subsec. 211.7(1), applicable after 2003.

Technical Notes: Part XII.5 of the Act imposes a tax on certain dispositions of "approved shares" of a labour-sponsored venture capital corporation (LSVCC). This tax is designed to recover federal tax credits that may have been available to a taxpayer under section 127.4 upon the original acquisition of the shares.

The new definition "qualifying exchange" means an exchange by a taxpayer of an approved share, that is part of a series of Class A shares of the capital stock of an LSVCC, for another approved share of the LSVCC, where the only consideration received by the taxpayer on the exchange is the other share, and the rights in respect of the series of shares are identical except for the portion of the reserve (within the meaning assigned by the definition in subsection 204.8(1)) of the corporation that is attributable to each series.

The definition "qualifying exchange" is added concurrently with amendments to sections 127.4 and 211.8 to allow for the issuance of exchangeable shares by LSVCCs. This amendment applies after 2003.

For more information regarding the definition "reserve", refer to the commentary for subsection 204.8(1).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Oct. 17, 2005: See under 211.7(3).

Related Provisions: 211.7(3) — Exchangeable shares; 211.8(1) — Disposition of approved share.

"qualifying trust" has the meaning assigned by subsection 127.4(1).

"revoked corporation" means a corporation the registration of which has been revoked under subsection 204.81(6).

(2) Amalgamations and mergers — For the purposes of this Part, where two or more corporations (each of which is referred to in this subsection as a "predecessor corporation") amalgamate or merge to form a corporate entity deemed by paragraph 204.85(3)(d) to have been registered under Part X.3, the shares of each predecessor corporation are deemed not to be redeemed, acquired or cancelled by the predecessor corporation on the amalgamation or merger.

Proposed Addition — 211.7(3)

(3) Exchangeable shares — For the purposes of this Part and Part X.3, where an approved share of the capital stock of a corporation (referred to in this subsection as the "new share") has been issued in exchange for another approved share (referred to in this subsection as the "original share") in a qualifying exchange, the new share is deemed not to have been issued on the exchange, but to have been issued at the time the corporation issued the original share.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 38(2), will add subsec. 211.7(3), applicable after 2003.

Technical Notes: Section 211.8 provides a mechanism for the recovery of the federal tax credit under section 127.4 with respect to the original acquisition of a share issued by a labour-sponsored venture capital corporation (LSVCC). The special tax payable under section 211.8 is generally charged where the share of a federally-registered LSVCC or a revoked corporation is redeemed, acquired or cancelled less than eight years after the share was issued.

New subsection 211.7(3) is added consequential to the amendment of sections 127.4 and 211.8 to allow for the issuance of exchangeable shares by LSVCCs. New subsection 211.7(3) is added to ensure that a share issued in a qualifying exchange is considered to have been issued on the same date as the share for which it was exchanged. This amendment ensures that the date a share is issued on an exchange, for a qualifying exchange, is not taken into account in determining whether the share has been redeemed, revoked or cancelled within eight years of the date the share was issued.

This amendment also ensures that the date of issuance on an exchange, for a qualifying exchange, is ignored for the purposes of determining the corporation's obligations under Part X.3 of the Act, such as for the purposes of determining penalties, if any, for investment shortfalls under section 204.82.

Related Provisions: 127.4(6)(e) — No labour-sponsored funds credit on exchange of shares.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Oct. 17, 2005:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing in response to your letter of September 26, 2005, requesting that subsection 204.8(2) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") be amended in order to accommodate "asset purchase mergers" involving labour-sponsored venture capital corporations to occur without triggering any penalty tax under Part X.3 of the Act.

As you state in your letter, it is the intention of a number of existing LSVCCs, all managed by [xxx], to consolidate their operations. It is intended that they do this, generally, in three steps. First, one LSVCC (the "Continuing Fund") will purchase, at fair market value, all the assets of one or more LSVCCs (each such LSVCC, a "Terminating Fund") in exchange for Class A shares of the Continuing Fund. Once this is done, the Terminating Fund will redeem the shares of its individual investors, providing, as payment for the redemption, the Class A shares of the Continuing Fund. Afterward, the shell Terminating Fund will be wound up or dissolved. You have informed us that you have obtained a ruling from the Canada Revenue Agency that such a transaction will qualify as a "merger" under subsection 204.85(3) of the Act so that the Continuing Fund will, for the purpose of the LSVCC rules, be treated as a continuation of both the Continuing Fund and the Terminating Fund and that there will be no recovery of the labour-sponsored funds tax credit from the existing investors in the Terminating Fund.

You have informed us that, in order to complete the merger, the articles of incorporation of the Continuing Fund will have to be amended to allow for Class A shares to be issued to a corporation, and to allow a transfer of those Class A shares from the Terminating Fund to the individual investors of the Terminating Fund. However, if the Continuing Fund amends its articles in this way, under the present wording of the Act, paragraph 204.8(2)(a) (which, in conjunction with section 204.841, levies a penalty tax on a registered LSVCC if its articles cease to comply with paragraph 204.81(1)(c)) will be triggered.

The "asset purchase merger" transaction described in your letter does not appear to contravene the tax policy underlying the labour-sponsored funds tax credit program. Consequently, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance modifications to the income tax provisions concerning the labour-sponsored funds tax credit that would permit, without triggering a penalty tax under section 204.841, a Continuing Fund to issue, in the course of an asset purchase merger of the Continuing Fund and the Terminating Fund, its Class A shares to a Terminating Fund in exchange for the net assets of the Terminating Fund if those Class A shares of the Continuing Fund are transferred to the Terminating Fund's Class A shareholders upon the redemption by the terminating fund of the Class A shares of the Terminating Fund. We would also recommend that those modifications be made effective in respect of asset purchase mergers completed after 2004.

While we cannot offer any assurance that our recommendation in this matter will be accepted, we hope our statement of intent in this matter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 39, will amend the opening words of subsec. 211.8(1) to read as above, applicable in respect of shares redeemed, acquired or cancelled after 2003.

Technical Notes: Subsection 211.8(1) imposes a special tax under Part XII.5, generally if Class A shares of the capital stock of a federally-registered labour sponsored venture capital corporation (LSVCC), that qualify for the federal LSVCC tax credit under section 127.4, are redeemed prior to the expiry of a minimum period.

Subsection 211.8(1) is amended, concurrently with amendments to sections 127.4 and 211.7, to allow for the issuance by LSVCCs of Class A shares that are exchangeable shares in certain circumstances. In particular, where the new share is issued by an LSVCC as part of a "qualifying exchange" (as defined in subsection 211.7(1)) and is another Class A share of the LSVCC, the disposition of the original share by the shareholder will not result in the application of the special Part XII.5 tax.

(ii) where the share was issued by any other labour-sponsored venture capital corporation and was at any time an approved share, the amount, if any, required to be remitted to the government of a province as a consequence of the redemption, acquisition, cancellation or disposition (otherwise than as a consequence of an increase in the corporation's liability for a penalty under a law of the province), and

(B) more than 5 years after the day on which it was issued,

Proposed Amendment — 211.8(1)(a)B(i)(B), (C)

(B) more than five years after its issuance, or

(C) if the day that is five years after its issuance is in February or March of a calendar year, in February or on March 1st of that calendar year but not more than 31 days before that day,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 138(1), will amend cl. 211.8(1)(a)B(i)(B) to read as above, and add cl. (i)(C), applicable to redemptions, acquisitions, cancellations and dispositions that occur after November 15, 1995.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 211.8(1) provides that the special tax under Part XII.5 generally applies where shares in a federally-registered LSVCC that qualify for the federal LSVCC tax credit are redeemed prior to the expiry of a minimum period. In the case of shares the "original acquisition" (as defined in subsection 127.4(1)) of which occurred before March 6, 1996, there is no recovery of the tax credit for a share redeemed more than five years after the day on which the share was issued. For shares the original acquisition of which occurs after March 5, 1996, the recovery generally applies where a share is redeemed less than eight years after the day on which it was issued.

Subsection 211.8(1) is amended so that there is no Part XII.5 tax in respect of the redemption by a federally-registered LSVCC of a share the original acquisition of which was after March 5, 1996, if the redemption occurs on a day that is in February or on March 1st of a calendar year and that day is no more than 31 days before the day that is eight years after the day on which the share was issued. For a share the original acquisition of which occurred before March 6, 1996, the circumstances in which there is no recovery of the tax credit are extended to include the redemption of the share on a day that is in February or on March 1st of a calendar year if that day is no more than 31 days before the day that is five years after the day on which the share was issued.

This amendment is part of a set of amendments, announced by the Minister of Finance (News Release 2000-009, dated February 7, 2000) concerning the redemption requirements for federally-registered LSVCCs. The set of amendments is intended to accommodate taxpayers wishing to acquire new LSVCC shares in the first 60 days of a year using the proceeds from the redemption of LSVCC shares. Other related changes include amendments to section 204.81. For additional information, see the commentary on those provisions.

Example 1

On February 2nd, 1998 a federally-registered LSVCC redeemed 200 Class A shares owned by Charles. The original acquisition by Charles of the shares was on March 1, 1993, the same day on which the shares were issued. The issuing LSVCC was incorporated on December 1, 1992. The LSVCC's Articles comply with the applicable registration requirements.

Results:

1. Under new clause (i)(C) of the description of B in paragraph 211.8(1)(a), there will be no recovery of the tax credit on the redemption of the 200 shares because the original acquisition of the shares was before March 6, 1996 and the redemption occurred on a day in February not more than 31 days before the day that is five years after the day on which the shares were issued.

2. Because of new subsection 204.81(1.2), subsection 204.81(6) of the Act would not apply to allow the Minister of National Revenue to revoke the LSVCC's registration solely because of the redemption.

Example 2

On February 15, 2005 a federally-registered LSVCC redeemed 200 Class A shares owned by Marguerite. The circumstances of the redemption are not described in any of the provisions, described in clauses 204.81(1)(c)(v)(A) to (D), of the LSVCC's articles. The original acquisition by Marguerite of the first 100 shares was on March 1, 1997, although the shares were issued on March 12th, 1997. The original acquisition by Marguerite of the second 100 shares was on February 29, 2000, the same day on which the shares were issued. The LSVCC was incorporated on May 1, 1996.

Results:

1. Under new subparagraph (i.1) of the description of B in paragraph 211.8(1)(a), there will be no recovery of the tax credit on the redemption of the first 100 shares because the redemption occurred in February on a day not more than 31 days before the day that is eight years after the day on which the shares were issued. Subparagraph (i) of the description of variable B in paragraph 211.8(1)(a) does not apply because the original acquisition of the shares was not before March 6, 1996.

2. Under new subparagraph (i.1) of the description of B in paragraph 211.8(1)(a), there will be a recovery of the tax credit on the redemption of the second 100 shares because the redemption occurred less than eight years after the day on which the share was issued and more than 31 days before the day that is eight years after the day on which the shares were issued.

3. Because of new subsection 204.81(1.2), subsection 204.81(6) would not apply to allow the Minister of National Revenue to revoke the LSVCC's registration solely because of the redemption of the first 100 shares. However, the early redemption by the corporation of the second 100 shares, in violation of the provisions of its articles described in clause 204.81(1)(c)(v)(E), authorizes the Minister of National Revenue to revoke the LSVCC's registration under subsection 204.81(6).

Dept. of Finance news release 2000-009, Feb. 7, 2000: Finance Minister Announces Minor Change to the Redemption Requirements for Federal LSVCCs

Finance Minister Paul Martin today announced that he would propose a minor change affecting federally-registered labour-sponsored venture capital corporations (LSVCCs). The proposed change provides an exemption from the rules governing the recovery of the federal LSVCC tax credit.

Shares in federally-registered LSVCCs that qualify for the federal LSVCC tax credit must be held for a minimum period. Where a share is redeemed prior to the expiry of the minimum period, the federal LSVCC tax credit for the share is generally recovered. In the case of shares issued before March 6, 1996, there is no recovery of the tax credit for a share redeemed more than five years after the day on which the share was issued. For shares issued after March 5, 1996, the recovery applies where a share is redeemed less than eight years after the day on which it was issued.

The proposed change will, for the purpose of the recovery provisions, treat a share redeemed in February or on March 1st as having been redeemed 30 days later. For example, existing LSVCC shares issued on March 1, 1995 and redeemed on February 29, 2000 would be exempt from a recovery of the federal LSVCC tax credit that was associated with the original acquisition of the shares.

This measure is intended to accommodate taxpayers wishing to acquire new LSVCC shares in the first 60 days of a year with the proceeds from the redemption of LSVCC shares. In these circumstances, a taxpayer would generally be entitled to claim a tax credit for the preceding year in respect of an acquisition of the new shares and would not be subject to a tax penalty with respect to the redemption of the existing shares. In addition, any necessary changes will be made to ensure that an LSVCC's registration cannot be revoked as a result of having redeemed LSVCC shares in these circumstances. It is proposed that this change apply from the inception of the rules governing the recovery of the LSVCC tax credit.

Proposed Addition — 211.8(1)(a)B(i.1)

(i.1) nil, where the share was issued by a registered labour-sponsored venture capital corporation or a revoked corporation, the original acquisition of the share was after March 5, 1996 and the redemption, acquisition or cancellation is in February or on March 1st of a calendar year but is not more than 31 days before the day that is eight years after the day on which the share was issued,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 138(2), will add subpara. 211.8(1)(a)B(i.1), applicable to redemptions, acquisitions, cancellations and dispositions that occur after November 15, 1995.

(a) withhold from the amount otherwise payable on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation to the shareholder the amount of the tax;

(b) interest — interest that

(i) is not fully exempt interest, and is paid or payable to a person with whom the payer is not dealing at arm's length, or

Proposed Amendment — 212(1)(b)(i)

(i) is not fully exempt interest and is paid or payable

(A) to a person with whom the payer is not dealing at arm's length, or

(B) in respect of a debt or other obligation to pay an amount to a person with whom the payer is not dealing at arm's length, or

Application: The March 16, 2011 draft legislation, s. 3, will amend subpara. 212(1)(b)(i) to read as above, applicable to interest that is paid or payable by a person or partnership (referred to in this Application as the "payer") to a person or partnership (referred to in this Application as the "recipient") after March 15, 2011, other than interest that is paid

(a) in respect of a debt or obligation incurred by the payer before March 16, 2011; and

(b) to a recipient that acquired the entitlement to the interest as a consequence of an agreement or other arrangement entered into by the recipient, and evidenced in writing, before March 16, 2011.

Technical Notes: Subparagraph 212(1)(b)(i) imposes withholding tax on interest payments that a payer resident in Canada makes to a non-resident recipient with whom the payer does not deal at arm's length if the interest is not in respect of certain debt obligations such as Canadian government bonds (referred to as "fully exempt interest").

Subparagraph 212(1)(b)(i) is amended to impose withholding tax on interest that, in addition to not being fully exempt interest, is paid or payable to either:

a. a non-resident recipient with whom the payer does not deal at arm's length; or

b. a non-resident recipient (whether arm's length or not) if the interest is paid or payable on a debt obligation owed by the payer to a non-resident with whom the payer does not deal at arm's length.

The amendment applies to interest paid or payable on or after March 16, 2011 unless it is interest on an obligation incurred by the payer before March 16, 2011 and the recipient acquired the entitlement to the interest before March 16, 2011.

(ii) is participating debt interest;

Proposed Amendment — 212(1)(b)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 139(4), will amend para. 212(1)(b) to read as enacted above (to restore the new version following amendments made to the pre-2008 version), applicable after 2007 (see the Technical Notes below).

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 212(1)(b) imposes Part XIII tax on interest paid or credited to a non-resident except under certain conditions. The paragraph was significantly revised in 2007, and its applicable exemptions before the revision have been revised as noted in the amendments above. For clarity, the 2007 revision has been re-enacted — to exempt interest that is paid to an arm's length party and that is not participating debt interest.

This amendment applies to interest paid or credited to a non-resident after 2007.

XI — Taxation of interest. See additional Related Provisions at beginning of 212(1).

(iii) [foreign currency debt] — interest payable in a currency other than Canadian currency to a person with whom the payer is dealing at arm's length, on

(A) any obligation where the evidence of indebtedness was issued on or before December 20, 1960,

(B) any obligation where the evidence of indebtedness was issued after December 20, 1960, if the obligation was entered into under an agreement in writing made on or before that day, under which the obligee undertook to advance, on or before a specified day, a specified amount at a specified rate of interest or a rate of interest to be determined as provided in the agreement, to the extent that the interest payable on the obligation is payable

(I) in respect of a period ending not later than the earliest day on which, under the terms of the obligation determined as of the time it was entered into, the obligee would be entitled to demand payment of the principal amount of the obligation or the amount outstanding as or on account of the principal amount thereof, as the case may be, if the terms of the obligation determined as of that time provided for that payment on or after a specified day, or

(II) in respect of a period ending not later than one year after the time the obligation was entered into, in any other case,

(C) any bond, debenture or similar obligation issued after December 20, 1960, for the issue of which arrangements were made on or before that day with a dealer in securities, if the existence of the arrangements for the issue of the bond, debenture or similar obligation can be established by evidence in writing given or made on or before that day,

(D) an amount not repayable in Canadian currency deposited with an institution that was at the time the amount was deposited or at the time the interest was paid or credited a prescribed financial institution,

(E) any obligation entered into in the course of carrying on a business in a country other than Canada, to the extent that the interest payable on the obligation is deductible in computing the income of the payer under Part I from a business carried on by the payer in such a country, or that, but for subsection 18(2) or section 21, would have been so deductible, or

(F) any obligation entered into by the payer after December 20, 1960, on assuming an obligation referred to in clause (A) in consideration or partial consideration for the purchase by the payer of property of the vendor that constituted security for that obligation, if the payer on entering into the obligation undertook to pay the same amount of money on or before the same date and at the same rate of interest as the vendor of the property had undertaken in respect of the obligation under which the vendor was the obligor,

(for the purpose of this subparagraph, interest expressed to be computed by reference to Canadian currency shall be deemed to be payable in Canadian currency),

(iv) [exemption certificate] — interest payable on any bond, debenture or similar obligation to a person with whom the payer is dealing at arm's length and to whom a certificate of exemption that is in force on the day the amount is paid or credited was issued under subsection (14),

Proposed Amendment — Former 212(1)(b)(iv)

(iv) interest payable to a person with whom the payer is dealing at arm's length and to whom a certificate of exemption that is in force on the day the amount is paid or credited was issued under subsection (14),

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 139(1), will amend former subpara. 212(1)(b)(iv) to read as above, applicable to 1998 et seq., but only until 212(1)(b) was replaced effective Jan. 1, 2008 (per Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35, s. 97(1)).

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 212(1)(b) imposes the Part XIII tax on interest paid or credited to a non-resident unless one of the exemptions in the paragraph applies. This paragraph was significantly revised in 2007 for interest paid or payable after 2007. After 2007, the paragraph exempts interest from withholding tax where the interest is paid to an arm's length person and is not "participating debt interest".

The following amendments revise or add to the exemptions available under the paragraph before the 2007 revision and generally have application before 2008.

Subparagraph 212(1)(b)(iv), as it read before the 2007 revision, provides an exemption for interest payable to an arm's length person who holds a valid "certificate of exemption". These certificates, issued by the Minister of National Revenue under the authority provided by subsection 212(14) of the Act, are generally available to foreign pension entities, charities and certain other tax-exempt entities.

In its pre-2007 revision form, subparagraph 212(1)(b)(iv) applies only to interest on a "bond, debenture or similar obligation." Since this restriction may unduly limit the scope of the provision, it is broadened to encompass all forms of indebtedness. It should be noted, however, that no change is made to the requirement that the Canadian-resident payer of the interest and the non-resident recipient deal at arm's length.

(v) [life insurance business outside Canada] — interest payable to a person with whom the payer is dealing at arm's length on any obligation entered into in the course of carrying on a life insurance business in a country other than Canada,

(vi) [Repealed under former Act]

(vii) [5-year corporate debt] — interest payable by a corporation resident in Canada to a person with whom that corporation is dealing at arm's length on any obligation where the evidence of indebtedness was issued by that corporation after June 23, 1975 if under the terms of the obligation or any agreement relating thereto the corporation may not under any circumstances be obliged to pay more than 25% of

(A) where the obligation is one of a number of obligations that comprise a single debt issue of obligations that are identical in respect of all rights (in equity or otherwise, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently) attaching thereto, except as regards the principal amount thereof, the total of the principal amount of those obligations, or

(B) in any other case, the principal amount of the obligation, within 5 years from the date of issue of that single debt issue or that obligation, as the case may be, except

(C) in the event of a failure or default under the said terms or agreement,

(D) if the terms of the obligation or any agreement relating thereto become unlawful or are changed by virtue of legislation or by a court, statutory board or commission,

(E) if the person exercises a right under the terms of the obligation or any agreement relating thereto to convert the obligation into, or exchange the obligation for, a prescribed security,

(F) in the event of the person's death, or

(G) in the event that a change to this Act or to a tax treaty has the effect of relieving the non-resident person from liability for tax under this Part in respect of the interest;

Proposed Amendment — Former 212(1)(b)(vii) — No novation when authorized foreign bank assumes debts of subsidiary Letter from Dept. of Finance, December 18, 2001: See under 142.7(8)(d).

(viii) [mortgage on real property outside Canada] — interest payable on a mortgage, hypothecary claim or similar obligation secured by, or on an agreement for sale or similar obligation with respect to, real property situated outside Canada or an interest in any such real property except to the extent that the interest payable on the obligation is deductible in computing the income of the payer under Part I from a business carried on by the payer in Canada or from property other than real property situated outside Canada,

(ix) [deposit in foreign branch of Canadian bank] — interest payable in Canadian currency on account of an amount in Canadian currency deposited in a country other than Canada with a branch or office of a payer who

(A) is, or is eligible to become, a member of the Canadian Payments Association, or

(B) is a credit union that is a shareholder or member of a body corporate or organization that is a central for the purposes of the Canadian Payments Association Act, to a person with whom the payer is dealing at arm's length,

(x) [prescribed international organization] — interest payable to a prescribed international organization or agency,

(xi) [International Banking Centre deposit] — interest payable on an amount deposited with a prescribed financial institution for the period during which the amount was an eligible deposit (within the meaning assigned by subsection 33.1(1)) of the institution, and

(xii) [securities lending arrangement] — interest payable under a securities lending arrangement by a lender under the arrangement that is a financial institution prescribed for the purpose of clause (iii)(D), or a registered securities dealer resident in Canada, on money provided to the lender either as collateral or as consideration for the particular security lent or transferred under the arrangement where

Proposed Amendment — Former 212(1)(b)(xii) opening words

(xii) interest payable by a lender under a securities lending arrangement, if the lender and the borrower deal with each other at arm's length and the lender is a financial institution prescribed for the purpose of clause (iii)(D), or a registered securities dealer resident in Canada, on money provided to the lender either as collateral or as consideration for the particular security lent or transferred under the arrangement where

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 139(2), will amend the opening words of subpara. 212(1)(b)(xii) to read as above, applicable to arrangements made after 2002, but only until 212(1)(b) was replaced effective Jan. 1, 2008 (per Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35, s. 97(1)).

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subparagraph 212(1)(b)(xii), as it read before the 2007 revision, provides an exemption for interest payable under certain securities lending arrangements by registered or licensed securities dealers resident in Canada. Given the current definition of "securities lending arrangement" in subsection 260(1), this exemption is only available to dealers who are dealing at arm's length with the other parties to the arrangements.

Consequential to the amendments to the definition of "securities lending arrangement" in subsection 260(1), which now includes certain arrangements between non-arm's length parties, the amendment to subparagraph 212(1)(b)(xii) confirms that the exemption is limited to arm's length arrangements.

(A) the particular security is an obligation referred to in subparagraph (ii) or an obligation of the government of any country, province, state, municipality or other political subdivision,

(B) the amount of money so provided at any time during the term of the arrangement does not exceed 110% of the fair market value at that time of the particular security, and

(C) the arrangement was neither intended, nor made as a part of a series of securities lending arrangements, loans or other transactions that was intended, to be in effect for more than 270 days,

Proposed Addition — Former 212(1)(b)(xiii)

(xiii) [securities lending arrangement] — an amount paid or credited under a securities lending arrangement that is deemed by subparagraph 260(8)(c)(i) to be a payment made by a borrower to a lender of interest if

(A) the securities lending arrangement was entered into by the borrower in the course of carrying on a business outside Canada, and

(B) the security that is transferred or lent to the borrower under the securities lending arrangement is described in paragraph (b) or (c) of the definition "qualified security" in subsection 260(1) and issued by a non-resident issuer;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 139(3), will add subpara. 212(1)(b)(xiii), applicable to securities lending arrangements entered into after May 1995 (except that in its application to arrangements made before 2002, the reference to "subparagraph 260(8)(c)(i)" in the subpara. is to be read as "subparagraph 260(8)(a)(i)"); but only until 212(1)(b) was replaced effective Jan. 1, 2008 (per Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35, s. 97(1)).

Technical Notes (July 2010): Securities lending arrangements often include an obligation for one party to compensate the other for certain income amounts. In the absence of special rules, these compensation payments may be subject to tax under Part XIII if they are paid by a person resident in Canada to a non-resident person.

New subparagraph 212(1)(b)(xiii) is added to paragraph 212(1)(b), as it read before the 2007 revision, and exempts from tax under Part XIII certain interest compensation payments made to a non-resident by a borrower resident in Canada under a securities lending arrangement. For the exemption to apply,

- the payments must be made by the borrower in the course of carrying on its business outside of Canada; and
- the borrowed securities must be issued by a non-resident issuer.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, February 18, 2002: See under 212(2.1).

and for the purpose of this paragraph, where interest is payable on an obligation, other than a prescribed obligation, and all or any portion of the interest is contingent or dependent on the use of or production from property in Canada or is computed by reference to revenue, profit, cash flow, commodity price or any other similar criterion or by reference to dividends paid or payable to shareholders of any class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation, the interest shall be deemed not to be interest described in subparagraphs (ii) to (vii) and (ix);

Technical Notes (July 2010): Second, subparagraph 212(1)(d)(xi), which currently provides that Part XIII tax does not apply to payments made to an arm's length person for the use of property that is an aircraft, certain attachments thereto as well as to spare parts for such property, is amended, applicable after July 2003, to also apply to air navigation equipment utilized in the provision of services under the Civil Air Navigation Services Commercialization Act, and to computer software that is necessary to the operation of that equipment that is used by the payer for no other purpose.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 13, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

This letter responds to submissions received in respect of a financing transaction in which [xxx] proposes to enter into a lease leaseback arrangement with U.S. investors in respect of its [xxx].

In order to facilitate this financing structure you have asked that the exemption from non-resident withholding tax presently available for rent payments made in respect of [aircraft] and attached equipment be extended to [xxx]. You have submitted that such an exemption would be consistent with the current exemption for [aircraft] and is required to facilitate [xxx] participation in a financing structure that delivers U.S. tax benefits for investors outside of Canada.

Based on your assurance that the proposed lease financing transaction referred to in your submission meets all of the requirements of the U.S. Internal Revenue Code, I am prepared to recommend Parliament approve an amendment to the Income Tax Act to provide for an expansion of the list of equipment, presently eligible for exemption from non-resident withholding tax under section 212(1)(d) of the Income Tax Act, to include [xxx] utilized pursuant to the [xxx]. If Parliament approves this recommendation, it would have effect for the 2003 and subsequent taxation years.

Yours very truly,

John Manley, Minister of Finance

Proposed Addition — 212(1)(d)(xii)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 139(8), will add subpara. 212(1)(d)(xii), applicable to 2000 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Third, new subparagraph 212(1)(d)(xii) clarifies that subsection 212(5) of the Act, which is amended as described below, is the sole provision in Part XIII that applies the tax to payments for rights in or to use a film or video that is used or reproduced in Canada.

History: Para. 212(1)(f) repealed by 1997, c. 25, s. 63, applicable to amounts paid and credited after April 1997. Para. (f) formerly read:

(h) pension benefits — a payment of a superannuation or pension benefit, other than

(i), (ii) [Repealed]

Proposed Addition — 212(1)(h)(ii)

(ii) an amount distributed from a pooled registered pension plan that has been designated by the administrator of the plan in accordance with subsection 147.5(17),

Application: The December 14, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 18(1), will add subpara. 212(1)(h)(ii), in force or deemed in force on the day of the coming into force of S.C. 2012, c. 16 (Bill C-25, Royal Assent June 18, 2012), Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

Technical Notes: Section 212 imposes a tax, commonly referred to as a "non-resident withholding tax", on certain payments made by residents of Canada to non-residents. Paragraph 212(1)(h) includes superannuation or pension benefits paid to non-residents as payments subject to the withholding tax. An amendment to the definition "superannuation or pension benefit" in subsection 248(1) will clarify that benefits paid from pooled registered pension plans (PRPPs) are generally superannuation or pension benefits for the purposes of the Act. Paragraph 212(1)(h) also lists in subparagraphs (iii) to (iv.1) a number of exclusions from the application of the withholding tax. Paragraph 212(1)(h) is amended in two respects as a consequence of the introduction of PRPPs.

Firstly, new subparagraph 212(1)(h)(ii) is added to exclude from withholding tax the portion of a PRPP payment to a non-resident person that has been designated by the PRPP administrator in accordance with new subsection 147.5(17). In effect, this allows PRPP payments that have already been included in the income of a taxpayer under the PRPP succession rules to be paid free of withholding tax.

(iii) an amount or payment referred to in subsection 81(1) to the extent that that amount or payment would not, if the non-resident person had been resident in Canada throughout the taxation year in which the payment was made, be included in computing that person's income,

(iii.1) the portion of the payment that is transferred by the payer on behalf of the non-resident person, pursuant to an authorization in prescribed form, to a registered pension plan, registered retirement savings plan or registered retirement income fund and that

(A) because of subsection 146(21) or 147.3(9) would not, if the non-resident person had been resident in Canada throughout the taxation year in which the payment was made, be included in computing the non-resident person's income, or

Proposed Amendment — 212(1)(h)(iii.1) before (B)

(iii.1) the portion of the payment that is transferred by the payer on behalf of the non-resident person, pursuant to an authorization in prescribed form, to a pooled registered pension plan, registered pension plan, registered retirement savings plan or registered retirement income fund and that

(A) because of any of subsections 146(21), 147.3(9) and 147.5(21) would not, if the non-resident person had been resident in Canada throughout the taxation year in which the payment was made, be included in computing the non-resident person's income, or

Application: The December 14, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 18(2), will amend the portion of subpara. 212(1)(h)(iii.1) before cl. (B) to read as above, in force or deemed in force on the day of the coming into force of S.C. 2012, c. 16 (Bill C-25, Royal Assent June 18, 2012), Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

Technical Notes: Existing subparagraph 212(1)(h)(iii.1) exempts from withholding tax a payment that is transferred directly to a registered pension plan, registered retirement savings plan or registered retirement income fund for the benefit of the non-resident person if the transfer is made pursuant to an authorization in prescribed form. Subparagraph 212(1)(h)(iii.1) is amended to provide that a non-resident will be entitled to similarly transfer pension benefits (including PRPP benefits) to a PRPP free of withholding tax where the transferred amount would not be included in computing the individual's income for the taxation year by virtue of new subsection 147.5(21) if the individual were resident in Canada throughout the year.

For further information regarding PRPPs, please see the commentary on new section 147.5.

(B) by reason of paragraph 60(j) or (j.2) would, if the non-resident person had been resident in Canada throughout the year, be deductible in computing the non-resident person's income for the year,

(iii.2) an amount referred to in paragraph 110(1)(f) to the extent that the amount would, if the non-resident person had been resident in Canada throughout the taxation year in which the amount was paid, be deductible in computing that person's taxable income or that of the spouse or common-law partner of that person,

(iv) in the case of a payment described in section 57, that portion of the payment that would, by virtue of that section, not be included in the recipient's income for the taxation year in which it was received, if the recipient were resident in Canada throughout that year, or

(iv.1) the portion of the payment that is transferred by the payer on behalf of the non-resident person, pursuant to an authorization in prescribed form, to acquire an annuity contract in circumstances to which subsection 146(21) applies, except such portion, if any, of the payment as may reasonably be regarded as attributable to services rendered by the person, to or in respect of whom the payment is made, in taxation years

(v) during which the person at no time was resident in Canada, and

(vi) throughout which the person was not employed, or was only occasionally employed, in Canada;

Subparas. 212(1)(h)(i) and (ii) repealed by 1996, c. 21, s. 55, applicable to payments made after 1995. Subparas. (h)(i) and (ii) formerly read:

(b) the securities lending arrangement was entered into by the borrower in the course of carrying on a business outside Canada; and

(c) the security that is transferred or lent to the borrower under the securities lending arrangement is a share of a class of the capital stock of a non-resident corporation.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 139(10), will add subsec. 212(2.1), applicable to securities lending arrangements entered into after May 1995, except that in its application to arrangements made before 2002, the reference to "subparagraph 260(8)(c)(i)" in para. 212(2.1)(a) is to be read as "subparagraph 260(8)(a)(i)".

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 18, 2002:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in reply to your email message of December 3, 2001 to Joseph Lam of this Division regarding the application of paragraph 260(8)(a) and Part XIII of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

In your email, you describe a situation where a Canadian resident financial institution, in the course of carrying on its business outside Canada through foreign branches and, indirectly, through foreign subsidiaries, borrows or acquires shares issued by a non-Canadian issuer in a transaction with an arm's length non-resident and the Canadian financial institution makes a "dividend compensation payment" to the non-resident. You represent that the transaction satisfies the definition of "securities lending arrangement" in section 260 of the Act, and, as it is fully collateralized, the payment is deemed to be a dividend for the purposes of Part XIII by virtue of paragraph 260(8)(a).

We recognize that under certain circumstances there should be, in policy terms, no Canadian non-resident withholding tax on dividend compensation payments made by a foreign branch of a Canadian financial institution, in the course of carrying on its business outside Canada, to a non-resident. Consequently, we are prepared to recommend amendments to the Act to exempt from Canadian non-resident withholding tax payments that are deemed to be dividends by virtue of paragraph 260(8)(a), where the payments are made pursuant to a securities lending arrangement entered into in the course of carrying on a business outside Canada, the securities lent or sold are securities of a foreign issuer, and the securities lender is at arm's length with the Canadian securities borrower. In addition, we are prepared to recommend that the amendments apply to securities lending arrangements entered into after May 1995.

While we cannot provide assurance that the Minister will accept our recommendations, we intend to include measures along the line described above in the next package of income tax technical amendments.

We trust that the above satisfies your requirements.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(3) Interest — definitions — The following definitions apply for the purpose of paragraph (1)(b).

"fully exempt interest" means

(a) interest that is paid or payable on a bond, debenture, note, mortgage, hypothecary claim or similar debt obligation

(i) of, or guaranteed (otherwise than by being insured by the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation) by, the Government of Canada,

(ii) of the government of a province,

(iii) of an agent of a province,

(iv) of a municipality in Canada or a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada,

(v) of a corporation, commission or association to which any of paragraphs 149(1)(d) to (d.6) applies, or

(vi) of an educational institution or a hospital if repayment of the principal amount of the obligation and payment of the interest is to be made, or is guaranteed, assured or otherwise specifically provided for or secured by the government of a province;

(b) interest that is paid or payable on a mortgage, hypothecary claim or similar debt obligation secured by, or on an agreement for sale or similar obligation with respect to, real property situated outside Canada or an interest in any such real property, or to immovables situated outside Canada or a real right in any such immovable, except to the extent that the interest payable on the obligation is deductible in computing the income of the payer under Part I from a business carried on by the payer in Canada or from property other than real or immovable property situated outside Canada;

(c) interest that is paid or payable to a prescribed international organization or agency; or

(d) an amount paid or payable or credited under a securities lending arrangement that is deemed by subparagraph 260(8)(a)(i) to be a payment made by a borrower to a lender of interest, if

Proposed Amendment — 212(3)"fully exempt interest"(d) opening words

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 139(12), will amend subsec. 212(3) to read as already enacted by S.C. 2007, c. 35, except to substitute "260(8)(c)(i)" for "260(8)(a)(i)" in the opening words of para. (d) of the definition "fully exempt interest", applicable after 2007.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 212(3) contains definitions for the purposes of paragraph 212(1)(b). In 2007, the subsection was revised to contain two definitions, namely "fully exempt interest" and "participating debt interest", for the purpose of paragraph 212(1)(b). Before the 2007 revision, it contained the definition of replacement obligations for the purpose of subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii). As the application of subsection 212(3) before 2008 has been amended (as noted above), for clarity, the 2007 revision has re-enacted the two definitions noted above.

This amendment applies to interest paid or credited to a non-resident after 2007.

(i) the securities lending arrangement was entered into by the borrower in the course of carrying on a business outside Canada, and

(ii) the security that is transferred or lent to the borrower under the securities lending arrangement is described in paragraph (b) or (c) of the definition "qualified security" in subsection 260(1) and issued by a non-resident issuer.

"participating debt interest" means interest (other than interest described in any of paragraphs (b) to (d) of the definition "fully exempt interest") that is paid or payable on an obligation, other than a prescribed obligation, all or any portion of which interest is contingent or dependent on the use of or production from property in Canada or is computed by reference to revenue, profit, cash flow, commodity price or any other similar criterion or by reference to dividends paid or payable to shareholders of any class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation.

Proposed Amendment — 212(3)"participating debt interest"

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 139(12), will amend "participating debt interest" in subsec. 212(3) to read as enacted above (to restore the new version following amendments made to the pre-2008 version), applicable after 2007.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 212(3)"fully exempt interest"(d) opening words above.

Related Provisions: 204"qualified investment"(b) — Debt obligations qualify for deferred income plans; 214(7) — Deemed payment of interest on sale of obligation.

History: Subsec. 212(3) amended by 2007, c. 35, subsec. 59(3), applicable after 2007 and as though the July 16, 2010 draft legislation (see proposed amendment below) had received Royal Assent before said c. 35. The subsec. formerly read:

(3) Replacement obligations — For the purpose of subparagraph (1)(b)(vii), an obligation (in this subsection referred to as the "replacement obligation") issued by a corporation resident in Canada wholly or in substantial part and either directly or indirectly in exchange or substitution for an obligation or a part of an obligation (in this subsection referred to as the "former obligation") shall, where

(a) the replacement obligation was issued

(i) as part of a proposal to, or an arrangement with, its creditors that was approved by a court under the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act,

(ii) at a time when all or substantially all of its assets were under the control of a receiver, receiver-manager, sequestrator or trustee in bankruptcy, or

(iii) at a time when, because of financial difficulty, the issuing corporation or another corporation resident in Canada with which it does not deal at arm's length was in default, or could reasonably be expected to default, on the former obligation,

(b) the proceeds from the issue of the replacement obligation can reasonably be regarded as having been used by the issuing corporation or another corporation with which it does not deal at arm's length in the financing of its active business carried on in Canada immediately before the time when the replacement obligation was issued, and

Proposed Repeal — Former 212(3)(b)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 139(11), will repeal former para. 212(3)(b), applicable to replacement obligations issued after 2000, but only until 212(3) was replaced effective Jan. 1, 2008 (per Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35, s. 97(1)).

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 212(3) was revised significantly in 2007. The pre-2007 revision contains the definition of replacement obligations, and the post-2007 version contains the definitions of "fully exempt interest" and "participating debt interest". The pre-2007 version of subsection 212(3) — the definition of replacement obligations — is amended.

Among the exceptions to the imposition of tax under Part XIII of the Act on interest is one found in subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii), as it read before the 2007 revision to paragraph 212(1)(b), for interest paid by a corporation resident in Canada on its medium and long-term arm's length debt. Subsection 212(3), which applies for the purpose of subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) (as it read before the 2007 revision), allows a corporation in certain circumstances of financial difficulty to treat a debt obligation that replaces another as having been issued when that other obligation was issued. The circumstances in which this is possible are set out in paragraphs 212(3)(a) to (c). Paragraph 212(3)(b) requires that, for the subsection to apply, it must be possible to regard the proceeds of the replacement borrowing as being used in financing an active business that was carried on in Canada, by the issuing company or one with which it does not deal at arm's length, immediately before the replacement obligation was issued.

There is no clear basis in tax policy for this requirement. The condition in paragraph 212(3)(b) is repealed for replacement debt obligations that are issued after 2000.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 11, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in response to your fax of June 6, 2001, regarding paragraph 212(3)(b) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). [xxx]

Paragraph 212(l)(b) of the Act imposes withholding tax on interest paid or credited by a person resident of Canada to a non-resident, subject to a number of exceptions. Among these exceptions is the "long-term debt" rule in subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii): in very broad terms, interest on corporate debt with a term of 5 years or longer is exempt from tax.

In 1994, the Act was amended to facilitate refinancing in certain cases of financial difficulty. The principle behind the amendment was that in such cases, replacing a long-term debt obligation that benefited from subparagraph (vii) ought not to cause withholding tax to apply. The new rule is found in subsection 212(3) of the Act. Paragraph 212(3)(b) requires that, for the subsection to apply, it must be possible to regard the proceeds of the replacement borrowing as being used by the issuing corporation (or a corporation with which it does not deal at arm's length) in financing an active business carried on in Canada immediately before the replacement obligation was issued.

As I understand it, [xxx] happens not to carry out most of its operations in Canada. Instead, the company is present, through its subsidiaries, in a number of foreign countries. This may make it difficult for [xxx] to meet the paragraph 212(3)(b) requirement. You have therefore suggested that the requirement be modified or eliminated.

Having reviewed the matter in response to your suggestion, I agree that there is no clear basis in tax policy for the requirement, and it is my view that subsection 212(3) would serve its function equally well if the requirement were removed. We are therefore prepared to recommend that the Act be amended to delete paragraph 212(3)(b), with application to replacement obligations issued after June 10, 2001.

I can, as you know, offer no assurance that the Minister of Finance or Parliament itself will accept this recommendation. However, I have no reason to believe that this modest change will prove controversial, and I expect that we will be able to include it in a package of draft technical amendments to be released later this year.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(4) Interpretation of "management or administration fee or charge" — For the purpose of paragraph (1)(a), "management or administration fee or charge" does not include any amount paid or credited or deemed by Part I to have been paid or credited to a non-resident person as, on account or in lieu of payment of, or in satisfaction of,

(a) a service performed by the non-resident person if, at the time the non-resident person performed the service

(i) the service was performed in the ordinary course of a business carried on by the non-resident person that included the performance of such a service for a fee, and

(ii) the non-resident person and the payer were dealing with each other at arm's length, or

(b) a specific expense incurred by the non-resident person for the performance of a service that was for the benefit of the payer, to the extent that the amount so paid or credited was reasonable in the circumstances.

Canada*, [1991] 2 C.T.C. 221 (FCA) (Fees paid by Canadian corporation to Bermuda subsidiary taxable, not at arm's length since both corporations controlled by same "mind"); *Windsor Plastic Products Ltd. v. (5) Motion picture films — Every non-resident person shall pay an income tax of 25% on every amount that a person resident in Canada pays or credits, or is deemed by Part I to pay or credit, to the non-resident person as, on account or in lieu of payment of, or in satisfaction of, payment for a right in or to the use of

(a) a motion picture film, or

(b) a film, video tape or other means of reproduction for use in connection with television (other than solely in connection with and as part of a news program produced in Canada), that has been or is to be used or reproduced in Canada.

Proposed Amendment — 212(5)

that has been, or is to be, used or reproduced in Canada to the extent that the amount relates to that use or reproduction.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 139(14), will amend the closing words of subsec. 212(5) to read as above, applicable to 2000 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 212(5) applies tax under Part XIII to, in general terms, any amount that a person resident in Canada pays to a non-resident person for a right in or to the use of a motion picture film or video product that has been or is to be used or reproduced in Canada (otherwise than for a news program). As presently worded, the subsection can be read as applying even if the payment in question is not for that Canadian use or reproduction, but relates instead to employment of the film or video in some other country. Accordingly, subsection 212(5) is amended to impose tax only to the extent that the amount of the payment relates to the use or reproduction of the product in Canada.

(5.1) Acting services — Notwithstanding any regulation made under paragraph 214(13)(c), every person who is either a non-resident individual who is an actor or that is a corporation related to such an individual shall pay an income tax of 23% on every amount paid or credited, or provided as a benefit, to or on behalf of the person for the provision in Canada of the acting services of the actor in a film or video production.

(5.3) Reduction of withholding — If the Minister is satisfied that the deduction or withholding otherwise required by section 215 from an amount described in subsection (5.1), would cause undue hardship, the Minister may determine a lesser amount to be deducted or withheld and that lesser amount is deemed to be the amount so required to be deducted or withheld.

(9) Exemptions — Where

(a) a dividend or interest is received by a trust from a non-resident-owned investment corporation,

(b) an amount (in this subsection referred to as the "royalty payment") is received by a trust as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, a royalty on or in respect of a copyright in respect of the production or reproduction of any literary, dramatic, musical or artistic work, or

(c) interest is received by a mutual fund trust maintained primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons

Proposed Addition — 212(9)(d)

(d) a dividend or interest is received by a trust created under a reinsurance trust agreement, to which the Superintendent of Financial Institutions is a party, established in accordance with guidelines issued by the Superintendent relating to reinsurance arrangements with unregistered insurers

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 139(15), will add para. 212(9)(d), applicable to amounts paid or credited after 2000 to non-resident persons.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 212(9) provides an exemption from withholding tax under Part XIII of the Act with respect to certain amounts of a trust's income that are paid or credited to a non-resident beneficiary under the trust and that would otherwise be subject to withholding tax under paragraph 212(1)(c). The exemption currently applies only in respect of amounts that are attributable to income of the trust in the form of: dividends or interest received by the trust from a non-resident-owned investment corporation; certain artistic royalties; and interest, where the trust is a mutual fund maintained primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons. If no Part XIII tax would have been payable with respect to the dividends, interest or royalties if they had been paid directly to the beneficiary, no Part XIII tax is payable with respect to a distribution from trust income to non-resident beneficiaries that derives from the dividends, interest or royalties.

Subsection 212(9) is amended to add a fourth type of trust income to this list of exemptions. In certain circumstances, Canada's Superintendent of Financial Institutions may require a non-resident reinsurer that reinsures Canadian risks to place assets in a trust in Canada. Such a "reinsurance trust" may earn dividend or interest income, which is payable to the non-resident. In recognition of the regulatory requirement for these trusts, subsection 212(9) is amended to provide that, if the dividends or interest would not have borne Canadian tax if the non-resident had earned them directly, they may be distributed to the non-resident free of Part XIII tax.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 8, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of February 28, 2001 concerning the application of non-resident withholding tax under paragraph 212(1)(c) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") in the context of reinsurance trusts required to be used in certain circumstances under guidelines issued by the Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions (OSFI).

The issue arises when a life insurance company (the "primary insurer") regulated by OSFI cedes insurance risks to a non-resident reinsurer that is not supervised by OSFI. OSFI's Guideline A dealing with minimum capital requirements does not give credit for such "unregistered reinsurance" that would reduce the primary insurer's capital requirements unless, pursuant to Guideline B-3 on Unregistered Reinsurance, the reinsurer's potential liability under the reinsurance arrangement is secured in an approved manner. This security is effectively a substitute for minimum capital requirements for the reinsurer imposed by either OSFI or a provincial government.

The primary method of providing such security is for the reinsurer to enter into a reinsurance trust arrangement, supervised by OSFI, in which assets are placed in a Canadian trust, to be available to meet the reinsurer's liability to the primary insurer under the reinsurance arrangement. Since the principal amount of the assets of the trust normally must be sufficient to meet the potential reinsurance liability, the reinsurance trust agreement generally provides that any income realized on the assets in the trust — usually government securities — is immediately payable to the reinsurer.

Where the reinsurer is non-resident, even if interest on the underlying assets would normally be free of withholding tax if held directly — as in the case of government bonds — interest income payable to the reinsurer will normally be subject to tax under paragraph 212(1)(c) as a distribution of trust income. Subsection 212(11) deems amounts paid or credited to a person beneficially interested in a trust to be paid as trust income regardless of their source. By way of exception, subsection 212(9) provides that in certain specified cases, no tax is payable under paragraph 212(l)(c) if the underlying payment received by the trust would not have been subject to withholding tax if it had been paid directly to the non-resident. None of the specified cases, however, covers the present situation.

Given the regulatory role performed by reinsurance trusts, we will recommend that subsection 212(9) of the Act be extended to interest received by a trust created under a reinsurance trust agreement to which OSFI is a party established in accordance with OSFI's guidelines relating to reinsurance arrangements with unregistered reinsurers. We will recommend that this amendment be effective for amounts paid or credited to a non-resident person after 2000 as income of or from such a trust.

While I cannot give any assurance that the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation in this regard, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

If you have any further questions with respect to this issue, please contact Lawrence Purdy of the Tax Legislation Division at 996-0602.

(iii) extracts minerals from a mineral resource in Canada

pays or credits an amount (other than an amount to which subsection (13) applies) to another non-resident person, the first-mentioned non-resident person shall be deemed, in respect of the portion of that amount that was deductible in computing that person's taxable income earned in Canada for any taxation year, to be a person resident in Canada.

Proposed Amendment — 212(13.2)

(13.2) Application of Part XIII tax — non-resident operates in Canada — For the purposes of this Part, a particular non-resident person, who in a taxation year pays or credits to another non-resident person an amount other than an amount to which subsection (13) applies, is deemed to be a person resident in Canada in respect of the portion of the amount that is deductible in computing the particular non-resident person's taxable income earned in Canada for any taxation year from a source that is neither a treaty-protected business nor a treaty-protected property.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 139(17), will amend subsec. 212(13.2) to read as above, applicable to amounts paid or credited under obligations entered into after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 212(13.2) is one of several provisions that extend Part XIII tax to apply in particular circumstances — in this case, for the most part, the payment by a non-resident of royalties and similar amounts in respect of a Canadian income source. The principle that underlies subsection 212(13.2) is that if a non-resident has Canadian-source business or resource income, and can deduct in computing that income (strictly speaking, in computing "taxable income earned in Canada") a payment to another non-resident, that payment ought to be treated for purposes of Part XIII tax as though it had been made by a person resident in Canada. This is accomplished by treating the first non-resident — the one making the payment — as a person resident in Canada for those purposes.

In its current form, subsection 212(13.2) applies only if the non-resident making the payment carries on business principally in Canada, manufactures or processes goods in Canada or carries out any of various resource activities here. On the other hand, the rule does not explicitly link that business or activity to the deductibility of the payment; it can be read as applying whether or not the payment is made in relation to the particular business or activity.

Accordingly, subsection 212(13.2) is amended to apply in respect of any portion of a payment (other than one to which the generally comparable rule in subsection 212(13) applies) made by one non-resident person to another that is deductible in computing the first non-resident's taxable income earned in Canada from any source. The only exceptions are payments that are deductible in respect of treaty-protected businesses or treaty-protected properties (as defined in subsection 248(1)).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 14, 2003:

KPMG LLP, Montréal, Québec

Dear Mr. [xxx]

I am writing in response to your letter of February 25, 2003, to Lawrence Purdy of this Division. In that letter, you identify a concern with the effective date that has been proposed, in the December 2002 draft technical amendments, for a change to subsection 212(13.2) of the Income Tax Act. The question you raise is an important one, and I appreciate your patience in awaiting this reply.

Subsection 212(13.2) treats certain non-resident persons as though they were resident in Canada, for purposes of the non-resident withholding tax applied by Part XIII of the Act. Specifically, the provision in its current form applies to a non-resident person who either carries on business principally in Canada, manufactures or processes goods here, or extracts Canadian mineral or oil and gas resources, and makes a payment to another non-resident that is deductible in computing the payer's taxable income earned in Canada. Where it applies, the subsection deems the payer to be resident in Canada in respect of the payment, with the result that Part XIII tax may be required to be withheld.

The draft technical amendments released on December 20, 2002 propose to extend this deeming rule to any non-resident who pays to another non-resident an amount that is deductible in computing the payer's taxable income earned in Canada from a source that is neither a treaty-protected business nor a treaty-protected property. As a practical matter, this would make subsection 212(13.2) potentially applicable to any non-resident who carries on business in Canada — provided, in the case of a resident of a country with which Canada has a tax treaty, that the business is carried on through a Canadian permanent establishment.

I gather from your letter that you do not question the policy basis for this amendment, but rather its entry into force. As proposed, the amendment would apply to amounts paid or credited after December 20, 2002. You suggest that this may impose an inappropriate burden on a non-resident who was already obliged to pay to another non-resident an amount — such as interest — that will now attract withholding tax. Had it known when it negotiated the debt that withholding tax could apply, the borrower (who may be required to spare the lender any Canadian tax effect) might have structured the borrowing to conform to the exception in subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii), or might have borrowed from a Canadian lender. The alternative of renegotiating the loan now could be costly and difficult for both parties.

I agree that applying this measure in respect of debt obligations that are already outstanding could unduly inconvenience some taxpayers, and that a less abrupt entry into force would not be objectionable in policy terms. We will therefore recommend that the version of the amendment that is submitted to Parliament apply the change to amounts paid under obligations entered into after December 20, 2002.

While I can, as you know, offer no assurance that the Minister of Finance of Parliament as a whole will accept our recommendation, I trust that our intentions in this regard respond to your concerns.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 30, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in response to your letter of August 27, 2003, to Lawrence Purdy of this Division. In that letter you refer to a comfort letter dated May 14, 2003 regarding the December 2002 proposed amendment to subsection 212(13.2) of the Income Tax Act. In our May 14 letter we stated that we would recommend that the version of the amendment that is submitted to Parliament apply the change to amounts paid under obligations entered into after December 20, 2002. The specific example we responded to concerned a debt obligation. You have asked us to confirm that the proposed grandfathering will apply to any obligation entered into on or before December 20, 2002, and not be restricted to debt obligations.

We confirm that we intend to recommend that the proposed grandfathering apply to any obligation entered into on or before December 20, 2002, and not be restricted to debt obligations. Therefore, as set out in your letter, royalties paid to a non-resident corporation pursuant to a trademark licence agreement entered into on or before December 20, 2002 are not intended to be subject to the proposed amendment.

While we can, as you know, offer no assurance that the Minister of Finance or Parliament as a whole will accept our recommendations, we trust that our intentions in this regard respond to your concerns.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(b) the application in paragraph (13.1)(b) of the definition "Canadian partnership" in respect of a partnership interest held by the bank in the course of its Canadian banking business.

Proposed Amendment — 212(13.3) — Property held by authorized foreign bank

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 13, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in response to your letter of May 3, 2001 to James Greene, formerly of this Division, regarding the Income Tax Act's recently-enacted rules for the taxation of foreign bank branches. Although your letter raises several different questions, including matters of administration as well as of policy and legislative design, I understand from subsequent contacts with your colleague [xxx] that the most pressing issue for you and your clients at this time relates to non-resident withholding tax. I propose, therefore, in this reply to address only that point, reserving your other questions for further consideration.

On the issue of the obligation to withhold amounts on account of tax, you identify three areas of concern. The first is with respect to the payment by a resident of Canada to an authorized foreign bank of an amount, such as interest, that would ordinarily be subject to tax under Part XIII of the Act. Under new subsection 212(13.3) of the Act, the bank is deemed to be resident in Canada for this purpose — and the payer need not withhold tax — provided the interest is "in respect of (the bank's) Canadian banking business." You point out that it is not clear how the Canadian-resident payer will know whether this test is met, given that the payer can be expected to have only limited information about the bank's operations. You ask whether provisions comparable to Regulations 800 to 804 (which apply to non-resident insurers) might be contemplated, under which the bank itself, rather than those making payments to it, would be responsible for any tax arising under Part XIII.

A second, related point concerns the withholding obligations that may arise, under Part I of the Act and Regulation 105, in respect of payments made by a resident of Canada to an authorized foreign bank for services provided by the bank. Although there is no rule deeming the bank to be resident in Canada, many of the considerations that led to such a rule in the context of Part XIII tax are relevant here as well; the bank's business is carried on in Canada, and a person making a payment to the bank cannot always be presumed to know the details of the bank's situation.

Third, you ask whether we anticipate recommending that the withholding and clearance obligations under section 116 of the Act, which generally apply where a non-resident disposes of taxable Canadian property, not apply in respect of property held in an authorized foreign bank's Canadian banking business.

On each of these three points the current requirements, as they apply to the Canadian business of an authorized foreign bank, do seem in policy terms excessive. It is therefore our general intention to propose that the requirements be moderated. Although the details of any relieving proposals remain to be determined, the broad direction of our thinking is as follows. First, with respect to Part XIII taxation, it should be possible to provide that the payor's reasonable belief, or a presumption based on the payee's address, will suffice to relieve the payor from possible liability. A similar test could be applied for purposes of an exemption from the withholding requirements of Regulation 105 [see now Reg. 105(2)(b) — ed.]. Finally, the definition "excluded property" in section 116 could be expanded to cover property held by an authorized foreign bank in the course of carrying on its Canadian banking business: such a change could be made either in the statutory definition itself [this has been done: see 116(6)(f) — ed.] or in Regulation 810.

While our views on these points are subject to further refinement, and I can offer no assurance that the Minister will accept our recommendations, we expect that measures along the general lines I have described will be included in the next package of draft technical amendments. This is currently scheduled for release later this year. The changes would apply after June 27, 1999, to coincide with other aspects of the taxation rules for authorized foreign banks.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(i) 10 times the greatest amount determined, under the laws of the province or provinces in which the taxpayer is a registered securities dealer, to be the capital employed by the taxpayer at the end of the day, and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 139(18), will amend subpara. (b)(i) of the description of B in former subsec. 212(19) to read as above, applicable to securities lending arrangements entered into after May 28, 1993, but only until 212(19) was replaced effective Jan. 1, 2008 (per Bill C-28, S.C. 2007, c. 35, s. 97(1)).

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 212(19) imposes a tax on Canadian-resident registered securities dealers that enter into certain securities lending arrangements. The tax is calculated, by formula, based in part on the capital or the margin requirement of the relevant provincial laws governing the registration or license of securities dealers.

Subsection 212(19) was amended in 2007 consequential to the amendment to paragraph 212(1)(b). The 2007 amendment to subparagraph (b)(i) of the description of B in the formula in subsection 212(19), which specifies the applicable provincial legislation that govern the registration or license of securities dealers, ought to have applied from an earlier date. This amendment is therefore re-introduced with an earlier coming-into-force date.

(ii) 20 times the greatest amount of capital required under those laws to be maintained by the taxpayer as a margin in respect of securities described in clause (1)(b)(xii)(A) at the end of the day, and

and shall remit that amount to the Receiver General on or before the 15th day of the month after the month in which the day occurs.

The portion of subsec. 212(19) before the formula amended by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 73(3), applicable to securities lending arrangements entered into after May 28, 1993. That portion formerly read:

(19) Tax on securities traders — Every taxpayer resident in Canada who is registered or licensed under the laws of one or more provinces to trade in securities shall pay a tax under this Part equal to the amount determined by the formula

Subsec. 212(19) added by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 97(6), applicable to securities lending arrangements entered into after May 28, 1993.

(20) Designated SLA — For the purpose of subsection (19), a designated securities lending arrangement is a securities lending arrangement

(a) under which

(i) the lender is a prescribed financial institution or a registered securities dealer resident in Canada,

(ii) the particular security lent or transferred is an obligation described in paragraph (a) of the definition "fully exempt interest" in subsection (3) or an obligation of the government of any country, province, state, municipality or other political subdivision,

(iii) the amount of money provided to the lender at any time during the term of the arrangement either as collateral or as consideration for the particular security does not exceed 110% of the fair market value at that time of the particular security; and

(b) that was neither intended, nor made as a part of a series of securities lending arrangements, loans or other transactions that was intended, to be in effect for more than 270 days.

212.1 (1) Non-arm's length sales of shares by non-residents — If a non-resident person, a designated partnership or a non-resident-owned investment corporation (in this section referred to as the "non-resident person") disposes of shares (in this section referred to as the "subject shares") of any class of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada (in this section referred to as the "subject corporation") to another corporation resident in Canada (in this section referred to as the "purchaser corporation") with which the non-resident person does not (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) deal at arm's length and, immediately after the disposition, the subject corporation is connected (within the meaning that would be assigned by subsection 186(4) if the references in that subsection to "payer corporation" and "particular corporation" were read as "subject corporation" and "purchaser corporation", respectively) with the purchaser corporation,

(a) the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of any consideration (other than any share of the capital stock of the purchaser corporation) received by the non-resident person from the purchaser corporation for the subject shares exceeds the paid-up capital in respect of the subject shares immediately before the disposition shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be a dividend paid at the time of the disposition by the purchaser corporation to the non-resident person and received at that time by the non-resident person from the purchaser corporation; and

(b) in computing the paid-up capital at any particular time after March 31, 1977 of any particular class of shares of the capital stock of the purchaser corporation, there shall be deducted that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the increase, if any, by virtue of the disposition, in the paid-up capital, computed without reference to this section as it applies to the disposition, in respect of all of the shares of the capital stock of the purchaser corporation exceeds the amount, if any, by which

(i) the paid-up capital in respect of the subject shares immediately before the disposition

exceeds

(ii) the fair market value of the consideration described in paragraph (a),

that the increase, if any, by virtue of the disposition, in the paid-up capital, computed without reference to this section as it applies to the disposition, in respect of the particular class of shares is of the increase, if any, by virtue of the disposition, in the paid-up capital, computed without reference to this section as it applies to the disposition, in respect of all of the issued shares of the capital stock of the purchaser corporation.

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deemed by subsection 84(3), (4) or (4.1) to be a dividend on shares of the particular class paid after March 31, 1977 and before the particular time by the corporation and received by a non-resident-owned investment corporation or by a person who is not a corporation resident in Canada

(ii) the total that would be determined under subparagraph (i) if this Act were read without reference to paragraph (1)(b), and

(a) in respect of any disposition described in subsection (1) by a non-resident person of shares of the capital stock of a subject corporation to a purchaser corporation, the non-resident person shall, for greater certainty, be deemed not to deal at arm's length with the purchaser corporation if the non-resident person was,

(i) immediately before the disposition, one of a group of less than 6 persons that controlled the subject corporation, and

(ii) immediately after the disposition, one of a group of less than 6 persons that controlled the purchaser corporation, each member of which was a member of the group referred to in subparagraph (i);

(b) for the purposes of determining whether or not a particular non-resident person (in this paragraph referred to as the "taxpayer") referred to in paragraph (a) was a member of a group of less than 6 persons that controlled a corporation at any time, any shares of the capital stock of that corporation owned at that time by

(i) the taxpayer's child (within the meaning assigned by subsection 70(10)), who is under 18 years of age, or the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner,

(iii) a corporation may be controlled by a person or a particular group of persons notwithstanding that the corporation is also controlled or deemed to be controlled by another person or group of persons;

(e) a "designated partnership" means a partnership of which either a majority interest partner or every member of a majority interest group of partners (as defined in subsection 251.1(3)) is a non-resident person or a non-resident-owned investment corporation; and

212.2 (1) Application [demutualization surplus stripping] — This section applies where

(a) a taxpayer disposes at a particular time of a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada (or any property more than 10% of the fair market value of which can be attributed to shares of the capital stock of corporations resident in Canada) to

(i) a person resident in Canada,

(ii) a partnership in which any person resident in Canada has, directly or indirectly, an interest, or

(iii) a person or partnership that acquires the share or the property in the course of carrying on a business through a permanent establishment in Canada, as defined in the Income Tax Regulations;

(b) subsection 212.1(1) does not apply to the disposition;

(c) the taxpayer is non-resident at the particular time;

(d) it is reasonable to conclude that the disposition is part of an expected series of transactions or events that includes the issue after December 15, 1998 of a particular share of the capital stock of a particular insurance corporation resident in Canada on the demutualization (within the meaning assigned by subsection 139.1(1)) of the particular corporation and

(i) after the particular time, the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the particular share, or a share substituted for the particular share, by the particular corporation or the issuer of the substituted share, as the case may be,

(ii) after the particular time, an increase in the level of dividends declared or paid on the particular share or a share substituted for the particular share, or

(iii) the acquisition, at or after the particular time, of the particular share or a share substituted for the particular share by

(A) a person not dealing at arm's length with the particular corporation or with the issuer of the substituted share, as the case may be, or

(B) a partnership any direct or indirect interest in which is held by a person not dealing at arm's length with the particular corporation or with the issuer of the substituted share, as the case may be; and

(a) a taxable dividend is deemed to be paid at that time by the person or partnership to the taxpayer and received at the time by the taxpayer;

(b) the amount of the dividend is deemed to be equal to the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the portion of the proceeds of disposition of the property that can reasonably be attributed to the fair market value of shares of a class of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada,

B is the fair market value immediately before that time of shares of that class, and

C is the paid-up capital immediately before that time of that class of shares; and

Proposed Addition — 212.3

212.3 (1) Foreign affiliate dumping — conditions for application — Subsection (2) applies to an investment in a non-resident corporation (referred to in this section as the "subject corporation") that is made, at any time, by a corporation resident in Canada (referred to in this section as the "CRIC") if

(a) the subject corporation is, immediately after that time, or becomes, as part of a transaction or event or series of transactions or events that includes the investment, a foreign affiliate of the CRIC;

(b) the CRIC is at that time controlled by another non-resident corporation (referred to in this section as the "parent"); and

(c) the investment may not reasonably be considered to have been made by the CRIC, instead of being made or retained by the parent or another non-resident person that does not deal at arm's length with the parent, primarily for bona fide purposes other than to obtain a tax benefit (as defined in subsection 245(1)).

Related Provisions: 128.1(1)(c.3) — Foreign affiliate dumping — corporate immigration; 212.3(3) — Investment in subject corporation; 212.3(5) — Determining bona fide purpose; 212.3(6) — Indirect investment; 212.3(7) — Application to partnerships; 219.1(2) — Foreign affiliate dumping — corporate emigration; 248(10) — Series of transactions.

(2) Foreign affiliate dumping — consequences — If this subsection applies to an investment in a subject corporation,

(a) for the purposes of this Part, the CRIC is deemed to have paid to the parent at the time the investment was made, and the parent is deemed to have received from the CRIC at that time, a dividend equal to the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at that time, of any property (not including, for greater certainty, shares of the capital stock of the CRIC) transferred, or obligation assumed or incurred, by the CRIC in respect of the investment; and

(b) in computing the paid-up capital at any time on or after Budget Day of any class of shares of the capital stock of the CRIC, there is to be deducted the amount of any increase, because of the investment, in the paid-up capital in respect of the shares of the class, computed without reference to this section.

Related Provisions: 212.3(1) — Application of 212.3(2).

(3) Investment in subject corporation — For the purposes of this section, an investment made in a subject corporation by a CRIC means any of

(a) an acquisition of shares of the capital stock of the subject corporation by the CRIC;

(b) a contribution of capital to the subject corporation by the CRIC;

(c) a transaction under which an amount became owing by the subject corporation to the CRIC, other than an amount owing that arises in the ordinary course of the business of the CRIC and that is repaid within a commercially reasonable period;

(d) an acquisition of a debt obligation of the subject corporation by the CRIC from another person, other than, if the acquisition was made in the ordinary course of the business of the CRIC, an acquisition from a person with which the CRIC dealt, at the time of the acquisition, at arm's length;

(e) an acquisition by the CRIC of an option in respect of, or an interest in, or for civil law a right in, shares of the capital stock, or a debt obligation, of the subject corporation; and

(f) any transaction or event that is similar in effect to any of the transactions described in paragraphs (a) to (e).

Related Provisions: 212.3(6) — Indirect investment.

(4) Multiple controllers — For the purposes of this section and paragraph 128.1(1)(c.3), a CRIC that is controlled by more than one non-resident corporation is deemed not to be controlled by any such non-resident that controls another non-resident corporation that controls the CRIC, unless the application of this subsection would otherwise result in no non-resident corporation controlling the CRIC.

(5) Bona fide purpose — primary factors — In determining whether paragraph (1)(c) applies, the following factors are to be given primary consideration:

(a) whether the business activities carried on by the subject corporation and any other corporation in which the subject corporation has, at the time referred to in subsection (1), an equity percentage (as defined in subsection 95(4)) are at that time, and are expected to remain, more closely connected to the business activities carried on by the CRIC (or by a corporation resident in Canada that is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of the CRIC or that is a corporation of which the CRIC is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation) than to the business activities carried on by any non-resident corporation (other than the subject corporation or any corporation in which the subject corporation has such an equity percentage) with which the CRIC, at that time, does not deal at arm's length;

(b) whether the terms or conditions of any shares of the subject corporation that are owned by the CRIC at that time, or any agreement in respect of the shares or their issue, are such that the CRIC does not fully participate in the profits of the subject corporation or any appreciation in the value of the subject corporation (for greater certainty, the fact that the shares owned by the CRIC do fully participate in the profits of the subject corporation and any appreciation in the value of the subject corporation is not a relevant factor);

(c) whether the investment was made at the direction or request of a non-resident corporation with which the CRIC was not, at that time, dealing at arm's length;

(d) whether, in the case of an investment described in paragraph (3)(a), (d), (e) or (f), negotiations with the vendor in respect of the investment were initiated by senior officers of the CRIC who were resident in, and worked principally in, Canada or, if the vendor initiated the transaction, the vendor's principal point of contact was an officer of the CRIC who was resident in, and worked principally in, Canada;

(e) whether senior officers of the CRIC who were resident in, and worked principally in, Canada had and exercised the principal decision-making authority in respect of the making of the investment, and have and exercise the principal decision making authority in respect of the investment;

(f) whether the performance evaluation or compensation of senior officers of the CRIC who are resident in, and work principally in, Canada is connected to the results of operations of the subject corporation to a greater extent than the performance evaluation or compensation of any senior officers of a non-resident corporation (other than the subject corporation or a corporation controlled by the subject corporation) that does not deal at arm's length with the CRIC is so connected; and

(g) whether senior officers of the subject corporation report to, and are functionally accountable to, senior officers of the CRIC who are resident in, and work principally in, Canada to a greater extent than to any senior officers of any non-resident corporation (other than the subject corporation) that does not deal at arm's length with the CRIC.

(6) Indirect investment — A particular investment by a CRIC in a subject corporation that would, in the absence of this subsection, be excluded from the application of subsection (2) because of paragraph (1)(c) is not to be so excluded to the extent that one or more properties, if any, received by the subject corporation from the CRIC as a result of the particular investment, or property substituted for any such property, may reasonably be considered to have been used by the subject corporation, directly or indirectly as part of a transaction or event or series of transactions or events that includes the particular investment, to make another investment in a non-resident corporation that would, if the other investment had been made by the CRIC, have been subject to subsection (2).

(7) Partnerships — For the purposes of this section, paragraph 128.1(1)(c.3) and subsection 219.1(2)

(a) any transaction entered into by a partnership is deemed to have been entered into by each member of the partnership in proportion to the fair market value of the member's direct or indirect interest in the partnership;

(b) property that would, in the absence of this paragraph, be owned by a partnership is deemed to be owned by each member of the partnership in proportion to the fair market value of the member's direct or indirect interest in the partnership; and

(c) amounts that would, in the absence of this paragraph, be owing by a partnership are deemed to be owed by each member of the partnership in proportion to the fair market value of the member's direct or indirect interest in the partnership.

Application: The March 29, 2012 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Federal Budget), cl. (38), will add s. 212.3, applicable in respect of transactions or events that occur after March 28, 2012. Cl. (39) reads as follows:

(39) That paragraph (38) not apply to a transaction that occurs before 2013 between persons that deal at arm's length and that are obligated to complete the transaction pursuant to the terms of an agreement in writing between the persons that was entered into before March 29, 2012. A person will be considered not to be obligated to complete a transaction if the person may be excused from completing the transaction as a result of amendments to the Act.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 29, 2012: Foreign Affiliate Dumping

The Government strongly supports cross-border trade and investment. However, it is important to ensure that cross-border investment is not used as a tool to erode the corporate tax base. The Advisory Panel on Canada's System of International Taxation (the Advisory Panel) [www.apesit-gcrcfi.ca; see Possible Future Amendments box under s. 90 — ed.] identified certain types of foreign affiliate "dumping" transactions as being abusive: such transactions reduce the Canadian tax base without providing any significant economic benefit to Canadians. The Advisory Panel recommended that a targeted measure be introduced to curtail these transactions while ensuring that bona fide business transactions are not affected.

Foreign affiliate dumping transactions often involve a Canadian subsidiary using borrowed funds to acquire shares of a foreign affiliate from its foreign parent corporation. These transactions are carried out in the expectation that interest paid by the Canadian subsidiary on such borrowed money is deductible in computing income for tax purposes while, at the same time, most dividends received by the Canadian subsidiary on the shares of the foreign affiliate are exempt from taxation, resulting in the erosion of the Canadian corporate tax base. The thin capitalization rules, including the amendments proposed in this Budget, do not provide adequate protection against these transactions.

The Government also has concerns with variations of these transactions, including, for example:

- acquisitions of shares of a foreign affiliate that are made with internal funds of the Canadian subsidiary — such transactions provide a mechanism for foreign parent corporations to extract earnings from their Canadian subsidiaries free of Canadian dividend withholding tax;
- acquisitions of newly-issued shares of a foreign affiliate, whether financed with internal or borrowed funds, where previously-issued shares of the foreign affiliate are owned by the foreign parent or another non-resident member of the same corporate group;
- acquisitions of foreign affiliate shares from a foreign subsidiary of the foreign parent; and
- acquisitions of foreign affiliate shares from an arm's length party at the request of the foreign parent.

Although existing anti-avoidance rules in the Income Tax Act may apply in some cases to foreign affiliate dumping transactions, immediate action is being taken to discourage such transactions from being undertaken in the future.

Consistent with the Advisory Panel's recommendation, Budget 2012 proposes to implement a measure that will curtail foreign affiliate dumping while at the same time preserving the ability of Canadian subsidiaries of foreign parents to undertake legitimate expansions of their Canadian-based businesses. This measure proposes that, where certain conditions are met, a dividend will be deemed to be paid by a Canadian subsidiary to its foreign parent [212.3(2)(a) — ed.] to the extent of any non-share consideration given by the Canadian subsidiary for the acquisition of the shares of a foreign affiliate. Any deemed dividend will be subject to non-resident withholding tax [212(2) — ed.], as reduced by any applicable tax treaty [Art. 10 — ed.]. It further proposes to disregard the paid-up capital of any shares of the Canadian subsidiary that are given as consideration [213.(2)(b) — ed.]. This measure effectively extends an existing cross-border surplus stripping rule to cover transactions involving foreign affiliates.

This measure will not apply to transactions that meet a "business purpose" test [212.3(1)(c) — ed.]. The primary factors to consider in applying this test are non-tax factors that will be set out in the Income Tax Act and explained further in the accompanying explanatory notes. In general, the factors are intended to assist in determining whether it is reasonable to conclude that the investment in, and ownership of, the foreign affiliate belongs in the Canadian subsidiary more than in any other entity in the foreign parent's group. If it is reasonable to so conclude, then this measure will not apply. The Government recognizes that distinguishing between foreign affiliate dumping transactions and transactions that are undertaken with a view to the legitimate expansion of a Canadian-based business is not straightforward. Accordingly, to assist with the finalization of the legislation to implement this measure, the Government invites stakeholders to submit comments concerning the details of the proposed "business purpose" test, as set out in the Notice of Ways and Means Motion for this measure, before June 1, 2012.

This measure will apply to transactions that occur on or after March 29, 2012, other than transactions that occur before 2013 between parties that deal at arm's length and that are obligated to complete the transaction pursuant to the terms of an agreement in writing between the parties that is entered into before March 29, 2012. A party will be considered not to be obligated to complete a transaction if the party may be excused from completing the transaction as a result of amendments to the Income Tax Act.

Proposed Amendment — 215(1)

215. (1) Withholding and remittance of tax — When a person pays, credits or provides, or is deemed to have paid, credited or provided, an amount on which an income tax is payable under this Part, or would be so payable if this Act were read without reference to subparagraph 94(3)(a)(viii) and to subsection 216.1(1), the person shall, notwithstanding any agreement or law to the contrary, deduct or withhold from it the amount of the tax and forthwith remit that amount to the Receiver General on behalf of the non-resident person on account of the tax and shall submit with the remittance a statement in prescribed form.

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), s. 18, will amend subsec. 215(1) to read as above, applicable to trust taxation years that end after 2006, and to each earlier taxation year of a trust to which subsec. 94(3), as amended, applies.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 215(1) provides that, where a resident of Canada pays or is deemed to pay an amount to a non-resident person in respect of which the non-resident person is liable for withholding tax under Part XIII, the payer is required to withhold the tax from the amount and remit it to the Receiver General on behalf of the non-resident.

Subsection 215(1) is amended to ensure that, where an amount is paid or credited (or deemed to be paid or credited) to a trust that is deemed, by paragraph 94(3)(a), to be resident in Canada for the purpose of determining the trust's liability for tax under Part XIII, the payer is required to withhold the tax that would otherwise be payable by the trust and to remit it to the Receiver General.

For more detail on the application of Part XIII to trusts deemed, under paragraph 94(3)(a), to be resident in Canada, and to payers of amounts to such trusts, see the commentary on subsection 94(3) and (4) and subsections 104(7.01) and 216(4.1).

This amendment applies to trust taxation years that end after 2006. It also applies to each earlier taxation year of a trust if new subsection 94(3) applies (because of a valid election by the trust under the coming-into-force provision for new section 94) to that earlier taxation year.

Related Provisions: 94(3)(a)(ix), 94(4)(c) — Application of rule deeming non-resident trust to be resident in Canada; 215(1.1) — Limitation on requirement to withhold tax on corporate immigration; 215(5) — Regulations reducing deduction or withholding; 215(6) — Liability for tax; 227 — Withholding taxes — administration and enforcement; 227.1 — Liability of directors; 248(7)(b)(i) — Remittance deemed made when received.

History: Subsec. 215(1) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 174(1), applicable to amounts paid, credited or provided after 2000. It formerly read:

> (1) Deduction and payment of tax — When a person pays or credits or is deemed to have paid or credited an amount on which an income tax is payable under this Part, the person shall, notwithstanding any agreement or law to the contrary, deduct or withhold therefrom the amount of the tax and forthwith remit that amount to the Receiver General on behalf of the non-resident person on account of the tax and shall submit therewith a statement in prescribed form.

On so filing and without affecting the liability of the non-resident person for tax otherwise payable under Part I, the non-resident person is, in lieu of paying tax under this Part on that amount, liable to pay tax under Part I for the year as though

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 141(1), will amend the opening words of subsec. 216(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 216 allows a non-resident person to file a return of income under Part I in respect of rent on real property in Canada or timber royalties and to pay, instead of the non-resident withholding tax under Part XIII, tax under Part I on the basis of the non-resident's income from the rent or royalties.

Subsection 216(1), which provides the basic rule permitting a non-resident to be taxed under Part I of the Act on this income, is amended to improve its structure and language. Most of the changes are stylistic; the amendment also updates the subsection's reference to the form of the non-resident's Part I tax return, to reflect the implementation of a special return for these non-residents.

(a) the non-resident person were a person resident in Canada and not exempt from tax under section 149;

(b) the non-resident person's income from the non-resident person's interest in real property in Canada, timber resource properties and timber limits in Canada and the non-resident person's share of the income of a partnership of which the non-resident person was a member from its interest in real property in Canada, timber resource properties and timber limits in Canada were the non-resident person's only income;

Proposed Amendment — 216(1)(b)

(b) the non-resident person's income from the non-resident person's interest in real property, or real right in immovables, in Canada and interest in, or for civil law right in, timber resource properties and timber limits in Canada, and the non-resident person's share of the income of a partnership of which the non-resident person was a member from its interest in real property, or real right in immovables, in Canada and interest in, or for civil law right in, timber resource properties and timber limits in Canada, were the non-resident person's only income;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), subsec. 245(1), will amend para. 216(1)(b) to read as above, to come into force on Royal Assent.

(c) the non-resident person were entitled to no deductions from income for the purpose of computing the non-resident person's taxable income; and

(d) the non-resident person were entitled to no deductions under sections 118 to 118.9 in computing the non-resident person's tax payable under Part I for the year.

Possible Future Amendment — Requirement for non-resident to post security

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 17, 1996:

Mr. Donald H. Watkins, Chair, Taxation Section, The Canadian Bar Association

Mr. Robert Spindler, C.A., Chair, Taxation Committee, Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants

Dear Messrs. Watkins and Spindler:

At our recent meeting we discussed the possibility of revising the Canadian income tax rules governing the taxation of rental income earned by non-resident owners of Canadian real estate. This letter outlines a proposal that would, if implemented, place the risk of a non-resident's non-compliance with the Canadian tax system on the non-resident rather than the non-resident's Canadian property agent.

In general, Part XIII of the Income Tax Act levies a withholding tax of 25% on rental payments made by Canadians to non-resident owners of Canadian real property. Where the non-resident collects the rent through a Canadian agent (who is typically a building or property manager), the agent is responsible for ensuring that 25% of the gross rental payments are remitted to Revenue Canada. An exception to this general rule exists where a non-resident elects, under section 216 of the Act, to file a Canadian income tax return in respect of the rental income and pay tax on the net property income.

To make the election the non-resident and the non-resident's Canadian agent are required to provide an undertaking to Revenue Canada to file an income tax return for the rental income within six months of the end of the relevant year. Where an election is made, the rule requiring the Canadian agent to remit 25% of the gross rental payments to Revenue Canada does not apply; instead, only 25% of the net amount of rent received by the agent need be remitted. However, if the non-resident fails to either file an income tax return or pay his tax liability within the time required under the election, the Canadian agent becomes liable for the amount that the agent would ordinarily have been required to withhold under Part XIII of the Act (ie., 25% of the gross rental payments) less the amount of tax actually remitted. The non-resident's tax liability is placed on the Canadian agent in an attempt to protect the government from the loss of any tax revenue arising from the non-resident's failure to pay the required tax. This mechanism is necessary because, in practice, it would be very difficult to enforce a tax liability on non-resident property owners.

We are considering alternatives to the current system which may reduce the liability of Canadian agents while at the same time protecting Canada's tax base. To achieve these objectives, we are prepared to consider a system which would require non-resident property owners to post security with Revenue Canada in order to take advantage of the election to file an income tax return and avoid having tax withheld on the gross amount of the rental payments. Where the non-resident fails to pay the required amount of tax within the specified time, the government would be able to look to the security; accordingly, the Canadian agent's exposure to tax could be reduced. In this context, acceptable security could be similar to that which is required under section 116 of the Act.

Finance is not, however, committed to this proposal; it remains our view that the current system works reasonably well from the government's viewpoint, and implementation of the alternative proposal would be considered only if it were thought to provide a better system from the taxpayer's perspective. This alternative has been outlined to a number of real estate organizations and other interested parties from whom we hope to gather comments over the course of the coming months.

I would also note that at our recent meeting you raised the possibility of considering changes to the existing time limits for filing a Part I income tax return under subsection 216(4). We would be pleased to receive written comments on your suggestion for modifying those time limits or on the alternative system outlined above.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber, Director, Tax Legislation Division

History: Subsec. 216(4) amended by 1998, c. 19, s. 217, applicable to amounts paid or credited after November 1991. Subsec. 216(4) formerly read:

(4) Where a non-resident person or each non-resident person who is a member of a partnership has filed with the Minister an undertaking in prescribed form to file a return of income under Part I for a taxation year as permitted by this section but within 6 months from the end of the taxation year, a person who is otherwise required by subsection 215(3) to remit in the year an amount to the Receiver General in payment of tax on rent on real property or in payment of tax on a timber royalty may elect, by virtue of this section, not to remit under that subsection but if the [elector] does so elect

(a) the [elector] shall, when any amount is available out of the rent or royalty received for remittance to the non-resident person or the partnership, as the case may be, deduct therefrom 25% thereof and remit the amount deducted to the Receiver General on behalf of the non-resident person or the partnership on account of the tax under this Part, and

(b) the [elector] shall, if the non-resident person or each non-resident person who is a member of the partnership

(i) does not file a return for the taxation year in accordance with the undertaking filed by the non-resident person or member with the Minister, or

(ii) does not pay the tax the non-resident person or member is liable to pay for the taxation year under this section within the time limited for payment, pay to the Receiver General, on the expiration of the time for filing or payment, as the case may be, the full amount that the [elector] would otherwise have been required to remit in the year minus the amounts that the [elector] has remitted in the year under paragraph (a).

Forms: NR6: Undertaking to file an income tax return by a non-resident receiving rent from real property or receiving a timber royalty; T1159: Income tax return for electing under s. 216; T2 SCH 97: Additional information on non-resident corporations in Canada; T4144: Income tax guide for electing under section 216.

Proposed Addition — 216(4.1)

(4.1) Optional method of payment — If a trust is deemed by subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada for a taxation year for the purpose of computing the trust's income for the year, a person who is otherwise required by subsection 215(3) to remit in the year, in respect of the trust, an amount to the Receiver General in payment of tax on rent on real or immovable property or on a timber royalty may elect in prescribed form filed with the Minister under this subsection not to remit under subsection 215(3) in respect of amounts received after the election is made, and if that election is made, the elector shall,

(a) when any amount is available out of the rent or royalty received for remittance to the trust, deduct 25% of the amount available and remit the amount deducted to the Receiver General on behalf of the trust on account of the trust's tax under Part I; and

(b) if the trust does not file a return for the year as required by section 150, or does not pay the tax that the trust is liable to pay under Part I for the year within the time required by that Part, on the expiration of the time for filing or payment, as the case may be, pay to the Receiver General, on account of the trust's tax under Part I, the amount by which the full amount that the elector would otherwise have been required to remit in the year in respect of the rent or royalty exceeds the amounts that the elector has remitted in the year under paragraph (a) in respect of the rent or royalty.

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), s. 19, will add subsec. 216(4.1), applicable to trust taxation years that end after 2006, except that

(a) it also applies to each earlier taxation year of a trust to which subsec. 94(3), as amended, applies; and

(b) an election referred to in subsec. 216(4.1) is deemed to have been filed with the Minister of National Revenue on a timely basis if it is filed with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the trust's filing-due date for the taxation year of the trust that includes the day on which this draft legislation is assented to.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): In general, Part XIII of the Act imposes a withholding tax of 25% on rental payments made by Canadians to non-resident owners of Canadian real property. An exception to this general rule exists where a non-resident chooses, under subsection 216(4), to file a Canadian income tax return in respect of the rental income and timber royalty income and pay tax on the net amount of such income. Where the conditions of subsection 216(4) are satisfied, the rule requiring a Canadian payer (or agent of the payee pursuant to s. 215(3)) to remit 25% of the gross payment to the Receiver General does not apply; instead, only 25% of the net amount of income received by the non-resident's agent need be remitted.

Although an otherwise non-resident trust to which paragraph 94(3)(a) applies is deemed resident in Canada for the purposes of determining the trust's liability under Part XIII on amounts paid or credited to the trust, for the purpose of determining the liability of a Canadian payer on amounts paid or credited to the trust, the trust is effectively treated as non-resident (see paragraph 94(4)(c) and section 215).

Subsection 216(4.1) is introduced to provide a measure of relief in these circumstances. Under that subsection, if a trust is deemed by subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada for a taxation year for the purpose of computing the trust's income for the year, a person who is otherwise required by subsection 215(3) to remit in the year, in respect of the trust, an amount to the Receiver General in payment of tax on rent on real property or on a timber royalty may elect in prescribed form filed with the Minister under subsection 216(4.1) not to remit under subsection 215(3) in respect of amounts received after the election is made. Under paragraphs 216(4.1)(a) and (b), if that election is made, the elector is required to,

- when any amount is available out of the rent or royalty received for remittance to the trust, deduct 25% of the amount available and remit the amount deducted to the Receiver General on behalf of the trust on account of the trust's tax under Part I; and
- if the trust does not file a return for the year as required by section 150, or does not pay the tax that the trust is liable to pay under Part I for the year within the time required by that Part, on the expiration of the later of the time for filing or payment, as the case may be, pay to the Receiver General, on account of the trust's tax under Part I, the amount by which the full amount that the elector would otherwise have been required to remit in the year in respect of the rent or royalty exceeds the amounts that the elector has remitted in the year under paragraph 216(4.1)(a) in respect of the rent or royalty.

This amendment applies to trust taxation years that end after 2006. It also applies to each earlier taxation year of a trust if new subsection 94(3) applies (because of a valid election by the trust under the coming-into-force provision for new section 94) to that earlier taxation year. An election referred to in new subsection 216(4.1) is deemed to have been filed with the Minister on a timely basis if it is filed on or before the trust's filing-due date for the taxation year of the trust that includes the day on which the new rules are assented to.

(5) Disposition by non-resident of interest in real property, timber resource property or timber limit — Where a person or a trust of which that person is a beneficiary has filed a return of income under Part I for a taxation year as permitted by this section or as required by section 150 and, in computing the amount of the person's income under Part I an amount has been deducted under paragraph 20(1)(a), or is deemed by subsection 107(2) to have been allowed under that paragraph, in respect of real property in Canada, a timber resource property or a timber limit in Canada, the person shall, within the time prescribed by section 150 for filing a return of income under Part I, file a return of income under Part I, in the form prescribed for a person resident in Canada, for any subsequent taxation year in which the person was a non-resident person and in which that real property, timber resource property or timber limit or any interest therein is disposed of, within the meaning of section 13, by the person or by a partnership of which the person is a member, and the person shall, without affecting the person's liability for tax otherwise payable under Part I, thereupon be liable, in lieu of paying tax under this Part on any amount paid, or deemed by this Part to have been paid to the person or to a partnership of which the person is a member in that subsequent taxation year in respect of any interest in real property, timber resource property or timber limit in Canada, to pay tax under Part I for that subsequent taxation year as though

Proposed Amendment — 216(5) opening words

(5) Disposition by non-resident — If a person or a trust under which a person is a beneficiary has filed a return of income under Part I for a taxation year as permitted by this section or as required by section 150 and, in computing the amount of the person's income under Part I an amount has been deducted under paragraph 20(1)(a), or is deemed by subsection 107(2) to have been allowed under that paragraph, in respect of property that is real property in Canada — or an interest therein — or an immovable in Canada — or a real right therein — , a timber resource property or a timber limit in Canada, the person shall file a return of income under Part I in prescribed form on or before the person's filing-due date for any subsequent taxation year in which the person is non-resident and in which the person, or a partnership of which the person is a member, disposes of that property or any interest, or for civil law any right, in it. On so filing and without affecting the person's liability for tax otherwise payable under Part I, the person is, in lieu of paying tax under this Part on any amount paid, or deemed by this Part to have been paid, in that subsequent taxation year in respect of any interest in, or for civil law any right in, that property to the person or to a partnership of which the person is a member, liable to pay tax under Part I for that subsequent taxation year as though

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 141(2), will amend the opening words of subsec. 216(5) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): In general terms, subsection 216(5) requires that a person who has previously made an election under subsection 216(1), and who has claimed capital cost allowance in computing income under the subsection, must file a return of income for the year in which the property that was the subject of the election is disposed of. Subsection 216(5) is modified in the same manner as subsection 216(1), again with the main change being an updated description of the relevant form.

(a) the person were a person resident in Canada and not exempt from tax under section 149;

(b) the person's income from the person's interest in real property, timber resource property or timber limits in Canada and the person's share of the income of a partnership of which the person was a member from its interest in real property, timber resource property or timber limits in Canada were the person's only income;

Proposed Amendment — 216(5)(b)

(b) the person's income from the person's interest in real property, or real right in immovables, in Canada or interest in, or for civil law right in, timber resource properties and timber limits in Canada, and the person's share of the income of a partnership of which the person was a member from its interest in real property, or real right in immovables, in Canada or interest in, or for civil law right in, timber resource properties and timber limits in Canada, were the person's only income;

(6) Saving provision — Subsection (5) does not apply to require a non-resident person

(a) to file a return of income under Part I for a taxation year unless, by filing that return, there would be included in computing the non-resident person's income under Part I for that year an amount by virtue of section 13; or

(b) to include in computing the non-resident person's income for a taxation year any amount to the extent that that amount has been included in computing the non-resident person's taxable income earned in Canada for that taxation year by virtue of any provision of this Act other than subsection (5).

(7) Election — Where, by virtue of subsection (5), a non-resident person is liable to pay tax under Part I for a taxation year, for greater certainty section 61 is not applicable in computing the non-resident person's income for the year.

Proposed Repeal — 216(7)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 141(3), will repeal subsec. 216(7), in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 216(7) provides that the rules in section 61 of the Act, dealing with income averaging annuity contracts, do not apply in computing a non-resident person's income for a taxation year in respect of which subsection 216(5) applies to the person. Since section 61 is no longer relevant to any current transaction, subsection 216(7) is repealed.

(8) Restriction on deduction — For greater certainty, in determining the amount of tax payable by a non-resident person under Part I for a taxation year by reason of subsection (1) or (5), no deduction in computing the non-resident person's income or tax payable under Part I for the year shall be made to the extent that such a deduction by non-resident persons is not permitted under Part I.

"assessable distribution", in respect of a Canadian property mutual fund investment, means the portion of any amount that is paid or credited (otherwise than as a SIFT trust wind-up event), by the mutual fund that issued the investment, to a non-resident investor who holds the investment, and that is not otherwise subject to tax under Part I or Part XIII.

Related Provisions: 53(2)(h)(i.1)(B)(III) — Assessable distribution not deducted from adjusted cost base of capital interest in trust.

History: The definition "assessable distribution" in subsec. 218.3(1) amended by 2009, c. 2, s. 74, applicable after July 14, 2008. It formerly read:

> "assessable distribution", in respect of a Canadian property mutual fund investment, means the portion of any amount that is paid or credited, by the mutual fund that issued the investment, to a non-resident investor who holds the investment, and that is not otherwise subject to tax under Part I or Part XIII.

Regulations: 202(1)(f) (information return required).

"Canadian property mutual fund investment" means a share of the capital stock of a mutual fund corporation, or a unit of a mutual fund trust, if

(a) the share or unit is listed on a designated stock exchange; and

(b) more than 50% of the fair market value of the share or unit is attributable to one or more properties each of which is real property in Canada, a Canadian resource property or a timber resource property.

History: Para. (a) of the definition "Canadian property mutual fund investment" in subsec. 218.3(1) amended to substitute "designated stock exchange" for "prescribed stock exchange" by 2007, c. 35, para. 68(2)(o), applicable after December 13, 2007.

"Canadian property mutual fund loss" — of a non-resident investor for a taxation year for which the non-resident investor has filed, on or before their filing-due date for the taxation year, a return of income under this Part in prescribed form, in respect of a Canadian property mutual fund investment — means the lesser of

(a) the non-resident investor's loss (for greater certainty as determined under section 40) for the taxation year from the disposition of the Canadian property mutual fund investment, and

(b) the total of all assessable distributions that were paid or credited on the Canadian property mutual fund investment after the non-resident investor last acquired the investment and at or before the time of the disposition.

"non-resident investor" means a non-resident person or a partnership other than a Canadian partnership.

"unused Canadian property mutual fund loss", of a non-resident investor for a taxation year, means the portion of the total of the non-resident investor's Canadian mutual fund property losses for preceding taxation years that has neither reduced under subsection (3) the amount of tax payable, nor increased under subsection (5) the amount of a refund of tax paid, under this Part for any preceding taxation year.

(2) Tax payable — If at any time a person (referred to in this section as the "payer") pays or credits, to a non-resident investor who holds a Canadian property mutual fund investment, an amount as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, an assessable distribution,

(a) the non-resident investor is deemed for the purposes of this Act, other than section 150, to have disposed at that time, for proceeds equal to the amount of the assessable distribution, of a property

(i) that is a taxable Canadian property the adjusted cost base of which to the non-resident investor immediately before that time is nil, and

(ii) that is in all other respects identical to the Canadian property mutual fund investment;

(b) the non-resident investor is liable to pay an income tax of 15% on the amount of any gain (for greater certainty as determined under section 40) from the disposition; and

(c) the payer shall, notwithstanding any agreement or law to the contrary,

(i) deduct or withhold 15% from the amount paid or credited,

(ii) immediately remit that amount to the Receiver General on behalf of the non-resident investor on account of the tax, and

(iii) submit with the remittance a statement in prescribed form.

(a) the total of the non-resident investor's gains under subsection (2) for the taxation year

exceeds

(b) the total of the non-resident investor's Canadian property mutual fund losses for the year and the non-resident investor's unused Canadian property mutual fund loss for the taxation year.

(5) Refund — The amount, if any, by which the total of all amounts paid on account of a non-resident investor's tax under subsection (3) for a taxation year exceeds the non-resident investor's liability for tax under this Part for the taxation year shall be refunded to the non-resident investor.

(6) Excess loss — carryback — If a non-resident investor files, on or before their filing-due date for a taxation year, a return of income under this Part in prescribed form for the taxation year, the Minister shall refund to the non-resident investor an amount equal to the lesser of

(a) the total amount of tax under this Part paid by the non-resident investor in each of the three preceding taxation years, to the extent that the Minister has not previously refunded that tax, and

(b) 15% of the amount, if any, by which

(7) Ordering — In applying subsection (6), amounts of tax are to be considered to be refunded in the order in which they were paid.

(8) Partnership filing-due date — For the purposes of this Part, the taxation year of a partnership is its fiscal period and the filing-due date for the taxation year is to be determined as if the partnership were a corporation.

(9) Partnership — member resident in Canada — If a non-resident investor is a partnership a member of which is resident in Canada, the portion of the tax paid by the partnership under this Part in respect of an assessable distribution paid or credited to the partnership in a particular taxation year of the partnership (or, if the partnership files a return of income for the particular taxation year in accordance with subsection (3), the portion of the tax paid by the partnership under that subsection for the taxation year) that can reasonably be considered to be the member's share is deemed

(a) to be an amount paid on account of that member's liability for tax under Part I for that member's taxation year in which the particular taxation year of the partnership ends; and

(b) except for the purposes of this subsection, to be neither a tax paid on account of the partnership's tax under this Part nor a tax paid by the partnership.

Proposed Addition — 220(2.2)

(2.2) Exception — Subsection (2.1) does not apply in respect of a prescribed form, receipt or document, or prescribed information, that is filed with the Minister on or after the day specified, in respect of the form, receipt, document or information, in subsection 37(11) or paragraph (m) of the definition "investment tax credit" in subsection 127(9).

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 142(1), will add subsec. 220(2.2), applicable in respect of a prescribed form, receipt and document, and prescribed information, filed with the Minister of National Revenue after November 16, 2005 other than a prescribed form, receipt or document, or prescribed information, in respect of which the Minister has received, before November 17, 2005, a request made in writing that the Minister waive the filing requirements in subsec. 37(11) and para. (m) of the definition "investment tax credit" in subsec. 127(9) that apply, but for any waiver, to the expenditures to which the prescribed form, receipt or document, or prescribed information, relates.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Under subsection 220(2.1), if a provision of the Act or the Regulations requires a person to file a prescribed form, receipt or other document, or to provide prescribed information, the Minister may waive the requirement, but the document or information shall be provided at the Minister's request.

New subsection 220(2.2) provides that subsection 220(2.1) does not extend to a prescribed form, receipt, document or information, or prescribed information, that is filed on or after the day specified — in respect of the form, receipt, document or information — in subsection 37(11) or paragraph (m) of the definition "investment tax credit" in subsection 127(9). Those provisions provide, in general, that a taxpayer's claim for SR&ED treatment be made in a prescribed form that must be received by the Minister no later than 12 months after the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxation year in which the expenditures were made.

The effect of new subsection 220(2.2) is that a person cannot deduct a scientific research and experimental development (SR&ED) expenditure under section 37, or claim an investment tax credit in respect of an expenditure, if the person takes more than the additional 12 months allowed to make a claim with the Minister.

Backgrounder

[For first portion of Backgrounder, see under 143.3 — ed.]

Late Claims for Tax Incentives

To be eligible for the SR&ED tax incentives and investment tax credits, taxpayers are required under the tax law to identify eligible expenditures on a prescribed form that is to be filed with the Minister of National Revenue no later than 12 months after the filing-due date for the tax return in respect of the taxation year in which the expenditures were made. This rule was first announced in the 1994 budget, and was added to stem a significant increase at that time in late claims for SR&ED tax incentives. The rule also applies to claims related to other amounts eligible for investment tax credits. However, under the Income Tax Act, the Minister of National Revenue does have the discretion to waive this deadline.

The ability to waive the 12-month filing deadline has come under increasing pressure as taxpayers have sought to file additional claims. The proposed amendments clarify with certainty that there will be no exception to the 12-month filing deadline for applications for investment tax credits and SR&ED treatment.

(3) Extensions for returns — The Minister may at any time extend the time for making a return under this Act.

Related Provisions: 127.4(5.1) — Authorization for late LSVCC investments; 146(22) — Authorization for late RRSP contributions; 220(3.2) — Late filing of elections.

(3) The Minister may at any time extend the time for making a return under this Act. However, the extension does not apply for the purpose of calculating a penalty that a person is liable to pay under section 162 if the person fails to make the return within the period of the extension.

Subsec. 220(3) amended by 2003, c. 15, s. 129, applicable in respect of extensions granted after February 18, 2003. The subsec. formerly read:
